Read The Ads Win A Prize

If you could go into one of the well known Appleton jewelry stores and pick out some article valued at ten dollars, have the clerk wrap it up for you, and then you could take home this object, and know full well that you would not get a bill for it at the first of the next month, wouldn't you be tickled? Yes, certainly,—so would we.

Well, someone in Appleton is going to have a chance to do just that very thing in less than a month from now, and someone else is going to have the opportunity of going into this same store and selecting an article worth five dollars free of charge.

By this time you are beginning to ask: "Well, what's the joke?" There isn't any—just read on a few more lines.

The Appleton Review is pleased to announce that in this number a "Misspelled Word Contest" is started and will run for three issues. The first prize is any article in Spector's jewelry store valued at ten dollars and the second prize is to be any article valued at five dollars. The contest is being put on through the courtesy of Mr. Morris Spector.

Here's the information you need: In some of the advertisements scattered through the pages of this issue of the Appleton Review there are a few misspelled words—not many, but just a few hidden away in obscure places. Read all the ads carefully and find the misspelled words. Write them down as they appear spelled wrongly and opposite each one write the correct spelling of the word. Then send in your list to the Appleton Review, 300 E. College Ave., Appleton, Wis.

Remember, the contest will run for three issues so be sure to scan the advertisements very carefully these three weeks. You may send in three lists for the three weeks or one list covering the entire period. Don't forget to put down the word as you see it misspelled in the ad and after it the correct spelling. And by all means don't forget to write your name and address plainly.

All right, let's get busy, read the ads, and send in your answers.

No employees of the Midwest Publishing Company, publishers of the Appleton Review, nor of the Badger Printing Company, printers of the Review, are eligible to enter this contest.

Proportional representation and greater centralization of administrative control in the hands of the mayor are outstanding features of the proposed new charter for the city of Milwaukee, which was submitted to the entire membership of the city charter league in a meeting at the public library Wednesday night. Several elective offices are abolished by the new charter, which provides that the only officials to be elected are the aldermen and the mayor. The city is divided into three districts for the election of these officials.

WORLD

The naval parley at London has made little progress during the past week. England insists that a reduction of battleships be taken up first, in which stand it is opposed by the representatives of the United States who desire that cruisers and submarines be decided before the battle ships come under discussion. Japan, France and Italy are inclined to support England, but the jealousy between France and Italy has kept them from declaring themselves openly, as both are playing for the support of the United States in their own demands for increased cruiser and submarine power. The British Labor government hopes to save $250,000 on battleship construction for use in unemployment insurance, commonly called "doles" in England, while retaining England's cruiser strength. Mr. Stimson is fighting this move with every ounce of influence at his command. His objective is to keep Japan, France and Italy from lining up in support of the British plan to place battleship reduction first on the agenda, no matter how much they agree with Great Britain on the battleship question.

EDNA FERBER'S "SHOW BOAT" COMING TO APPLETON THEATRE

Appleton people who have followed with interest the career of Edna Ferber will be pleased to learn that one of her most popular stories, "Show Boat," will be on the program of Brin's Appleton Theatre during the week of February 9th.

A short time after the book first appeared in print, the Milwaukee Journal printed a lengthy review, the first paragraph of which reads as follows: "In the few days since its publication 'Show Boat' has definitely taken its bearings everywhere where there is a book store to sell what is new in fiction. No longer is the spectacle of the noisy, puffing, glittering, floating theatre confined to the shifting course of the Mississippi through the middle west of the last century. Edna Ferber has taken it upon herself to spread the glamor of a particularly colorful chapter in American theatricals which has been nearly forgotten in the present era of movies and vaudeville. 'Show Boat' has come to Milwaukee, its whistles blowing, its caliope screaming, its flags flying, just as it has come into port over the entire country. The Cotton Blossom Floating Palace theatre has become the common property of a period that has allowed much of the color of the provincial theatre of the past to slip unnoticed through its fingers."

But many of our readers have read the book, so that for them it is unnecessary to repeat the entire review in this place. Those who have not done so will be just as eager to see the movie version as it will appear on the screen at the Appleton Theatre.

The younger generation will not remember Miss Ferber, who left Appleton many years ago to win fame and fortune through her writings. But many of the older generation vividly remember her and the little "My Store" in which first her parents and then her widowed mother worked almost day and night to earn a living.

In her earlier stories she frequently drew upon her knowledge of the inhabitants of Appleton for her characters, and though names were always changed, the characters were so clearly drawn and their peculiarities so sharply defined that recognition was inevitable. She was a keen judge of human nature and her ability to sketch individuals in words has had much to do with the popularity achieved by her writings. In the years that have elapsed since Edna Ferber left Appleton she has come to be recognized as one of the most popular fiction writers of the time.

But she still retains a warm spot in her heart for Appleton and keeps in touch with many of her old friends in this city. The management of the theatre expects to have a special message from her to her old friends to flash upon the screen before the production and it may be taken as certain that those some old friends all will be on hand to read that message.

WOOD MILL STUDIED BY GERMAN YOUTH

Alfred Woelz of Goppingen, Württemberg, Germany, left last week to return to his native land after spending eight months in this country. A visit to America before settling in business is the ambition of every German youth, he said.

Mr. Woelz, who is a cousin of Fred and George Woelz of Appleton, spent the last two months in Oconto acquainting himself with lumbering activities at the Holt Hardwood company plant.

Lumber mills are on a much smaller scale in Germany, he said. Conveyors are just being introduced. Different machinery is used. Gang saws are used almost exclusively, in place of band saws, which are in common use in this country. Timber land is owned either by the government or by the nobility. Selective cutting has been practiced for 100 years, with the result that Germany faces no shortage. In order to protect the forests, the government handles all timber cutting. Tops and brush are sold as firewood. The government either sells the logs at auction or contracts for the sale of a certain quantity from a given area.

Soft woods are cut and piled for drying in much the same manner as in this country. In the case of hardwoods, however, all the boards from a log are piled in a group, in the same position in which they were cut from the log, and purchasers must buy the entire log, taking all grades of lumber.

President Hoover last Friday issued an executive order prohibiting the importation of parrots into the United States, designed to prevent the spread of parrot fever here.

Los Angeles.—The national business survey conference of the United States Chamber of Commerce tells President Hoover business has returned to near normal, nothing to worry about, no need for unusual stimulation.

Several million Americans, out of work, would enjoy a little stimulation if it got them a job. It is, however, a comfort to know that general business, on which all jobs depend, is doing well and that members of the national commission feel optimistic.

News to worry grain merchants in Europe and interest American farmers: Russia's Soviet steamer Proletariat arrives in the Baltic with 2,500 tons of grain offered by the "Soviet trade legation" at prices 25 to 35 cents a bushel below world market prices.

Communist Russia promises heavy exports of rye, oats, barley, fodder, and will, if necessary, cut prices ruthlessly.

Russia's government really interests itself in farmers, buying tractors for them by the thousands, experimenting intelligently with wholesale farming, destined to solve the farm production problem as wholesale manufacturing has solved automobile production.

To know that the world is small, come to the edge of the Pacific and talk to New York friends as easily as though they were in the same room. Or call London, and talk, unconscious of the fact that your voice, transformed into an electric impulse, flashes across the Atlantic ocean in less than a sixteenth of a second, through the ether.

Next, to realize that the world, this country especially, is big, explore the map on your railroad time table, and look for Tucson, Ariz. You find it a couple of inches away from Los Angeles, and decide to drive there some afternoon to investigate the much praised climate.

You discover that the distance is 700 miles, and decide to take a train that makes the trip in a night.

California has a "Fit at Fifty" club, which politely sends you an honorary membership and says it is indorsed by the governor of the state.

California and every other state should have a "Fit at One Hundred" club. In this country, fifty should be only the beginning of fitness and hard work.

At San Diego Lindbergh borrowed a "glider" airplane, with no engine. He asked a few questions, went up alone, flew for half an hour, 500 feet up, came down and applied for a first-class glider pilot license. He got it. There is only one Lindbergh, but there are a million young Americans like him. They will keep aviation going.

The distressing accident to a Mad-dux airplane returning from the Mexican horse races at Agua Caliente is part of the price of progress. It means one of the first improvements should be to make a plane taking fire, due to collision, impossible.

When railroading started in France, and an accident between Paris and Versailles killed many, it was thought that Frenchmen would ride no more. A troupe of actors, hired, sat in trains at the windows smiling pretending to like it. Railroading was not abandoned. Flying will increase every year, and become safer than rail or motor travel.

This nation needs 250,000,000 more people to eat the food and use the automobiles, clothing, houses, and radio sets the country could produce. Some day 500,000,000 Americans will live on the hill tops and mountain tops, and fly down to business or to work on plains and in valleys.

Robert Burns Club of Appleton Has An Interesting History

Every year on January 25 Appleton is the gathering place for Scotch folk from all parts of the Fox River valley and many other smaller towns in this vicinity. For on this day is the birthday of the immortal Scotch poet, "Bobbie" Burns, and the Robert Burns club of Appleton has since 1919 observed the event with a banquet and program which indeed does honor to this great writer and surpasses any other event of its kind in this section of Wisconsin.

This year's banquet and concert was held last Saturday evening at Hotel Northern and people from all parts of the valley came, despite the cold weather. Membership of the club is made up of Scotch people from Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh, Weyauwega, Waupaca, New London, and other nearby communities. The membership is in excess of 200.

This year Dean Graham of Ripon college gave the principal talk, which was on the life of Burns. Songs, dances, and readings made up the balance of the evening's program.

The Robert Burns club has an interesting history. Prior to 1919 the Brown County St. Andrew association presented a concert in Green Bay every year on Burns' birthday. There were many Scotch people from Appleton who attended these annual musical events whenever it was possible for them to make the trip, but ten or eleven years ago the journey to Green Bay was a rather inconvenient one in the middle of winter as highways were not then kept open as they are now—in fact they were scarcely kept open at all. So it was always a more or less uncertain event. This condition led to the formation of the local Robert Burns club. Since then the annual concert has been given on January 25 and has attracted more and more people from a wider territory each year.

Another time when the Burns club assembles for a program is St. Andrews Night, November 30. St. Andrew was the patron saint of Scotland. Present officers of the club are John S. Oliver, Appleton, president; Archie MacGregor, Appleton, vice president; John D. Michie, Menasha, secretary. The club is glad to welcome into its membership any Scotch people or persons of Scotch descent, who are not now affiliated with the organization.

Tested in a heavy London fog along the Thames, the "noctovisor" showed an automobile headlight plainly at a distance of more than 400 yards. Other tests showed that light could be made visible in this way at more than three miles.

The machine depends on the fact that the infra-red rays, not visible to the naked eye but present with all light, penetrate fog, mist, smoke and some other obstacles quite easily, while rays of light visible to the naked eye are stopped. The Baird device "throws up" these infra-red rays to the visible part of the spectrum.

It is believed that the "noctovisor" will be of great value in aviation as well as to ships navigating waters where fog abounds.

MORE LIGHT?

The campaign for adopting the city manager form of government for our city has been largely based upon the argument of high taxes, the present aldermanic form being blamed for the great sums now raised by taxation.

In the last issue of the Review we printed an explanation by Mayor Rule of the items making up the city's expenditures and showing how great a proportion of these are for departments beyond the control of the council or for things demanded by the taxpayers themselves. Many of these items are by no means vital to the welfare of our city, but they are among the things which make Appleton one of the best cities in the state.

Only a few months ago the merchants urged the council to install a new ornamental lighting system along the avenue, the turning on of which lights was celebrated with considerable pomp. Figures show the cost to the city of that ornamental system was $9,000, the merchants along the street contributing $18,000.

This expenditure of $9,000 was almost literally forced upon the city council but the majority of our citizens undoubtedly approve and admire the new lighting system. However, there has been considerable criticism among the smaller taxpayers who do not feel that they should have been called upon to pay even one-third of the cost of installing this ornamental lighting system on our main business thoroughfare.

And now during the past week some of the leaders of the campaign to change the form of government are advocating extending the ornamental street lighting system to the residence districts. They argue that the city has made it easy to secure ornamental lighting for residence districts by adopting an ordinance providing that the city pay one-half of the cost of installation, the other half to be paid by the property owners. Because one-half would be divided between the property on both sides of the street, each paying one-quarter, and the ornamental posts in the residence districts would not be so elaborate as those in the business section, the cost would be comparatively small, according to these arguments.

Let us see how it would really work out. The city's share of installing such a system in the residence districts would be approximately $400 per block. (It was about $1,000 per block along College avenue.) There are approximately 700 street blocks in the city. Multiply $400, the cost to the city of each block, by 700 and we find that the city would have to expend $280,000 for the ornamental lighting system in the residence districts before all streets would be supplied. But that would be only one-half the cost, because the property owners living on both sides of the streets would have to raise an equal amount, another $280,000. In other words, the installation of that ornamental lighting system in the residence districts would cost our taxpayers $560,000!

Those same taxpayers are not likely to endorse the sentiment so glibly expressed that it is an easy matter to install the ornamental lighting system in the residence districts. It will take a lot of argument to persuade our taxpayers that it is easy to dig up $560,000 directly and indirectly, even though that money would go to beautify our streets and make Appleton even more attractive than it now is.

It seems to us that there are many other problems requiring considerable expenditures, such as a new high school, which must be solved before the city can be justified in thinking of spending such enormous sums for luxuries like ornamental lights.

OUR YOUNGER CITIZENS

The Juniors—in the homes, in the schools, in the churches, all around the town—are a big part of our community and one of the chief reasons for it. Ten, fifteen, twenty years from now, our town will be what our young people of today will be.

There will be some special departments for them and the things that concern them.

What they will be depends upon the sort of environment and contacts we furnish them now. That means we have to go beyond the home, into the school, the church, the playground, the theater—every activity, recreation and amusement in which our children make contacts with others, young and old.

It is because we have all the faith in the world in the young people of our town, because we feel that older people who have no interest in them are sad indeed, because we believe they are a big part of the community and the chief reason for its existence, that we have made room for them in this weekly news magazine.

There will be some special departments for them and the things which chiefly concern them. Much of the material will be contributed by the juniors themselves. Several have already shown sufficient interest in this opportunity to volunteer their services. We welcome them.

ANOTHER STATE PARK

After being in progress for two years negotiations recently completed add a beautiful new link to Wisconsin's chain of state parks. Deeds to the scenic Copper Falls region have been transferred to the state by the Lake Superior District Power Company for $15,000.

Appletonians interested in the development of the state's parks feel that the acquisition of this particular one is a significant achievement in that it involves the transfer of considerable potential waterpower from a power corporation to the commonwealth.

The new park is located just a few miles from Mellen, Ashland County, at a point where the Bad river plunges down a rocky gorge to be joined a quarter of a mile below by Tyler's Fork, another swift, rushing stream which has come to meet the larger stream over a similar series of falls. Its area of 520 acres includes both of these falls and the remarkable bit of gorge and water scenery below them.

It is planned to begin work in developing a park area as soon as the spring opens up. There is a great deal to be done. A park of this kind requires safety rails along the gorges, the building of trails, road repairs, sanitary facilities.

For four or five years now the Copper Falls region has been a favorite spot for tourists, situated as it is just a short distance from the Apostle Islands of Lake Superior and the Pat-tison and Brule state parks. Records show that more than 100,000 people visited the area during the last five years.

Put a trip to the new state park on your tour calendar for next summer. For whatever we may do, wisely, to conserve the God-given beauties of our commonwealth future generations shall rise up and call us blessed.

A professor instructing a class in public speaking says every speech must have a beginning, a middle, and an end. But we are not convinced that the beginning and middle are not so indispensable.

Appleton is not "Broke"

If all the stories circulated by the advocates of city manager government concerning the financial condition of the City of Appleton were true, voters would flock to the polls April 1st and oust the time-tried and reliable aldermanic system. Pointing to loans of $210,000 due the banks of Appleton, these people claim that the city is "broke" and that a change must be made to keep the condition from growing worse. Perhaps they would even like to compare us to Chicago, with its financial chaos.

In this connection Alderman R. F. McGilgan and several others in the city council have been ridiculed because they said if the council were given another year the financial situation of the city would have a different aspect. This was characterized as an admission that the council has not done its best and if pressed for action would remedy conditions.

These aldermen were sincere in what they said. Had they had an opportunity to explain why they made this statement, the public would have understood and the men would have been praised instead of criticized. The following explanation not only will serve to show that the city is not "broke" but will indicate what the aldermen meant.

It is assumed, of course, that the council spent money lavishly, not counting the day of reckoning, and thereby plunged the city into debt. The council actually has been accused of just that. Why not, when it makes good campaign material?

From 1921 to 1927 the city collected taxes from the banks of Appleton under protest that the taxes were illegal. In 1927 the United States supreme court ruled that the taxes were illegal and should not have been collected. A settlement was effected with the banks and $137,000 was returned to them.

Again in 1926 the council encountered another burden, when the county certified to the city a tax levy of $100,000 for highways which the city claimed was illegal. That year the tax rate was fixed at $30 instead of $35. No provision was made for the highway levy because the city would weaken its case if there were any indication that this obligation were being considered. Later the county switched this levy from the highway fund to the general fund, and the supreme court ruled that the taxes were legally assessed. Then it was up to the city to pay $100,000 not previously collected in taxes.

It was necessary to negotiate loans at the banks in 1928 to pay off these two large obligations. This constitutes the true reason why the city is behind today. Of course a higher tax rate could have been fixed for 1930 so as to retire these loans. But the council saw another way out and therefore did not burden the people with additional taxes, much as the advocates of city manager government desired further fuel for the flames of prejudice.

Receipts in the city treasury for the year 1930 are estimated conservatively at $1,655,145, and expenditures at $1,563,408. This will leave a balance of $91,737 which the council will use to reduce the bank loans, leaving $118,263 still to be paid. This comes close to cutting the debt in half without asking a penny of increase from the taxpayers. These figures take into consideration the revenues from all sources, including income and utility taxes, and all of the funds required for city as well as school purposes.

The city's financial condition has not grown worse but has improved within the last year. On Jan. 1, 1929 the city owed the banks $230,000, and on Jan. 1, 1930 this sum had been reduced to $210,000. This reduction was made despite the fact that the council had to borrow $60,000 additional late in 1929. These loans included $30,000 to pay the state's share of the Wisconsin avenue viaduct, and $30,000 to pay the county's share of the paving of Newberry St., Walter Ave. and E. Wisconsin Ave. These amounts will be applied on the bank loans as they are received from these two units of government.

Some credit is due the council for being careful of its expenditures and conservative in its public improvements while this stringent money condition exists. Reasonable economy has been practiced and will be practiced until the situation works itself out. Could a city manager do any more?

Fewer Chains, not More

No matter where one goes these days, the subject of the chain store versus the home-owned establishment is sure to come to the forefront. The people of Appleton at last have been aroused and have begun to realize that the complexion of their downtown district is changing along lines that are not healthy for the future.

It is well that the Appleton Home Merchants Association was organized. For some time radio broadcasts have emphasized the real issue, but now our own merchants are educating us to the situation. We are substituting home examples for general statements.

By effective work, a number of cities in different parts of the country have made the chain store so unpopular that it has moved out, leaving the field to the home merchant. We believe chain stores locating in Appleton to take business away from others would confront the same situation if the home merchants' association functions to the limit of its ability.

Last week another of our College avenue stores closed its doors. Nobody likes to see a local merchant pushed farther and farther into a corner until he is obliged to quit business. Occasionally, of course, it is the merchant's lack of initiative and ability, but often it is a case of mammoth capital being brought into use to establish a trade for the chain organization. When prices are cut ruthlessly, the home merchant lacks an equal chance with the vast chains and the public is not careful to realize that the biggest bargains are confined to a few items which the company can afford to sell at cost or at a loss for the time being.

Of course we know that all is not well with the chain stores the country over. Statistics show that all of the big corporations of this character, except one in the grocery line, had a decline in business in December. Formerly they were showing big gains, not because they did a bigger aggregate business, but they were adding sales of new stores. The true figures, based on the number of stores actually operating were not so favorable for December when it came to total sales. This development may make some of the chains eliminate themselves, because of competition with other chains.

Most of the merchants of Appleton are enterprising and up-to-date. The many new stores, store fronts and other improvements made by the independent merchants are examples of this. We find merchants sending buyers to the markets in the big cities in order to obtain the latest in everything, to be sold at a fair price. They know the complex of their patrons and know best how to supply the wants of the people here. They are ready to give service of a more intimate, personal character than the strange man can. They have their own buying organizations so they can offer merchandise as low as the chains. We must not get the idea, therefore, that it is necessary to buy at a chain store in order to obtain things cheap. If we are careful to observe the offerings of the home merchants in their advertising and their windows and on their display counters, we will always find values.

Since this discussion of chain stores became so keen, we have found numbers of persons who declare they have always followed a policy of buying from the Appleton-owned store. They have thought this matter through. They know that when almost every cent except that which is used for making change leaves Appleton almost as soon as it reaches the bank we are not building on a very firm foundation. If all the remittances sent out by the chain stores could stay in Appleton, we would not find some of our banks going to the money markets to obtain enough funds for loans to keep local business running.

It is the policy of the chains to dominate in each community in their line of merchandising. They buy vast amounts of advertising space so that the home merchant's appeal will appear small in proportion unless he wants to spend beyond reason for this purpose. They use their wealth to obtain the best locations in the city. If the home merchant were not fortunate enough to own his store, he would have to give way to a chain after building up a big patronage for his particular section. Then when the home merchant tries to buy a building so he cannot be driven out again, he finds that the large sum paid by the chain store has placed the price of College avenue property out of his reach. It is the New York capitalist against the man who built up a business by dint of his own hard work and his service and reputation.

Merchants here are not looking for sympathy, but they think enough of the future of Appleton not only to keep their own stores operating at a profit, but to see that wealth made here stays here and that Appleton shall not be chain-owned in retailing, banking or anything else.

Review Editors:

Having to cater to an average Appleton family, I read with a good deal of interest your report of the organization of home merchants to combat the encroachment of the chain stores, and your editorial comment.

Since women buy most of the food, clothing and small equipment for the house and family, they are naturally interested in getting all they can for their money—quality and quantity. The housewife often does not go back of what she PAYS to what she GETS for that price and how much. In many instances she cannot because she has not the knowledge, time, nor facilities, to make the proper analysis.

She knows there may be a vast difference between eggs and eggs, or this slice of ham and that, but the cheaper price is appealing, and she does not weigh other benefits because, at the moment, they are not obvious. And so the purchaser is often most unfair to her home—often her neighborhood—merchant.

As one of them put it, "When you women have the cash you run to the chain store, hand it over as fast as you get your stuff, lug that home, and tell about your 'bargain'; when you don't have the money, or the time, or you don't want to run around shopping, you call up your regular merchant and ask him to charge and deliver so-and-so-and-so." The order may be for fresh cucumbers. The grocer doesn't have them, but wants to please the customer. He orders some, sells a few; the rest spoil and he is time, money and labor out on the whole transaction and may have to carry the account for an indefinite period.

There is no doubt that the chain store renders a partial service to the consumer. But the consumer does not stop to think how far this service goes—or, rather, does not go. Those who have studied chain store systems and methods see where it has advantages over the independent retailer.

The home merchant is part and parcel of the community in every way. He gives what he can to community and group projects, he carries on his books the family that is "hard up" for the time being, he performs a lot of little services for his patrons that he cannot legitimately be asked to do, and, no doubt, often goes to bed at night wondering just how much longer he can keep going that way. He does the costly foundation work and the chain dealer gets on and rides along.

I believe it is too late to put the bars against chain stores, if we wanted to. Boundary lines are more and more obsolete and big business reaches out to the remotest corners. We can't stop it.

Perhaps the final solution will be compromise and cooperation. The retailer, whether in a chain or independent, must make a living from his business, the purchasing agent for the home and family must make the budget go as far as possible.

Why not begin the triangular adjustment by giving the home town merchant at least an even break with what someone facetiously called the "chain gang"? If you pay cash regularly and carry your goods, he will be willing to give you the same advantages as the chain store. When he takes your order over the telephone, delivers the goods, and carries the charge on his books, you should be willing to pay for that service. What profit he may be able to squeeze out of that, with all the competition he must meet, stays in the community and works here through the banks or dealers in other lines.

That will help him to meet the chain dealer on his own ground and with his own methods. The chain systems should be made to see that it will be to their advantage to become a real part of each community they enter. The banks fairly could help by distinguishing between the merchant whose money they use the year round and the dealer whose money merely safely goes from his cash register to the home office in another city, without any charge for the service and protection they give. ## This Week At Our Local Theatres

Lon Chaney's Picture Taken Here Will Be Shown Here Next Week

Most Appleton people will remember that about a year ago when the snow was piled up in drifts seven and eight feet high, Lon Chaney and his company of motion picture actors and actresses selected this vicinity for the filming of many scenes in the railroad picture he was making at that time. Wisconsin people, and particularly those living in Appleton, Green Bay and Manitowoc have been wondering for some time when this picture of their home scenes would be finished and released.

The name of this great picture of Chaney's is "Thunder" and it will be shown at Brin's Appleton Theatre Sunday and Monday. The picture is dedicated to locomotive engineers and is a thrilling action story of Chaney in a truly great railroad picture.

Scenes for "Thunder" were taken along the Chicago and Northwestern right of way between Appleton, Green Bay, and Manitowoc. Certain parts of the picture were filmed at Appleton

Junction. This probably is the first great feature picture where Appleton and vicinity have been used for a part of the setting. Mr. Chaney and his company were at Hotel Northland in Green Bay for about two weeks during which time the snow scenes were taken. Phyllis Haver is one of the stars in the cast of "Thunder."

On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week the attraction at the Appleton Theatre will be Al Jolson and "Sonny Boy" in "Say It with Songs." Everyone who saw the picture "Sonny Boy" knows what a wonderful team Al and little Davey Lee make. "Say It with Songs" is the best production they have turned out. You won't want to miss this one.

For the balance of this week Marilyn Miller is starring in "Sally." This is a beautiful production, all in gorgeous technicolor, and many who have seen it during the last few days agree that it is equal to the "Gold Diggers of Broadway" or that it excels this picture in its colorful settings, song numbers, and dance novelties.

SHOES OF WATCHMAN FREEZE, LEFT BEHIND

A veteran engineer and watchman at the American Brass plant in Kenosha, Herman Piehl, was trying to thaw out a padlock on the outer gate of the employment office with a kettle of hot water. The temperature was 15 degrees below zero.

The water ran around Piehl's feet and when he attempted to move away he found that his shoes were frozen fast.

Piehl unlaced his shoes and ran into the employment office, then borrowed another pair of shoes and chopped his own out of the ice.

Folks interested in roller skating will have an opportunity to take home an elephant if they are present at the Armory roller rink Saturday, Sunday or Wednesday evenings. It is rather a unique experience to bring home an elephant all your own in this day and age, but evidently it can be done. At any rate the management of the roller rink assures us that a large drove of elephants has been secured, and that they will be ready for distribution to Appleton people.

In The Locked Drawer

(Copyright by D. J. WALSH)
(Complete in this issue.)

Ned glanced up from the letter he was writing, conscious of a steady stare. Frances was looking at him. Not looking as one looks at one she loves—as a wife should look, he reflected. So seriously was she contemplating him that she was entirely unaware that he was looking at her. After a moment he lowered his head and continued the letter.

He had intended to write at least another page. Now however, he felt upset. Why had Frances regarded him so strangely? Did she suspect that he had committed some misdemeanor of which he was entirely guiltless? She had not seemed suspicious. Her look had been more a blank stare at him as though she were hardly aware of him as a person. But why had she looked like that?

She had gone now to her own room. After a moment's thought about his letter, a profitless moment, Ned followed her. If there was anything wrong between them, and he felt sure that there must be from her gaze, he must get it straightened out promptly. The door of her room was slightly ajar and without the slightest intention of spying Ned paused. In that second he saw her lock a drawer in her desk and glide toward the other door of her room.

Ned scowled. What had she locked in that drawer? In all their married life they had never, as far as he knew at least, had any secrets from each other. Never had there been any locked drawer or locked anything else. He strode across the room and stood before the little writing-desk. For a long time she had had a picture frame lying there, face down, its velvet back waiting to be removed for the picture she wished to put in.

Frances was conventional. She wanted to have a picture of her husband framed on her writing desk as had so many another Mrs. Babbitt the country over. And Ned hated to sit for a picture. "Always feel like a fool," he said. So Frances had never had a picture of her husband to put in the silver frame. In his lazy fashion he always kept saying that he would have a picture taken one of these days but the days slipped into weeks and months and still the frame remained empty.

And now the frame was gone, too! Puzzled, Ned eyed the desk drawer. He thrust his hands deeply into the rear pockets of his trousers. He wanted to reach out to try the drawer. Perhaps it wasn't locked at all. Perhaps she—

The front door closed at this moment and Ned knew that his wife was gone. He had the apartment all to himself. He—he would try the drawer to make sure. His face flushed, for he hated to stoop to anything like prying into his wife's affairs. The drawer, when he pulled at it gently, was locked. He took a little bronze hairpin that lay nearby on her pencil tray and picked at the lock hastily. He must know what it was that she had locked in there.

The lock did not give easily. Before it yielded to his pin, his face was red both from stooping and embarrassment. Then when it opened he pulled out the drawer hastily to see—the face of another man staring up at him!

Ned could scarcely believe his eyes. The man's serious eyes met his frankly and directly quite as though he had a perfect right to be locked in Frances' drawer. There was certainly no secret as to the man's identity because scrawled across the right-hand corner, diagonally, were the words:

"Faithfully yours,
"WEBB AMES."

"Well! I'll be darned!" gulped Ned. "I wonder just what he 'aims' to do?" He looked at it a moment longer and then deliberately placed his hands on either edge to tear that smug face directly across the middle. He had not heard the door open. Frances stood there looking at him, amazed.

"Don't you dare tear that!" she said suddenly.

He whirled to face her. "Who—who is this man?" he demanded in tense tones.

A flickering smile made its way through her amazement. "His name is right there," she said calmly.

"What does he do—for a living?" demanded Ned, manlike.

"He's an actor," she replied coolly. Ned wanted to stagger backward, but he controlled his limbs manfully. An actor! Ye gods! So Frances was like all women!

He noticed now that she had the silver frame in her hands. Instantly he knew that she was going to frame this picture. It was too large for the frame, but the scissors in her hands explained what she intended to do about that.

Then her gay, infectious laugh pealed out; she took him by the shoulders.

"Look into that mirror!" she commanded.

He looked. His face was like a thunder cloud. Beside his face she held the photograph so that he could see it. "Well?" he said coldly.

"Don't you see that he looks exactly like you?" she asked.

Except that the scarf was not one he would choose, the picture was certainly like him.

"I saw his picture in the dramatic section of the Sunday paper. I sent him a half-dollar and asked for his picture—large size. I'm going to cut off the signature and—in spite of you—I'll have my hubby's picture framed on my desk as other women do."

Shamefacedly he held forth the hairpin. "I—I picked the lock," he muttered.

"I hoped you would, but it's been here a week and you never noticed. I'd rather have yours, you know," she said hesitantly.

"I'll have it taken this afternoon," he promised. "I'll feel like a fool," he said.

"Of course," she agreed equably. And Ned wondered what she meant—exactly.

Our Friendly Neighbors

ROBINS

'Tis nothing new or remarkable to see a robin in Appleton in winter. I have no doubt many would remain with us, could they be assured of food. For over nine years one remained in this vicinity—different people knew him and fed him and called him theirs!

Robins love human neighbors and become very tame and trusting. Watch the gardener spading and see how closely they follow him picking up the worms as he turns the soil!

The female robin builds the nest without any assistance from the male; though he feeds her while she is setting and will feed the young.

They love to top off the nest with a bit of white; I often tear up white rags for them. Other birds have this hobby, too. Cat birds, blue jays, even grackles and wax wings. They use this for a marker, being able to see it from afar. I suspect them of having a sense of beauty and a love for decoration. One once snatched a lace trimmed handkerchief off an open book in a window. This was not discovered until autumn, when the leaves had fallen. There it was, swaying in the wind from the edge of the nest in the apple tree. Robins build in the funniest places! One built on top of an electric bulb which was fastened over the steps of a porch. This was lighted every evening and hundreds of people passed up and down within reach of the nest but she succeeded in raising her family. Another built her nest in a box set upon a pole, a lantern was placed in this box and lighted every night, and though she'd shriek and fly out every time this was done she would return immediately, never minding how many people came to look at her!

One built on a fire escape. This was at St. Elizabeth hospital, and every time any one went out on the landing she would scream and fly away. When her young were hatched we had a terrible snow storm and one of the Sisters slipped the nest in a box and set out a dish of bread and milk for her. For several hours she did not return but finally slipped in and covered the little ones and fed them, even calling loudly for more food.

'Tis such acts of kindness that make our robins so tame that they hardly get out of our way when walking through the parks.

"How long do they live?" I knew one, intimately, who came to my doorway eighteen years.

I knew another, in captivity, who was then fifteen years old. His was a strange story; in a court back of a home on Astor street, Chicago, the maid found a young robin with a broken wing. She took him in and fed him and he of course became very tame. The master of the house became interested, went to a dealer and asked if he kept food for robins. Of course he did, so food was procured and a cage, which was placed in the dining room near a window.

In this home was a great Dane dog who was taught not to harm the robin and they became pals. This robin died. Then one spring day the dog saw a young robin hopping about. He sprang to him, picked him up in his great jaws and bringing him to the maid dropped him at her feet. When the robin hopped away he repeated the act, never hurting the fledgling at all—and the maid took him then and placed him in the cage which had remained empty on the stand in the dining room, where the dog thought robins belonged!

This robin would sit upon the dog's head as he lay sleeping and would sing softly; he was then fifteen years old.

I think we should plant our orchards and gardens with a thought for the birds. Robins love elderberries, mulberries, mountain ash, choke cherries, pin cherries and high-bush honey suckle berries. And these are all beautiful when in blossom as well as in fruit.

Eagle Scout Awards Will Be Made at Golden Arch Service

To be an Eagle Scout probably is the ambition of every lad who joins the great Boy Scout organization—world wide in its activities and influences for good. The rank of Eagle Scout until recent years was the highest pinnacle to be attained in the Scout world. Now there are one or two higher honors, but this fact does not detract anything from the glory of the Eagle ranking—it only gives the Eagle Scout more honors to work for.

In the Valley Scout council there will be nine Eagle Scouts after the ceremony of the Golden Arch tomorrow night at Lawrence Memorial chapel. Five of these boys are from Appleton and four live in Neenah and Menasha. Two of the Appleton Scouts, Carlton Wahl and Charles Widsteen, will receive their Eagle rank at this impressive ceremony, which is to be staged by the Rockford, Illinois, Scout council. Wahl is a member of Troop 10, Memorial Presbyterian church. E. C. Erickson is Scoutmaster of this troop. Widsteen belongs to Troop 2, the Methodist church troop. Harold Brown is scoutmaster of this group.

The three other Appleton boys whose pictures appear in this article, and who have become Eagle Scouts in past years are Lester Ramsley of Troop 5, St. Theresa parish; Arthur Hahnen of Troop 4, American Legion; and Fred Marshall of Troop 2, Methodist church. Robert Laut is the scoutmaster of St. Theresa troop and Ted Frank is scoutmaster of the American Legion organization.

To Arthur Hahnen, 831 W. Commercial St., will be given the highest honor of any boy in the valley council, the Silver Palm award. This is something rather new in scoutdom, and was designed to give boys something to work for after they have achieved their Eagle award. To gain this coveted honor it is necessary to win fifteen additional merit badges and serve one year of satisfactory Scout service after attaining the Eagle award.

It is not a simple matter to become an Eagle Scout. It requires many hours of study, practical demonstrations of ability and "stick-to-itiveness." To gain the award the boy's record as a First Class Scout must have been satisfactory for at least one full year. In addition he must qualify for 21 merit badges, and these 21 must include the following eleven: first aid, life saving, personal health, public health, cooking, camping, civics, bird study, path finding, pioneering, athletics or physical development. The other ten merit badges are optional, thereby permitting the Scout to study and pass those tests which prove most interesting to him. There are in all more than 90 merit badges in scouting and the boy is urged by his scoutmaster to seek those awards which will be the most helpful to him in his later life work. Arthur Hahnen has achieved 47 merit badges in his few years of Scout work, an exceptional record for any boy.

At the Gold Arch ceremony the parents of the Eagle Scouts and the scoutmasters of the various troops in the council will be given special recogni-

GETS PLACE IN THE NEWS

Lombard, Montana, is the only strictly railroad town in North America. If you don't believe it, try to drive there by automobile and you'll find that there are no roads leading into Lombard, up in the mountains east of Butte.

The only way you can reach the town is by means of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific or the Northern Pacific railroad.

Of course, there is the Missouri river, but nobody is going to be mean enough to row a boat up that stream just to beat Lombard out of its news story.

IN and OUT of the Kitchen

Let us have them—your success with a new dish, or an old one; a new idea in decorating or furnishing, sewing, mending, entertaining grownups or children, caring for babies or older children, helps in the care of the house—whatever you may know that will lighten the tasks of the homemaker and add interest to the job.

Some interesting contributions this week. You surely will want to try them. Send in your tried and true recipes, ideas and discoveries.

Nut Sauce for Baked Chicken

Put 1 cup Brazil nuts through the grinder, add 1 dessertspoonful of olive oil and blend all to a smooth paste, adding a little pepper, salt, and nutmeg if liked. Scald, together, one-half cup of the chicken bastings and one-half cup milk, then add the nut paste, stir until smooth and creamy, and serve. —E. S.

Banana Soup

Fruit soups are different, appetizing and nourishing. This one should be eaten with relish by the children.

Rub to a paste with a wooden spoon 8 ripe bananas, sprinkle over them 1 tablespoon cornstarch and a little salt; bring 3 pints milk to the scalding point, stir into it slowly the banana paste and one egg beaten lightly. Let all boil for two minutes (to cook the starch) and serve with croutons. —R. L. M.

Soup a la Mongolese

A nice vegetable soup to use up left-over in an appetizing way. Five bouillon cubes, 4 cups boiling water, 2 cups tomato juice, 2 tablespoons shredded onion, ¼ cup shredded carrots, 2 tablespoons shredded turnip, ¼ cup cooked cauliflower, 2 tablespoons canned peas, 2 tablespoons canned string beans, ½ cup cooked spaghetti, salt and pepper to taste. Grated cheese.

Add bouillon cubes to water and tomato juice. In the meantime cook the vegetables in a small amount of water and add all to the soup, also the spaghetti and seasonings. Sprinkle grated cheese over each serving.

Golden Orange Cake

(Nice to use up yolks when making Angel Food)

Beat 10 egg yolks and 1 whole egg until very light and spongy. Add 1 large tablespoon orange juice and the grated rind of half an orange; also 1½ cups granulated sugar. Beat all until the sugar is dissolved. The batter may be allowed to stand at this point for an hour, although that is not necessary. Add 1/3 cup water, or carefully strained orange juice, and 1 cup of cake flour with 1 teaspoon baking powder (sifted at least 4 times). Bake in tube pan in moderate oven for about one hour.

Icing

After the cake is cooled it may be iced with the following: Orange juice and a bit of grated rind with as much confectioners sugar as will bring it to the desired consistency. Place over hot water until sugar melts, if a thin clear icing is wanted. Mrs. R. J. M.

Baked Ham with Apples

Take a 2-pound slice of ham cut about an inch thick, wash, trim off most of the fat, then rub in as much of 1½ cups brown sugar as it will take up. Lay in a baking pan and sprinkle over it about ten whole cloves. Pare and cut in quarters 6 medium-sized tart apples and lay them around the ham. Sprinkle the remaining sugar over the apples, and carefully add ½ cup water, so as not to dislodge the sugar. Cover and bake 45 minutes, or until the ham is tender.

Queen Victoria's Favorite Soup

Heat 1 cupful cold roast chicken in 1 pint chicken stock, which should be well-seasoned; add 1 cupful light cream and let come to a boil. Then thicken with 3 hard-cooked egg yolks sieved fine. M. L. N.

A Story Dinner

Did you ever try cooking a dinner described in a novel? Here is one from a story by Sophie Kerr.

On the table, when the guests were called, were halves of iced grapefruit, the centers filled with white grapes, cut in half and seeded, the whole flecked ever so lightly with sugar dissolved in the bland strength of Swedish punch. The pale yellow and green colors were as subtle as their flavor.

Next a puree of fresh young peas dotted with dice of brown croutons, and with it the thinnest of round sandwiches, each holding a slice of red tomato seasoned and drained from mayonnaise.

Then on a long platter a noble shad, stuffed and baked so slowly, so carefully, that all the smaller bones had been dissolved in the process. With the shad came new potato balls, dipped in melted butter and chopped parsley, and curls of pale, crisp cucumber, sprinkled with green pepper and grated egg, bathed in French dressing ruddy with paprika. Hot beaten biscuit, too, little and round and light.

And then there appeared a heaping pile of slender young scallions, steamed to melting tenderness and bathed in a creamy sauce.

The dessert was a lemon pie—all quivering gold below against a flaky two-inch meringue above. With this Bel paese cheese just soft and complacent enough to make the lemon pie seem even more ravishing by contrast.

In another the table is described as being spread with a long narrow cover of golden poplin, edged with a narrow fringe, huge tassels at the corners. Over this a strip of Italian altar lace, and set upon it at intervals, golden luster candle sticks with white candles. No flowers, but small colored glass fruits in dishes of gold-flecked Venetian glass, shells airily perched on sea horses' heads. There were salts and peppers of gold luster and the hostess wore a yellow frock.

EAGLE SCOUT AWARDS

Most of the awards to first and second class advancements will be made by the Rockford council which has entire charge of the work in the ceremony. The Eagle awards, however, will be conferred on the boys by their parents. The Golden Arch ceremony is the most impressive ritual in scouting and one of the most beautiful in existence anywhere. It represents the building of the arch of manhood from the foundation stones of boyhood, by using for the building materials blocks and stones, each representing some principle of the Scout oath and laws. It has been two years since the ritual was put on in Appleton.

The Neenah and Menasha boys in the valley council who have won the Eagle award in past years are Dale Clough and Robert Rusch of Troop 3, Menasha; and Lyell Eckrich and Anthony Thelan of Troop 9, Menasha. It is expected that a large delegation of people from the Twin Cities will be present at the ceremonies tomorrow evening.

Editor's Note:—Just as this issue of the Appleton Review goes to press word has come that Herbert Schmidt of Appleton, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Schmidt, has passed his test for the Eagle Scout rank and will be given his Eagle award tomorrow night. We regret that this news came too late to permit us to use a picture of Mr. Schmidt.

MEN

Some say men ain't good for much,
Some say we don't need 'em,
Some say all we do is work and slave
Just to please and feed 'em.

I'm one who's here to tell you
A man means much to me;
He's kind and true, protects you, too,
And pats you on the knee.

It's just the little things that count:
A smile, a jest, a frown;
That make the joy of woman's work
All gilded rose or brown.

—Doris Lundquist.

ALWAYS A BOY

All along life's journey there's many a fall,
And some disappointments but only one call;
The call is to gladden each heart with our joy
And radiate sunshine,—be always a boy.

'Twill shorten the journey wherever we go
If we gladden some heart with a song that we know;
We'll turn all our troubles into play-
things and toys,
Just forget we are men,—and always be boys.

Then all of life's troubles will vanish
away,
And joy and contentment will come
and will stay;
Forget we are grown 'ups', know
nothing but joy,
Act kindly with others,—be always a boy.

Old age and old notions won't carry us through;
'Tis love and contentment that'll keep our sky blue,

Just loving each other,—turn gloom
into joy,
Smile,—and keep smiling,—be always a boy.

—William Charles Williams.

My Church

My church has but one temple,
Wide as the world is wide,
Set with a million altars,
Where a million hearts abide.

My church has no creed to bar
A single brother man,
But says, "Come thou and worship!"
To everyone who can.

My church has no roof nor walls,
Nor floor, save the beautiful sod,
For fear I would seem to limit
The love of illimitable God.

—C. O. G.

The Question

Oh, a trouble is a ton, or a trouble is an ounce,

Or a trouble is what you make it;
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt
that counts,

But only,—
How Did You Take It?

—Edmund Vance Cook.

Second semester classes at senior high school got under way on Monday, with an enrollment of 14 new students, bringing the total enrollment up to 927. Honor rolls for the first semester have not yet been completed, but it is expected there will be from 60 to 65 students attaining honor rank.

A Home Nursing course is being offered to high school girls for the first time. Classes meet daily at the Columbus school under the direction of Miss Mary Orbison. Fifteen girls have enrolled. Upon completing the course proficiency certificates will be awarded these girls, by Red Cross, similar to Junior Life Saver award.

The new Bill Jones Poster Service was started this week.

Tickets for the Fox River Valley High School Music Festival to be held at Lawrence Chapel, February 7, were placed on sale Tuesday—50c and 25c. It is expected that Green Bay and Oshkosh, the other two valley cities taking part, will dispose of 200 tickets each for the first concert. Three organizations are taking part: the Green Bay band of 75 pieces, Oshkosh chorus of 60 voices, and Appleton orchestra of 40 pieces.

Miss Mae Weller has been appointed janitress to succeed Mrs. Amelia Grunst, who died last week.

Appleton senior high school is assisting Dr. Francis Curtis, of the University of Michigan, in his investigation of science taught in 300 leading high schools of the country, by making complete records of the materials used in the teaching of the sciences here.

William Foote, outstanding senior English student, under the direction of Miss Minne Smith, has improved on Shakespeare's Macbeth by adding another scene to the final act of that tragedy. It is to be published in the house organ of D. Appleton & Co., publishers, as given here.

ACT V. SCENE IX.

(Entrance to a cavern. In the middle, a boiling caldron.)

Thunder. Enter the three witches.

First Witch:
Rejoice, sisters of midnight.
For we have brought (and not too soon)
Another mortal to his doom.

Second Witch:
Not ere he had sent ten men
To a strange untimely end.

Third Witch:
Hecate, commend our pain
For we have labored not in vain.
Murderous passion we have made
And Macbeth with his life hath paid.

First Witch:
Lying truths ensnared Macbeth;
He in turn killed all the rest.
Now our bloody task is done,
Now the battle hath been won.
All:

Double, double toil and trouble:
Fire burn and caldron bubble.
(Enter ghost of Macbeth)

Macbeth:
O foul and wicked midnight hags!
Enticing, leading, becking on
You've forced me to an awful place
Because I once looked at your face.
Your prophecies were true, in sooth,
But you misled me by the truth;
King I was—to murder own,
But Banquo's child now holds the throne.
All my scheming was in vain
Men can't change Nature's train.

Witches All:
Misdread thee, Macbeth? thou dost jest
And our intentions thou has guessed?
Ha! Ha! We're here to trouble brew,
And plenty we'dst make for you.
Thou fool, on earth we only are
To cause much crime, discord and war.
But hold!

Perhaps you'd like to know our names.
First Witch:
Men call me lust, a title true,
I'm often called "ambition" too
I placed the poison in thy mind
Which led to death, as thou'dst find.

Second Witch:
The spirit of deceit am I,
The one that in thy ear did cry—
"Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't."

Third Witch:
Discord, mistress of these three,
All this harm is due to me.

All:
Enough. We leave thee, fool.
(Exit three witches.)

Macbeth:
'Tis ever true, and with all men,
Hath been before and will again
Lust o'er sense always hath reign,
And thought of gain drives men insane.
Deceit and lust will never die
As long as are such men as I.
I longed to be my Scotland's king
But did it get me anything?
Happy he who covets naught,
And cursed is he who harbors thought
Of gain.
So I leave you with this word—
"Let the spirits ne'er be heard,
Never try to gain by force
But just let nature take its course."

HIGH SCHOOL CAGERS LOSE TO SHIPBUILDERS

The luck that was Appleton's a week ago Friday was not present when the local five dropped its fourth consecutive conference game to Manitowoc in another over-time period in which the Orange came out short of victory by one basket, 12-11.

The first half favored Appleton and was marked by one field goal and three free tosses while the Ship Builders had only two gift shots.

A decided change took place in the second half when the visitors started piling up a score and threw a scare into the Orange. The under basket shots that Manitowoc had at first failed to make counters soon made themselves known to the scoreboard. The game ended with a score of 10-10.

In the over-time period Berg was fouled and made one of his two free shots. The Appleton rooters went wild, and thought the game was in the bag, when Brey broke through the Appleton quintet and scored less than a minute before the final blast of the ancient claxon.

Blue Bonnet News

The girls of the Blue Bonnet Troop at the First Ward school are working for tenderfoot and second class pins and hope to have all tenderfoots soon. They are also striving to have the full membership subscribers to the American Girl, a girl scout magazine published by the Girl Scouts. If they succeed, a picture of the troop will be published in the magazine. The American Girl is both entertaining and instructive. It has mystery stories, adventure stories and stories of great people, also girl scout pictures and puzzle packs. These are only a few of the articles that give the girls many happy hours.

MILLER CORDS DEFEAT FOND DU LAC CARDINALS

Wednesday night, January 22, the Miller Cords travelled to Fond du Lac and defeated the fast going Cardinals of that city by a score of 22 to 20. It was the first defeat of the Fondy team on their own floor in three seasons.

Every man on the Cords was working in great style. Ashman, tall center for the Miller Cords lead in scoring.

MINNEAPOLIS SOO LINES NO MATCH FOR MILLER CORDS

Railway champions of the Northwest reached Appleton January 28 after an all day train ride and while the game was closer than the score indicates the visiting team plainly showed that the long trip had tired them out.

The final score was 22 to 11. The Cords played their usual snappy passing and shooting game and no outstanding star showed up as the scoring was pretty well divided. For the visitors Olson at center did most of the scoring and Wolden was the star floor man and clearly showed why he was a star at the University of Minnesota for three years and captain in his last year.

The Cords play at Kohler next Friday night. No further home games are scheduled as the patronage in the four home games played show that Appleton sport fans do not appreciate high class professional basketball. Unless the management gets a lot of support for future games no games will be scheduled.
