vitamin D

Vitamin D is not rationed, though it is one of the rarest of all food factors. This vitamin is found rarely if at all in natural foods. It is obtainable from sunshine, but the sun as a source is undependable and inadequate. And still you must get sufficient Vitamin D if your body is to make efficient use of the calcium in the foods you eat.

Calcium, none too plentiful at best, and now predicted to become deficient in the nation's diet, is the mineral needed to develop and to nourish strong bones, sound teeth. But calcium without Vitamin D is largely wasted.

Safest way to make sure you are obtaining the Vitamin D you need, and that your body is efficiently utilizing the food calcium in your diet, is to buy and use Vitamin D fortified products licensed and approved by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

THERE IS NO NEED TO BE UNDERNOURISHED

Even with uncertain food supplies, your family can still be well nourished if you know the nutritional values of common foods. Get our new "Nutrition Check-Up Chart" to guide you to nourishing meals in spite of wartime food problems. Write for it today.

"THE MORNING MAIL"—three little words but magic ones. Smelling strongly of sea water, palm trees and airplane motors, the morning mail is what we in the Alumni Office call, "re-assuring." It is what we need to convince us that the job we're doing is an important one and worthwhile.

The morning mail tells us that the magazine is most of the men's only contact with the U. W. and is appreciated by Fighting Badgers who climbed the Hill before climbing the axis.

In the morning mail an ensign and a marine lieutenant write to us indignantly wanting to know "What the h happened in the Iowa game!" From an APO San Francisco address an army lieutenant wails about the scenery where he is, not living up to what's put out in the travel folders. "I'll take a Wisconsin moon over frozen Lake Mendota anytime," says he. Another Badger in North Africa happens to think how nice and cool it must be in Wisconsin so he sends us some desert heat and British humor, all via postcard.

They write and ask us to give their regards to the Union Terrace, and tell us what a reunion was had when Lippincott, '35, met Whittensee, '38, some place where it's always beastly hot, everyone speaks French and the natives beg all day.

The morning mail makes it clear to us that all our Fighting Badgers want in the South Pacific or in North Africa, on the high seas or "down under," as well as our Badgers in training camps in these United States, is news of their classmates, what's happened to Woosterman, '23, and where is Saltersall, '39, and what's he doing, and continued assurances that Madison is still the place of their dreams whose memory is becoming gilt-edged in their hearts.

So—if we tell our Fighting Badgers that not even a war can dull the brilliant blue of Lake Mendota or stop the soft, yellow sunshine from lazily drifting into lecture rooms in Bascom Hall, that the air in Madison is still cool and clear and sweet with the sound of birds and bells and the smell of spring, that pheasants and game still run wild and protected in the university's forest preserves, and how green the grass still grows while the mighty Wisconsin oaks stretch still more proud and lofty, then all our boys will be happy and satisfied, we can sit back and relax over a job well done, and wait for tomorrow morning's mail.

IF WE hadn't been interrupted by the necessity of my subject to present a newly-shaved face at his next engagement, which was in exactly 20 minutes from the time I introduced myself to him, and if it hadn't been for the annoying way that the telephones had of summoning my popular alumnus away from me at the most exasperating moments, and then, too, there were numerous men and women callers who came to pay their respects to the person who had had the room the previous night, (heaven only knows what kind of character HE must have been), and with my poor friend accidentally cutting his finger somehow or other from which the blood WOULD flow, well, if it hadn't been for all those things I might now be writing a Pulitzer-prize interview of Louis Lochner. However, all I can say is that an interview amid telephone calls, miscellaneous visitors, an interviewee with a face-full of shave cream and a practically severed finger which threatened to necessitate medical aid at any moment, is interesting, to say the least.

I was slightly floored, at times, but my gentleman with true equilibrium gained in 24 years with the press, took it nicely in his stride. At that, I suppose it WAS better than joint debates and fancy dress balls at Bad Nauheim in Germany, where he was interned, with a Gestapo behind him at every step. But more about that later.

Louis Lochner, who is one of our most outstanding alumni, distinguished foreign press correspondent who was head of the Associated Press Bureau in Berlin fourteen years and in 1939 won the Pulitzer prize for "distinguished foreign press service," was graduated from the University in 1909 and in 1910 became the first executive secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni Association.

He edited the magazine, (and pointed out to me that he did ALL the work with No assistants,) and tackled the pioneer job of getting in shape the alumni records which necessitated a tremendous amount of work and ingenuity. He ran an employment bureau of sorts, for students who wanted part-time work while they were going to school. His biggest contribution, perhaps, was his attempt to awaken alumni to the role they had to play with the alumni association. At that early time they didn't feel their responsibilities as they should and Louis started to build up and foster an alumni spirit.

In 1915 he became director of the middle-west department of the American Peace Society and in December went abroad with Henry Ford's envoy of world leaders seeking peace.

On his return he shifted emphasis just a bit and became editor of a labor news service which he carried on during the war, all the time working with and finding out from the workingman what kind of a post war world he wanted.

About 1921 he wanted to get away from it all, a feeling which we all have but aren't brave enough to follow through. Louis did, and went to Germany, doing free lance articles when he needed the money or felt the urge to write.

He loved the German republic and became very interested in the subject of the woman in the republican regime; incidentally, these stories he feels were his best contribution of that time. He attended various international congresses and studied the whole rehabilitation regime and the problems of the returning soldier.

Then inflation came to an end and Louis had to get himself a steady job. Thereby hangs a tale told in the best Hollywood manner. Louis went to Bremen one day to inspect the ship Columbus, now scuttled. He was invited on board and assigned the cabin next to the chief of the A.P. Berlin bureau whom he had met only superficially. Alumni Activities in War Time

by Louis Lochner, '09

SHOULD our Wisconsin Alumni Association, should our Wisconsin Alumni Clubs throughout the country continue their work even in wartime, when everybody seems to be enormously busy with some phase of the nation's war effort?

The answer, from the viewpoint of one who for years has been in distant lands, far away from his Alma Mater, is an emphatic YES.

Ask any alumnus who really cares about his university, but whom his work or his profession has taken overseas, and he will unhesitatingly tell you that he ever drew new strength, new inspiration, new encouragement for his work from the receipt of the organ which binds us all together—the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS.

The officers of the Association draw their inspiration from the Alumni Clubs everywhere. In proportion as these clubs remain active even in war-time, can the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS be an organ of inspiration, of optimism, of good cheer to the thousands of University of Wisconsin service men in the army posts and naval stations in this country or with the combatant troops in Africa, Europe, and the Far East.

The local U. W. Alumni Clubs might well help the war effort in another, concrete way: supposing they assumed a sort of sponsorship for the U. W. men from their own locality who have joined Uncle Sam's forces! The bustling little city of Attleboro, Mass., has undertaken to look after its native sons in a direct, personal way. Now it is a leather billfold with the words "Attleboro remembers you" imprinted in gold, now a cigarette case, a refill pencil, a note book, a pocket photo album, which are sent to them with the greetings of the community. From time to time it is some much appreciated morsel for the inner man that makes the native of this Massachusetts city remember the home folks with gratitude.

Louis Lochner

What about our Alumni Clubs undertaking to look after the men and women from their ranks who have joined the nation's fighting forces? Even a greeting from a local Alumni Club meeting, signed by those present, and with each signer contributing a few personal words, might mean much, very much to an alumnus in far-away Guadalcanal or Bizerte or even Dublin, especially if it should reach him on a day when his spirits are low, when he longs for a word from home. To realize that his fellow alumni are thinking of him and, in the hour of their gathering together in their local club, are speaking of him—that is something which is bound to go a long way toward morale building.

It might also be a fine thing for the local alumni clubs to arrange to have portions of letters from local service men who graduated from Wisconsin, read at their gatherings. That would not only bring the war closer to everybody in attendance, with a resultant determination to lend every effort toward its speedy conclusion, but would in turn stimulate added interest in these alumni get-togethers.

Dispense with alumni club meetings for the duration? By no means! Now, more than ever, the fellowship that is engendered at those meetings should be carefully nursed. That spirit of fellowship will then radiate in two directions: toward the men and women who are wearing Uncle Sam's uniform, and toward the Wisconsin Alumni Association and its executives charged with looking after the interests of all of us.

Junior World Citizens are organized by Clara Leiser, and in building a true and lasting peace, perhaps —

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them"

by

Marion Lea Stearns, '39

CHILD refugees have found a real friend in Clara Leiser, B. A. '24.

As a matter of fact her earnest interest in their welfare has resulted in the recent incorporation of Youth of All Nations, a veritable "junior league of nations," to quote Clara.

Keen interest in refugees of all ages and in their very real problems of adjustment, and primarily a foreboding alarm at the forces driving people into refugeeship, has motivated a great part of Miss Leiser's life since the winter of 1932-33 when, in Europe, she first encountered Nazism on the rise. A more dynamic form than bandying about fine phrases, this interest has been expressed in aggressive writing exposing the evils of Naziland, by personal kindness to refugees in New York, and by doing all in her power to ease the shock of adjustment for them, especially children.

For some time Clara Leiser was Secretary of the Probation Department in the Court of General Sessions of New York, the largest criminal court in the world. But on February 1 of last year she resigned to devote full time to the Youth of All Nations organization and to other war-time and toward-peace work.

Chief aim of Clara's organization—which has the enthusiastic approval of a board of "moral sponsors" composed of a large number of spokesmen for educational, religious, and governmental organizations, and world-minded writers and civic leaders—is "To create and foster understanding friendship between American-born boys and girls and those who have come to the United States from all other countries, and help prepare them for constructive citizenship in a world re-shaped for enduring peace."

All other purposes of the Youth of All Nations are bent toward this goal of establishing mutual understanding in active ways—through writing, radio, correspondence, and personal associations between boys and girls of all nationalities, races, and creeds.

To be published soon is a book, "Like a Sparrow," edited and translated by Clara Leiser, but written by a little French girl refugee, Ruth Sandmann. Just 9½ years of age when she arrived in America in 1941, and burning with the desire to tell her "life's experiences", Ruth wrote her book while staying with Clara in her home in New York City, 16 St. Luke's Place. Miss Leiser's introduction to Ruth's "Like a Sparrow" reflects the human sympathy and understanding she bestows generously on refugee children.

"It was Ruth's plight and pluck that really started this whole children's project," Clara says. "While it began as a project to help the 'refugee' children make friends among the Americans, it quickly developed and developed, until now I have something like a junior league of nations on my hands."

Apparently a good deal of time and effort can go into responding to requests from half a dozen government departments for information and material of one kind or another which one happens to have through first-hand study of the Nazi horror and acquaintance with numbers of refugees. C. L. has written scripts and been the 'guest-commentator' tagged onto government-produced dramatizations of Nazi doings, such as the 'This Is Our Enemy' programs of the War Production Board.

Recently Clara and some of her young friends who are members of Youth of All Nations have been making transcriptions for the Overseas Division of the Office of War Information. It doesn't require expertness in the psychology of international relations to say that people abroad—children and grown-ups alike—must be glad to know that children over here are concerned about their contemporaries everywhere and are eager to help them build a new and better world.

About the origin of this project, Clara Leiser writes:

"Less than two years ago a small girl came to the United States from France, hoping to write a book which would help other children. As the writing proceeded—in my home—I was shocked into fresh awareness of what it means for a child to see and hear and feel the horrors of war, to be twice driven into exile, to learn to live in one new country after another. Talking and writing to other shy foreign-born girls and boys underscored their obvious need—and desire—to form real friendships with our native-born children. The latter indicated similar wishes.

"I took up the situation with our own government officials . . . with numerous religious and educational leaders, with ministers and ambassadors representing the United Nations. All were enthusiastic about what I suggested, and gradually there evolved our Youth of All Nations club. . . .

"As for how we operate. We send letters to the boys and girls from many lands, welcoming them to the United States. We explain our objectives and ask them to join us in our adventure in international friendship. We invite them to tell some of their experiences and impressions, and to say something about their own problems in adjusting to a new life. Some of their stories get into newspapers and magazines, and some of them appear on radio programs.

"Next we help them make letter-friends with native-born children living in a different part of this vast country who have also expressed the wish to work with us. We enable all members to participate in various kinds of war-time work. Our ultimate aim is, as I have indicated, to help prepare for a healing, constructive peace that will endure."

Clara's "Kids" who, she says, "have a very moving sense of their responsibility, (or rather, the responsibilities the world is going to dump on their shoulders in all too few years) for building up the peaceful world", sent out a short wave message of hope to all the children of France on Bastille Day, broadcasting from Freedom House.

With the devotion and dynamic drive which fellow alumni have learned to associate with Clara Leiser, she is pouring out her energies, utilizing her capacity for organization, and giving of her ability to convey sympathetic thoughts and deep feelings in writing, to this cause of children.

Notes from Hollywood
about Joe Davies, '98, and "Mission to Moscow" —

Best Seller Into Movie

by Don King

Warner Brothers

A CINEMATIC combination of "Who's Who, Burke's Peerage, the Almanach de Gotha and the Statesman's Year Book is Warner Bros.' film version of "Mission to Moscow," the best seller by Joseph E. Davies, former United States ambassador to Russia, who was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1898, won his law degree there in 1901, and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by his alma mater at commencement, 1941.

Distinguished men in their own right are some of those who will appear as actors in this drama forged in the crucible of history. Joseph E. Davies, himself, delivers the prologue to the film version of his book, although the role of the ambassador is played in the picture by Walter Huston, chosen by the diplomat because he is "a typical American."

Although his last appearance as a thespian was as a collegiate devotee of the drama while a student at the University of Wisconsin, Davies set a mark for the Hollywood veterans to shoot at when Director Michael Curtiz filmed his delivery of the prologue. Davies ran through the not inconsiderable business assigned him and read the lines of the prologue—which he wrote himself—without a miscue or a bobble, although the scene runs an even four minutes on the screen.

Dudley Field Malone, famed international trial lawyer and orator, one-time collector of the Port of New York and assistant secretary of state in the administration of Woodrow Wilson, has a role in "Mission to Moscow," and an important one. It is Malone who portrays Winston Churchill. (Turn to page 265)

From a hobby to a career—
Book Reviews by Kathryn
Turney Garten reveal stories

Not Bound By A Cover

by

Marion Lea Stearns, '39

ACCLAIMED by many who have heard her as one of "America's foremost book reviewers," Kathryn Turney Garten, '22, has carved out for herself an interesting kind of work and has developed a special technique of presentation all her own.

Critics in the fourteen states in the Middle West, to which she limits her travels, vie with one another to try to describe the indefinable quality of Mrs. Garten's unique reviews which seem to fall somewhere between lectures and dramatic monologs. She makes her audiences feel keenly the intense drama beneath the lives of every character.

Books have been Kathryn Turney Garten's hobby for a long time. She majored in English literature at the University of Wisconsin, following two years at Butler university where she went after high school in Indianapolis, Indiana. Before graduation from the university Mrs. Garten had published some poetry, had taught classes in Biblical dramatization, and had tried her hand at novel writing. She wrote the lines for Miss H'Doubler's Dance Drama. But, she says, "When I was a senior, I danced, picnicked on the Point, and walked by Lake Mondota, dreaming of the future which contained nothing so fantastic as the idea of talking 'Books' and being paid for it!"

The happenchance of working in a book store in Indianapolis was the experience which started Mrs. Garten on her book reviewing career. She began modestly in 1929 with book talks in and near Indianapolis. Knowledge of her gift for bringing books to life soon spread far beyond the city. This season she is covering fourteen states, giving an average of six lectures a week from September to June. Chicagoans will hear her in May. An appearance in Detroit has come to be an annual occurrence. Last season she reviewed a book a week, in three installments, by electrical transcription over a national radio chain.

Kathryn Garten accredits her flair for story telling to inheritance from her father, an Indiana minister who achieved a reputation as a raconteur. It is her aim to present living portraits of the characters in the books she reviews, dealing with them always in relation to the world in which they lived. She believes, "Living literature penetrates the walls of time and space, it moves freely backward and forward through the centuries, it recognizes those qualities of human-kind which are universal; and since every society comes alive in the stories of its individuals, great and small, these are literature's life blood."

Story telling, she says, reveals how men and women of every period break sharply with their traditions, crack open the mold of their society, and forecast the shape of its successor. But the new retains much of the old.

A thorough student of literature and history, Mrs. Garten draws from an ever-replenished background of knowledge to give depth to her reviews. One who has heard her speak analyzes her presentation thus:

"She creates her living portraits with an historian's passion for facts, a woman's lively curiosity, and a deep belief in human dignity. She seeks always the personal uniqueness, the self-essence of her subject. Vividly and dramatically with the practiced art of long experience Mrs. Garten tells her tale of laughter and tears, frustration and fulfillment, purpose and achievement, until the individual pattern emerges clearly, unmistakably human, excitingly alive. Her's is the art of re-creation, narrated in a manner entirely her own."

Traveling to make lecture engagements is increasingly difficult this year, Mrs. Garten says, but she has missed only two lectures. Those who come to hear her are intensely interested and respond actively to her interpretations. Referring to the tastes of her audiences this season Mrs. Garten says, "They have no half-way desires. They want either to be frankly entertained, or, enlightened, and the books range from 'Mrs. Parkington' by Louis Bromfield to 'Behind the Face of Japan' by Upton Close. And, of course, there's the greatest demand for that perennial favorite and best seller, 'The Bible.'

"The audiences are so varied that were I to do the same book every day—which, of course, I don't, having about thirty going at the same time—it would be an entirely different talk. In Detroit, it's Town Hall; in Cleveland, the Council of Jewish Women; in St. Louis, it's Famous-Barr, the largest department store; in Knoxville, it's The News Sentinel; and in Milwaukee, the Altrusa club. There are churches, schools, sororities, men's clubs, women's clubs—each group a different kind of challenge."

Two things which contribute greatly to the effectiveness of Kathryn Turney Garten's book review presentations are the unusual quality of her voice, which possesses wide range and flexibility, and the restrained movements of her expressive, sensitive hands. Her gowns always earn description in reports of her reviews since they are frequently dramatic, and most becoming.

The personal life of a woman in intensive lecture work is of keen interest to fellow Wisconsin alumni. She says she absorbs the contents of an average of five books a week, doing the reading on buses, trains, and interurban cars. Assimilating the books to be reviewed is done when she walks. It is then that she acquaints herself with the characters and they become as real to her as living people. Considering the fact that she never uses notes when appearing before her audiences, it is remarkable to know she has more than 300 books in her repertory, and can review each from cover to cover without getting mixed up. This art she attributes to development of a definite technique for remembering them.

Kathryn Turney Garten makes her home in Indianapolis with her sister, Jody Turney, and a black Scottie, Tammy Turney, in a big, rambling old house at 2421 Carrollton avenue where the Turneys have lived for 25 years. July and August are spent in Pentwater, Michigan, from which Mrs. Garten goes to Ludington once a week to speak at Epworth Heights.

"The rest of the time I walk, swim, lie in the sun," she comments, "and catch up with my thinking. Evening means a concert on the beach with our portable victrola. My hobby is collecting records, and I have a symphony collection almost as complete as my library."

Miss Charlotte Gower Directs Training for Women Marines

MISS CHARLOTTE DAY GOWER, formerly assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Wisconsin, is now Captain Gower, and has been appointed by the navy department as director of training for the women's reserve of the famous fighting marine corps.

As professor of anthropology and dean of women at Lingnan university in Hong Kong, Capt. Gower was caught there when the Japanese assault started and she witnessed the fall of Hong Kong from the beginning to the end. She carried out first aid, rescue and supply work during the brutal 17 day siege.

Later she was put in a Japanese concentration camp, but about the only thing she recalls about that nightmare was that she almost starved but managed to keep busy teaching Chinese to other prisoners at the camp.

Capt. Gower was freed in an exchange of prisoners and returned to this country last fall aboard the exchange liner, Gripsholm. One of the first to apply when the marine corps created its women's reserves, Capt. Gower was the second officer commissioned.

Regents' Budget Presentation

THE University of Wisconsin budget received kind treatment from the joint finance committee of the state legislature as the 1943-45 budget bill was introduced in the assembly March 18.

Under the new budget bill the university will receive $53,800 more than was recommended by Governor Goodland, or a total of $8,217,180. This sum is $296,502 more than the university received from the 1941 legislature.

The finance committee eliminated Gov. Goodland's $125,000 for "general agricultural research," providing specific grants for fur, tobacco, truck crop, apple scab, potato, game, trichomoniasis, and canning industry research.

The joint committee on finance also boosted from $10,000 to $15,000 annually the amount the university may spend on cancer research.

Briefly summarizing the university's budget appeal as presented to the joint committee on finance by the regents of the University of Wisconsin, the requests are as follows:

1-A Operation -----$2,522,500

This is the same amount provided by the 1939 and 1941 legislature, although it does represent a reduction in operating costs. This sum remains unchanged because the reduction in operating costs is offset by the reduction in revenue caused by the decreased enrollment and loss in student fees.

20.415-1 General Appropriation ---$ 95,000

20.415-3 War Emergency -----$350,000

There are certain emergency costs brought on by the war that can not be absorbed by the regular university budget, such as—the cost-of-living increase in the salaries of employees in the lower brackets; the change from a nine-months year to a full year-round operation; the fact that many of the professors now on a leave of absence without pay will be coming back and the university will need a fund for salaries for these men as they return.

1-AB Coal -----$152,450

"Sum-sufficient",

L-AC Insurance -----$ 36,500

The Governor recommended an annual appropriation of $30,000 which sum the regents believe to be acceptable.

1-C Maintenance -----$237,500

The Governor has recommended $200,000 annually, a decrease of $37,500 a year. The regents believe that $237,500 is the minimum amount needed to protect the state's property at the university against excessive depreciation and deferred maintenance.

1-D Miscellaneous Capital -----$175,000

This sum is needed to buy scientific apparatus and equipment needed for research and teaching; also, as the university has spent a minimum for libraries, it is not advisable to reduce further the annual expenditure for libraries.

1-R Gaelic and Irish History -----$7,000

This appropriation was established by the legislature: whether it is to be continued is a matter of state policy.

1-S Polish Language -----$7,000

Same comments apply as to 1-R.

1-T School of Library Science -----$15,000

Same as appropriation for the past two years.

2-A Operation Extension -----$282,900

The Governor has recommended $275,000, a decrease of $7,900 from the request presented, but nevertheless acceptable to the regents.

2-B Miscellaneous Capital—
Extension -----$6,000

Scientific equipment for the laboratories in the Milwaukee Center of the Extension division is urgently needed and funds should be made available for important research and teaching services.

REUNIONS ARE COMING !

As long as the Union Terrace remains so inviting, and as long as there are alumni in and around Madison who are able to come back, there will be reunions. There will be a reunion this year, not the same as there have been in years gone by, true. There won't be that kind of a reunion till the lights go on again all over the world, and till our boys come marching back from a job well done.

This year reunions will be simplified and streamlined to fit the times. Attendance will undoubtedly be smaller, but alumni in and around Madison will come back to "carry on" and keep class organizations and alumni friendships alive and functioning.

A double feature this year presents Commencement on the same date as Alumni Day—May 29. An added attraction will be the three-day Memorial holiday weekend.

A tentative schedule of events places the regular X-club dinner in the Union on the Friday night preceding graduation. President John S. Lord has arranged for Howard Mumford Jones, '14, professor of English at Harvard university, to be the main speaker of the Friday evening program.

The annual president's reception will be held in the Dykstra home following the dinner.

Commencement will take place Saturday morning, and the reunioning classes will hold individual luncheons Saturday noon in the Union. Honors Convocation will be Saturday afternoon with the annual alumni banquet Saturday evening.

Sunday morning alumni will gather for informal breakfasts on the Union Terrace, an innovation of the past few years which has proved exceptionally popular. The Half Century Club will meet Saturday noon.

According to class president Charles B. Rogers, the class of 1893 has already started to make plans for celebrating their 50th anniversary. The class of 1898 will hold their 45th reunion Saturday afternoon, President H. J. Thorkelson reports. Wm. H. Haight and Miss Beulah Post are making plans for the 40th reunion and directory of the class of 1903. Judge Alvin Reiss, '13, has announced that plans for the 30th reunion of the class of '13 are in the hands of a committee comprised of Art Steen, Dr. Erwin Schmidt, and Mrs. Hazel Gray Immell.

Leroy Burlingame has appointed Mrs. V. W. Meloche head of the 25th reunion and directory of the class of 1918, and Hugh Oldenburg is making arrangements for the tenth reunion of the class of 1933.

Alumni who will be unable to return for reunion are reminded that they may still share in alumni activities by supporting one of the most important jobs yet tackled by the Wisconsin Alumni Association, that of sending its publications, free, to Badgers in military service.

The Association also urges members who won't be coming back to take the money they would otherwise spend on a trip to Madison, and put this money in the safest and surest investment in the world—Government War Bonds and Savings Stamps!

It's Founders' Day, February 5, 1943, and the University of Wisconsin celebrates its birthday and heritage,

Ninety-four Years for Freedom

FOUNDERS' Day was appropriately celebrated February 5, on the University of Wisconsin's 94th birthday, by a special Founders' Day broadcast over the Wisconsin network with representatives of the service groups on the campus and the president of the university paying tribute to the founders by describing the contribution to the national war effort now being made by the University of Wisconsin.

John Berge, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni Association, dedicated the program to the alumni in the armed forces, saying, "To the Fighting Badgers, the University of Wisconsin is a symbol of this war's objectives. It represents the freedom which characterizes American life and democracy. Within its halls, our Fighting Badgers learned that freedom is precious—that it is worth fighting for. We salute these gallant Badgers and renew the pledge we made to them on Founders' Day a year ago; To do all within our power to give them the guns, planes, and ships they need to win a glorious victory. We remind them again that we appreciate, gratefully, what they are doing to preserve decency, humanity, and integrity in a world threatened by power-mad gangsters. We won't let them down."

Lt. Comdr. Elmer H. Schubert, executive officer of the navy schools on the campus, described the development and expansion of the navy at Wisconsin, and said, "It is very gratifying that this ninety-fourth anniversary of the founding of this great university is devoted to an appraisal of its educational efforts in terms of training students for the winning of the war. The retooling of an educational enterprise is not an easy project. Its roots are planted in the good earth of peace; its purposes are dedicated to the betterment of civilization.

"But this re-evaluation by educational institutions is gratifying—as I said—since it springs from the same force which has impelled the free people of the world to protect the institutions which keep them free. That they will succeed is our hope and prayer."

Lt. (j.g.) Elinor D. Rich, officer-in-charge of the WAVES, declared, "This is our FIRST year on the campus of the University of Wisconsin. The Naval Training School for enlisted women radio operators was the first in the nation. To this first class, the officials of the university said, with sincerity and a wealth of human understanding:

"We consider each of you one of our own students. Here is a beautiful campus, a famous institution of learning. We share it gladly with you."

"You know, the United States Navy said much the same thing when the Women's Reserve was formed as an integral part of the service. To their welcome you have added YOURS. For that reason, we of the WAVES are glad and proud to become part of your traditions and history. You have passed the final test of a university . . . that of 'adjusting to the needs of the times.' The Women's Reserve thank you!"

Now a campus, 94 years ago a cow pasture . . .

Lt. Col. Franklin W. Clarke, executive officer of the university ROTC, described the many activities carried on by the ROTC. "Last June we graduated sixty-five officers. Today, members of that class are serving in England, Ireland, Puerto Rico, Panama, Alaska, Hawaii, the Solomons, Egypt, India, Australia and North Africa. The class of nineteen forty-three, who will be commissioned about September first, numbers eighty-nine. The class of forty-four, with one hundred fifteen members, will receive their commissions a few months later.

"Before the end of this year, these men will be on active duty with those other loyal Badgers, whose stations are so scattered over the face of the earth that one can truly say, 'The sun never sets on the fighting sons of Wisconsin.'"

President Dykstra addressed the Founders' Day radio audience, saying "I am glad for the opportunity to greet alumni and friends of the university on our 94th birthday. For the fourth time in our university history we are in war service to the nation. When we were only an infant institution our men marched away to serve with the Boys in Blue. When we were a lusty adolescent students volunteered to fight for Cuban freedom. In 1917 our boys served on the Western Front in Europe with the hope that the world might be made a safe place in which to practice the democratic art of living. Today we have returned to that unfinished business and thousands of Wisconsin men are fighting the enemies of peace and freedom in scores of places all over the world. This time Wisconsin is determined to finish the job begun in 1917 and we shall not be satisfied until we have guaranteed a world safe from aggressors and enemies of peace and human decency. The university has dedicated itself to the immediate task of winning the war on the battlefield and to the concurrent job of making a sound and lasting peace.

"Our University accepts as basic the implications of our American way of life. On this, our 94th birthday, we pledge to Wisconsin, to our nation and to the United Nations our total effort for the kind of a world for which we do battle, for a world of human decency, of organized peace and of human brotherhood. We cannot do less and live up to our high heritage. We are content and happy to serve our generation and our children's children in the spirit of our founding fathers and with our eyes open to the challenge of the future. With your support and encouragement we shall carry on with that same courage and fearlessness which animates Wisconsin men on every front as they attack the enemies of freedom and mankind. I am confident that the future is with us and that as Joe Louis said, "We are on God's side."

Since July 1940, when an article in The Wisconsin Alumnus refreshed the memories of alums as to "whirlwind" Clara, she has published two books, SKELETON OF JUSTICE, done in collaboration with a German journalist, telling the story of the corruption of the German criminal courts by the Propaganda Ministry; and REFUGEE, another collaboration and translation job which is still the only book written jointly by a German working man and his wife, both "Aryan", a graphic portrayal of reasons for the rise of Nazism and of its effects. This coming spring CRY TO MY COUNTRYMEN by Clara Leiser is due for publication, a "small book," she says, "but I hope with some awakening value regarding the issues at stake in this whole current mess."

Clara Leiser's enthusiastic pursuit toward any goal which she deems worthwhile stands out in everything she writes, says, and certainly in her bearing. Her earnestness imbues those dealing with her with the desire to lend a hand in her task. She refers to her current work as a "Mount Everest of a job" and she will welcome any assistance Wisconsin alumni in New York City and elsewhere care to give her and her project.

Clara would like to have the names of all children ALUMNUS readers think would be interested in participation in the Youth of All Nations—native and foreign-born alike. And if readers in the armed forces want to hear from "kids," they've only to send a post card to 16 St. Luke's Place, New York, N. Y., and indicate this wish.

simultaneously decided to stroll the deck, and they met in the most coincidental manner. They talked, and the A.P. chief mentioned China with great affection. Our friend asked him if he knew Paul S. Reinsch, '89, who had been a professor of International Relations at Wisconsin and at that time was minister to China. That mutual friendship established a bond of sympathy and Lochner departed with a request for Chief Smith to let him know if he heard of an opening for a rising young journalist. On Monday Mr. Smith called Mr. Lochner and that's how he started in '24 with the bureau of which he became chief in four years, and that's why Louis believes in Santa Claus but still cautions all young people who desire to get into foreign correspondence to start at the home office.

From his start in the A.P. Berlin bureau he became known as one of the leading foreign correspondents. He has interviewed Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Mussolini, Hindenburg, Kaiser Wilhelm II, Benes, Pope Pius XII, Laval, Briand, a few of the more prominent figures. During his journalistic career in Germany he scored many firsts, among them Hitler's historic first visit to Mussolini in 1938 and the story of the assassination of Dollfuss. In 1941 he made a trip to the Russian front and brought back an eyewitness account of the men and the fighting.

And then, the day after that date that will live in infamy, and U. S. was in a state of war with Germany, Louis was interned at Bad Nauheim with other American correspondents.

It was there that he took language lessons and took part in spelling bees and dressed for fancy dress balls—to help pass the time until he was released and returned to the U. S. in June, 1942.

Writing his best seller "What About Germany" kept him busy until fall when he started out on the coast-to-coast lecture tour which eventually brought him to Madison to talk to a most appreciative audience in the Memorial Union Theater Thursday night, January 22. Louis waived all compensation and a total of $710.35 went into the Association's fund for scholarships and sending Association publications to fighting Badgers in the armed forces.

Lochner now spends all his time preaching all-out efforts to beat the Nazis. He had a front seat at that most terrible of tragedies, the rise of Hitler in Germany, and he knows why the defeat of Naziism vitally effects everyone of us. He knows that Hitler wants a new order in the whole world, not only in Europe, and that his plans eventually called for an invasion of our continent via South America. That is why he pounds home to the American people at every lecture stop the message that the more the nation goes all-out for war the quicker the enemy can be beaten.

Throughout all of his travels and his pre-occupation with problems of vital national interest, Louis has never lost touch with the University of Wisconsin and the Wisconsin Alumni Association. He is one of the most loyal of alumni, and I, for one am proud to be a fellow alumnus of Louis Lochner, University of Wisconsin, '09.

"Why I Belong to the Wisconsin Alumni Ass'n"

"When I was graduated from the U. W. in 1909, I no more thought of NOT joining the Wisconsin Alumni Association than I thought of NOT picking up my B. A. diploma. Joining the Alumni Association meant that I was to be privileged to remain a part of the institution that had fitted me for life, that had given me new visions of civic responsibility, that had brought me opportunities for making friendships to outlast the years to come. Joining the Alumni Association also meant that I was to have an opportunity in a small way to show my gratitude to my Alma Mater.

I have never regretted my membership of almost 34 years. Throughout this time, I have received far more from the Alumni Association than I ever contributed to Wisconsin. The Alumni Association kept alive in me that feeling of pride in my Alma Mater that I had when leaving the campus in 1909, and increased my affection for it as I read of its progress in our Wisconsin Alumnus."

LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

from Lincoln’s Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865.

Once in awhile we receive a letter too good not to pass on. A Badger remembers the old school and writes

A Letter From Pearl Harbor

Feb. 15, 1943

Dear Editor Lamoreaux:

I've never been able to understand (never investigated very far, as a matter of fact) how the Alum. Assn. kept up with my address. The Badger Quarterly followed me all over the United States, and now comes to me out here. And now the mystery deepens with the receipt of the November issue of the Wisconsin Alumnus. Never paid the Assn. a penny, but I'm beginning to feel just a trifle guilty. Sigma Delta Chi sends me the Quill, too. No money for that, either. Well, God bless you all.

"This War Is Being Fought in the Damndest Places"

I noticed a little message from you in this issue of the Alumnus, and here's wishing you luck, as per your request. You'll need that, and stamina, and enormous amounts of patience. Any editor does. So here's a letter from the Pacific ocean areas. I'm writing it on the quiet section of a long night watch. It's quiet, I might add, because Admiral Halsey has knocked the hell out of the Japs down under. It's long, because everything in this war is drawn out that way. You'd be surprised, but this war is being fought in some of the damndest places and in the damndest ways. Yes, you really would be surprised.

The first item that caught my attention in your very readable first issue was the editorial note preceding the Helen White piece on p. 6. It seems to me (of course my memory may be no good) that Carl Russell Fish was famous—in addition to his academic achievements—for a red vest, not red underwear. He used to wear it on such formal and state occasions as Gridiron dinners and football rallies. I never quite understood the relationship between history and football hysteria, but I suppose there was some subterranean link. In any event, most rallies, if they were at all organized, had somewhere on the program a skyrocket for Fish. He was quite a wit, even in front of a campus bonfire. And altho we weren't winning many football games in those years, the rallies were pretty stimulating affairs.

"Econ 1a — My God! What a Show!"

Then your note mentioned "Wild Bill" Kiekhofer. A great guy. Sort of a cross between Billy Sunday and a strip tease economist. Econ 1a in the Music Hall—my God what a show! He handed down the laws of supply and demand as though he were driving the devils clean out of the temple. As I recall them, his lectures were as stimulating as a strong mixture of brassy vaudeville and evangelical church. There was some common sense, too. I guess some of the common sense stuck. But I'll never forget the artistry of his showmanship. I used to sit in that same Hall for what was laughingly called "Music Appreciation," and thought how much more fun Econ 1a was.

The piece on Prof. White was pretty good, but I think your reporter made her sort of stuffy. I don't believe she is. She's probably forgotten me, but she was a great spiritual help at one stage of my bumbling academic career. I don't recall much about the course. All I remember—but this part I remember vividly—is that at the same time I was taking second year French and having one hell of a struggle with it. Miss White somehow helped me retain my sanity, and a shy conviction that at least in one language I could struggle through communication. Which was much more than my French Prof. thought. By one of those happy human characteristics, I have forgotten the French Prof.'s name. I'm sure he has long since dismissed my sad name from his mind. At any rate, give Miss White my love and good wishes. I didn't understand much about her "William Blake," but that was my fault. I was pretty conceited then, and conceited persons never get much out of books.

"Pop Goodnight Like Bascom Hall — Just Stayed There"

I see by another article that Pop Goodnight isn't going to run the summer session any more, but will still dean the men. I don't believe Pop ever cared much for me. I was writing some pretty snooty editorials in the Daily Cardinal about that time—Bill Stevens and I both were, I'm rather afraid. Pop certainly put up with a lot from the Cardinal. So did Prexy Frank. But Pop proved to be sort of like Bascom Hill—he just stayed there. And us editors, we all got out. Well, give Pop my best wishes for a speedy return to full health, and say I hope that all is forgiven.

You have a picture of Grant Hyde. I suppose by the time the war is wrapped up and put away, the good director will have mostly lady reporters in South Hall. They are certainly taking over the City Rooms. Dr. Hyde and I used to disagree about certain points in journalism. And I imagine the Cardinal used to make him squirm at breakfast occasionally. Bill Stevens and I were pretty strenuous with the type metal at times. Once we conducted a smash-bang campaign to raise a monument fund for Franz, the dog. Franz had innocently (he couldn't read very well) got himself shot and killed trespassing on Picnic Point, where there No Trespassing signs in those days. The Cardinal worked up quite a journalistic fever about that incident. I don't remember just how much dough we raised, but it was fairly substantial (little figures meant more then). We could not, however, get permission to erect the monument, once we had the money. The guy that didn't want Franz on his property at Picnic Point certainly didn't want any monument to him, either. But Bill and I were pretty vigorous about the whole thing, even though in the end we had to (because there was nothing else to do with it) give the money to some fund for sick students but poor. Maybe Grant gave us credit for enterprise, although he—along with most of Wisconsin's editors, thought we were just a little too batty for the great state university. Well, maybe we were.

"Never Realize What They're Fighting For Till . . ."

Great days. I was a fire and brimstone pacifist of the misguided 1920-30 school. You weren't going to catch me in uniform if another one came along, no sir. Well, I've been in one since the spring of '41, when I came out here. And I happened to be at Pearl Harbor on the brilliantly horrible Sunday morning. I'd shed any ideas of pacifism long before then, but a lot of other things happened too. Anyway, tell the boys they'll never really appreciate what they're fighting for until they come square against the possibility of losing the whole shebang.

Sincerely yours,

E. Forrest Allen.

(Editor's Note: E. Forrest Allen, B. A. '31, was, as he said, editor of the Daily Cardinal in his days on the campus. He is now a Lt. Comdr. in the U. S. Navy, stationed at Pearl Harbor, T. H.)

Same amount as has been appropriated the past two years.

3-A Agricultural Extension -----$106,000

The Governor has recommended $96,000, while actually, the appropriation of $106,000 requested by the regents was only enough to carry on the present program without expansion on a full year's basis.

3-D Branch Experiment Stations ---$38,000

No change compared with the current appropriations.

Special Agricultural Research Appropriations

3-M Fur Research -----	$15,000
3-P Tobacco Investigation ----	10,000

An increase of $12,500 is necessary because of the increased demand for Wasserman tests and blood chemistry particularly for selective service examinations.

14 Hygienic Laboratory -----$45,600

Same amount now being appropriated.

The Governor has recommended an annual appropriation of $15,000, an increase to permit a study of the mineral and ore deposits of the state and the availability of such deposits for use in the war effort.

After a more complete review the university is prepared to extend this program and respectfully requests that the appropriation be increased to $15,000.

Post War Building Plan Proposed

THE joint committee on finance heard an appeal March 18 for post-war construction of a modern dairy building and a new home economics building at the university to improve services to citizens of the state.

Assemblyman Edwin J. Larson (R-Sheboygan) sponsored the bill which calls for $400,000 for a dairy building, and Sen. William Freehoff, (R-Waukesha) is author of the bill asking $350,000 for a wing for the home economics building.

Dean Christensen of the College of Agriculture told the committee that the present dairy building was built in 1890 when there were 94 students at the College of Agriculture. He said the college now has more than 2,100 students. "The present building is obsolete and unsanitary and the staff is working under conditions next to impossible," he said, adding that many of the dairy companies in the state had better equipment.

Dean Christensen and Miss Francis Zuill, dean of the home economics school, explained the demand there is for home ec. graduates, and the limited space and equipment for teaching in the present building. Built in 1914 for 250 students, the present building must accommodate more than 600 students. "We are handicapped in trying to meet some of the war work demanded of us because we have neither the equipment nor the facilities to do such work," said Dean Christensen.

Purely Coincidental

SOMETHING should be done. This time it's about the Gremlins in the rathskeller. The rathskeller is no place for them. Things are confused enough down there without a lot of little creatures hopping around and making life unbearable. And if Porter Butts won't—or can't—do something about them, we will.

Rathskeller Gremlins are almost impossible to describe, except that they speak only in short, sharp whistles and are the color of rather old hamburgers. How they first got into the place is still pretty much of a mystery. One theory is that an air corps man on leave from Randolph field unwittingly carried one in last September, and that it settled down behind the counter to begin taking advantage of this hitherto unexplored field for Gremlins.

At any rate, they are here. In fact, they have by now assumed almost complete control of the rathskeller, and have even seeped as far West as the bowling alleys, where a few of the more daring pioneers among them are experimenting with bowling balls. A Gremlin riding astride a fast moving bowling ball can do a lot of damage.

But our main point of discussion really centers around those in the rathskeller proper. Their actions can only be described by the word Gremlinesque. For instance:

Their main delight is distracting the attention of the waiters. When you go up to the counter and stand there, sometimes for a long, long time, without managing to catch a waiter's eye, it is most likely because some counter Gremlin has engaged him in conversation. Of course the waiter can never exactly hear what his Gremlin is trying to say to him (this accounts for the peculiar vacant stare of rathskeller waiters.) This frightens him (the waiter) so that he has to go outside to the rest room and lie down for fifteen minutes. You are left waiting for your hamburger.

If, by some lucky chance, you do manage to give your order to some one, the Gremlins are still right on the ball to see that nothing goes according to plan. Suppose you call for a large coke. The minute the words "large coke" have left your mouth, one of them jumps up to the waiter's ear and whistles into it, thereby distorting your order so thoroughly that you will be presented with a chocolate malted and requested to pay the cashier fifteen cents.

The free-lance Gremlins have even more fun. The sole job of one group consists of putting ten nickles at once in the juke box to play "Why Don't You Do Right?". Another contingent spends all its time clustering around table legs and jiggling them back and forth. One particularly hardy breed is in charge of the overcoat division. They are responsible for the fact that on busy evenings all the unoccupied chairs in the rathskeller have overcoats on them. However, don't make the mistake of sitting down in one of them anyway. There is a chance that the coat does not belong to a Gremlin, but to a large nervous football player.

Perhaps the above remarks will serve to give the student body some idea of the Gremlin menace, to which so many of us have been blind. Some plan must be found to eliminate them before they spread all over the campus. Don't think they aren't going to try. The other day one was discovered in Bascom reading room sliding up and down the book slot

CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE

Published for Badgers Over-Seas by the Wisconsin Alumni Association

Here is the mast-head of our newest publication. The first issue of the CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE was mailed on March 18 to seven hundred Fighting Badgers in over-seas service.

CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE is published by the Wisconsin Alumni Association to furnish university and alumni news to the hundreds of Fighting Badgers over-seas; in Northern Africa, Iceland, Alaska, Hawaii, Guadalcanal and the other far-flung battle-fronts where Wisconsin alumni are doing such a grand job. You, too, will get this new publication when and if you leave the United States — provided you send us your APO address.

CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE will take the place of our regular Association publications which cannot be sent over-seas because of a new postal ruling which limits the mailing of newspapers and magazines outside of the continental United States.

You who are in the armed forces within the United States will, of course, continue to get our regular publications — as long as you keep us supplied with good addresses.

Some of you have apologized for asking us to make so many address changes. Don't worry about that. Just send us your addresses and let us worry about the job at this end. And don't forget — we're always pulling for you, so best of luck.

Yours for Victory,

John Berge,

Executive Secretary,

Wisconsin Alumni Association.

It's a part of that incredible story of Bataan, and the man is Major William Bradford, x'18. He was the last man to land on Corregidor, the leader of that storied bamboo fleet of rickety planes bound together with bailing wire and totally unarmed, the only group that actually got medicinal relief and supply planes into Bataan's beleaguered peninsula.

Over a route held by the Japs Major Bradford flew in a civilian plane, already condemned, with no radio, no lights, no landing beams, and unarmed. Twice he was cited for resourcefulness, and the citation that came with the Distinguished Flying Cross read:

"for extraordinary heroism in traversing long water routes in darkness through areas dominated by enemy planes in old, unarmed planes that required constant and ingenious maintenance care to insure completion of a single flight, to ferry vital war materials to combat zones in Bataan . . ."

Of his own feats of courage Major Bradford merely writes, ". . . will only confirm the fact that I was on Bataan and Corregidor, that I did some aerial blockade running and that I'm very lucky to be alive and free.

Was awarded the D.F.C. for that work in the Philippines and am deeply proud to have been able to help in some small measure toward the relief of our forces trapped there on Bataan and Corregidor. Since my return I have been rated as a senior pilot in the air corps. Three citations in General Orders were given units with which I was serving over there and I am entitled to wear the Citation Ribbon with Oak Leaf clusters. Thank you again and sincerely yours,

William R. Bradford."

A new building of the Bell Telephone Laboratories

Reason for Confidence

MORE than ninety per cent of American scientists are engaged in beating the Germans and Japanese.

More than ninety per cent of American scientific laboratory facilities are devoted to the same task.

American scientists are working at this job six or seven days a week, long hours, with few interruptions.

They are getting somewhere, too.

Every now and then the Germans and the Japanese have an unpleasant surprise.

They find that American science has caught up with them and passed them.

It is reassuring to us and discouraging to our enemies, for American scientific facilities are the greatest in the world. And they are functioning.

Little by little, some of the things that have been developed become public, but most of them you won't hear about until after the war.

But now, without the details, you can have faith that American research— industrial and academic combined — is rapidly giving our fighting forces an advantage.

Along with other American industry, the Bell Telephone System has its own Bell Laboratories — the largest in the world — working overtime for victory.

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Your continued help in making only vital calls to war-busy centers is a real contribution to the drive for victory.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SURGEON

A.P.O. 871

DIVISION OF PROFESSIONAL SERVICES

WSM/jwl

Men and Women of Wisconsin,

25 January 1943

My warmest felicitations upon your coming of age in medicine.

The Class of 1943 is the first to feel a measure of the impact of the accelerated program. To the sustaining faculty of the Medical School you owe a debt of appreciation that will grow with the perspective of years. However, it is apparent that education represents a bilateral effort. Your Class has reciprocated the superb spirit of the staff by a degree of application that promises fine dividends in attainment for the future.

You face your responsibilities in this mad world with an assurance and confidence borne of sound fundamental training. Your instructors have erected a scaffolding of method and principles for you. They may even have helped in laying certain foundation stones; but the real task of building the physician is your. The pattern is highly individualized. We depend upon you to build well with due consideration for spiritual, as well as material, values.

Disturbed as has been the last year of your medical work, no immediate answer to your future is available. In conformity with the general policy your internship is protected within certain limits. At the conclusion of this period of training most of you will be privileged to enter the armed services of our country to make your contribution to the survival of the American way of living. In the interest of medical service, civilian as well as military, I had hoped to see a clear design for the internship-residency before this time. Unless we are to experience the same plight as our Allies in the matter of specialized medical services, some well conceived plan for the assignment of young men and women for special training must be inaugurated without delay.

In my varied duties I encounter Wisconsin men in the armed forces in the classroom, in the ward and on the field. Word of their activities comes to me from every theater of operations. Not all of the battles are being waged on the field of combat. Whether in service or in civilian positions of responsibility, they are living up to the highest traditions of their origin. Great as is my pride in your accomplishment, I would not ask for you a bed of ease; but from the shoulders of your elders may you envision a future of peace and attainment whose horizon stretches ever towards the high objectives of the preservation and the restoration of health in all peoples.

God speed.

WM. S. MIDDLETON,
Lt. Col., Medical Corps,
Chief Consultant in Medicine.

University

Wisconsin Selected to Train Engineers

THE University of Wisconsin has been selected as one of the 281 non-federal schools, colleges, and universities to train army and navy engineers and army aviation cadets under the war and navy departments' program of utilizing educational institutions for specialized training of members of the armed forces.

According to President Dykstra, the new training program will take up about 75 per cent of the facilities of the College of Engineering. The engineers will be trained at the university while the army aviation cadets will receive their training at the extension divisions in Milwaukee and Racine.

Wartime Graduation of Med. School Held

THE first wartime graduation of the medical school was held March 2 when a class of 56 men and five women completed the university's accelerated medical training program.

The accelerated program, which was established last June in response to the requests of the army and navy for more qualified physicians, enables a student to finish his medical work in a little less than three years. Since the speed-up program was begun there have been no vacations with the exception of five days at Christmas.

Of the class of 61 students, 24 are slated for service in the Army Medical Corps and 14 in the Navy Medical Corps.

Library Professor is Member of WAAC

PROF. MARY DEVEREAUX, assistant professor of library science, has enlisted in the WAAC's after receiving news that four nephews had been reported missing.

Miss Devereaux came to the library school from Clarion, Pa., in 1938. During the last five years she has been in charge of the "Column of the Air" radio program heard on WHA.

Wartime Short Course Holds Graduation

THE second class to be graduated from Wisconsin's College of Agriculture emergency wartime short course received its certificates of attendance on March 12. The first class, which was graduated Feb. 8, consisted of 60 students while the present class has 150 members, the largest of the 60 emergency short course classes in the United States.

Wisconsin was the first school in the country to set up a program for an emergency wartime farming course consisting of five weeks of intensive training for the purpose of augmenting production on Wisconsin farms. The course, according to J. R. Barton, director, is planned to raise the efficiency of Wisconsin farms to a maximum in order to increase production to meet our wartime needs.

The subjects are of the same general order offered to regular short course students and are taught by the same instructors, but any overlapping and all but the essentials are omitted.

Graduation is not on a regular credit basis, but instead a certificate of attendance is awarded. Many of the graduates are interested in coming back at a later date and at that time the courses which they have taken in this emergency training may be applied toward the credits required by the regular short course.

Faculty Members are Given Leaves

SEVERAL University of Wisconsin faculty members have been granted leaves of absence by the board of regents in order that they may work with the government in the war effort.

Prof. Edwin E. Wittee of the economics department has been appointed chairman of the regional war labor board in Detroit, Mich. The Detroit region is one of two new regions created by the national board and includes the vital Michigan war production area.

Willard W. Blaesser, assistant dean of men, was granted a leave of absence until next July to perform a special service with the government in connection with the war. Miss Ineva Meyer, assistant to the dean of women, has been granted a leave of absence for the duration, during which time she will serve with the SPARS, women's auxiliary of the coast guard.

John T. Curtis, assistant professor of botany, who has been studying and doing research work for the government on latex-producing plants and their use in producing synthetic rubber, has had his one year leave extended for the duration of the war. Also doing work on raw materials is Hugh E. McKinstry, professor of geology, who has been granted a leave of absence for the second semester. Professor McKinstry is with the War Production board.

University Ranks Third in Doctor's Degrees

ACCORDING to a recent survey by Dr. Edward A. Henry, director of libraries at the University of Cincinnati, the University of Wisconsin ranks third in the nation in the number of doctor's degrees granted during the 1941-42 academic year. The university, which was surpassed only by Columbia university and the University of Chicago, granted 163 doctorates during the year. In the number of fields in which the institutions accepted dissertations, the university leads with 33.

Professor Neal Goes to Uruguay

PROF. NORMAN NEAL, of the agronomy and genetics department, left Wisconsin early in February to conduct a six weeks' investigation concerning the opportunities of improving the production of maize or corn in Uruguay.

His trip follows an invitation by the government of Uruguay and has the approval of the office of the co-ordinator of inter-American affairs.

Professor Neal is regarded as one of the leading corn breeders in the United States and has been instrumental in producing hybrid strains of corn adapted to the Wisconsin climate.

Professors Receive Fellowships, Awards

THE University of Toronto has announced that Dr. A. L. Tatum, professor of pharmacology at the university medical school, is the recipient of the Charles Mickle fellowship for 1942. The fellowship is in the nature of an award, being the annual income from an endowment of $25,000.

Dr. Tatum was cited by the University of Toronto as being considered by them to be "the member of the medical profession who has done most during the preceding 10 years to advance sound knowledge of a practical kind in medical art or science." The recognition came to Dr. Tatum specifically for his work in the study of cocaine poisoning and its treatment, morphine addiction, the use of picrotoxin as an antidote to barbiturate poisoning and his introduction of mapharsen for treatment of syphilis.

Prof. Glenn Trewartha, of the geology department, has been awarded a Guggenheim foundation subsidy for the second time in recognition of his work on Japan.

He will take a leave of absence from the university in order to revise his book, "A Reconnaissance Geography of Japan," published in 1935. Government agencies have requested the revision, since up-to-date information is needed for present and postwar activities.

The William Gibbs medal for outstanding work in applied chemistry has been awarded to Prof. C. A. Elvehjem of the biochemistry department by the Chicago section of the American Chemical society. The award was made for Professor Elvehjem's work which included the study of tissue respiration.

First Women's Co-op is Established

THE first women's co-operative, known as Groves house, has been established at the university. The living co-op, which stresses racial and economic toleration, houses 22 women. The house, formerly known as Groves house for men, was recently taken over by a group of co-eds under the auspices of the WSGA. Originally the house was named after Prof. Harold M. Groves, university economist and cooperative authority.

Complete Semester Offered for '43 Summer Session

RECOGNIZING the need for a fully trained manpower as essential for the welfare of the nation, the university is offering a full semester's program during the coming summer term. The session will concentrate on courses important for training men and women for war-time jobs. Many of the courses which will be offered during the 1943 summer session have been recognized as critical by the Selective Service administration, the War Manpower commission, and the army and navy departments.

Haresfoot Men to Present "The Women"

WISCONSIN'S Haresfoot Club will present Clare Boothe's "The Women" March 31, April 1, 2, and 3 in the Wisconsin Union. The "All our girls are men yet everyone's a lady" tradition will have lots of room for fun as there are 47 parts in the play, all written for women, that will be performed by men.

The Regents

DANIEL H. GRADY, Portage, appointed to the university board of regents by Governor Goodland, attended his first board meeting Saturday, February 27. Grady, whose term will expire in 1951, was appointed to succeed Mrs. Barbara Vergeront of Viroqua.

Regent Walter Hodgkins, Ashland, was elected vice-president of the board, the position previously held by Mrs. Vergeront.

Also appointed at Saturday's meeting were Regents A. T. Holmes, La Crosse, Herman L. Ekern, Madison, and Frank J. Sensenbrenner, Neenah, to work on the regent-alumni committee, of which Mr. Holmes will be chairman.

The committee is an outgrowth of the regents' feeling that closer cooperation between regents and alumni would benefit the university. Committee members representing the Wisconsin Alumni Association are Judge Clayton Van Pelt, Fond du Lac, Howard T. Greene, Genesee Depot, Harry Bullis, Minneapolis, Howard Potter, Chicago, and George I. Haight, Chicago.

Board Approves Leaves for 200 Faculty Members

THE university board of regents at their meetings last month approved more than 200 resignations, appointments, and leaves of absence among members of the university faculty.

The list goes on and on and is too long to print here, but suffice it to say that most of the leaves are granted for military duty or war work with the government in Washington.

Accept Gifts, Grants Totalling $27,866

GIFTS and grants totalling $27,866.67 were accepted for the university by the board of regents at their March meetings.

Largest of the grants was $4,500 given by the Josiah Macy, Jr., Foundation to the medical school for studies in neuropsychiatry with special reference to the armed forces, under the supervision of Dr. M. R. Harrower-Erickson.

The National Committee on Maternal Health, New York, granted $3,066.67 for research in the departments of medicine, urology, and biochemistry; and the Nutrition Foundation granted $2,900 for the study of vitamin needs of adult humans to be carried on in the medical school under Dr. Elmer L. Sevringhaus.

"All of these gifts and grants are accepted under regular university rules and regulations," Pres. Dykstra said in recommending their acceptance. "All findings resulting from research under them are published by the university and made available to all. No individual organization can get any patents out of such research. The university has full control, and all such gifts and grants are within the full discretion of the university and the board of regents."

Regents Decide Against Buying Ely's Papers

THE university board of regents decided against the $1,000 purchase of personal papers, correspondence and manuscripts relating to the work of Richard T. Ely during his term as director of the university agricultural economics department.

Regent Grady commented that since the material presumably consisted of manuscripts later brought out by the university in book form, this purchase would be of no great value.

The Campus at War

by Student Editor Ruth Jaeger

THE campus, which has seen many changes in the past months due to the influx of the navy, the army, the marines, and the WAVES, felt the influence of another change early this month as approximately 240 members of the ERC and 325 army air corps reservists left for service.

Fraternities were hard hit by the orders calling these men to duty, since 89 members of the ERC and 120 air corps reservists are members of fraternities. In addition to these about 110 fraternity men face induction through selective service before the end of this semester, and in the event that naval and marine reserves are called, 115 more will be affected.

To cope with the increasing loss of membership, the fraternities on the campus are considering cooperative eating plans or combined living quarters and in some cases will open their houses to roomers.

Graduate School Feels War's Effect THE graduate school at the university, which had 1,268 students during the academic year 1941-42, now has only 550 people taking work under its direction. This drop of 718 students is comparable to that of other schools in the country, since students taking graduate work are of the age to be called into military service.

Courses in Letters and Science have felt the influence of the war more than have the other courses, since the emphasis is now being placed on scientific and technical fields which are necessary to the war effort.

War Fund Gets Grid Receipts THE Badger Athletic board approved the contribution of $10,160.68 to the Army and Navy Relief fund late last month. This action was in accordance with the Western Conference action of last spring that a share of the receipts of Big Ten football games of 1942 be contributed to the relief funds of the two armed forces. According to Harry Stuhldreher, director of athletics, it was impossible to make its contribution at any earlier date because the Badger share of the receipts from the Great Lakes game had not been made known.

The sum contributed represents Wisconsin's total net share of the games played with Camp Grant and with Great Lakes last fall.

Wisconsin's contribution was limited to the total amount of the university's share of the gate receipts from these two games because, under state law, the university as a department of the state government cannot legally appropriate funds for any purpose. However, Stuhldreher explained that, according to contracts drawn up last spring, it was provided that Wisconsin might relinquish its share in the receipts from these two games to the Army and Navy Relief fund, in order that it might participate in the Big Ten's charity proposal.

120 WAVES Arrive in February NAVY WAVES, on the monthly quota system now to assure an even flow of graduates and students, arrived in the middle of February to take their training at the naval radio training school at the university. This contingent, which arrived in civilian clothing, will take its preliminary indoctrination here as well as further training. The WAVES who come in the following months will be in uniform and will have received their preliminary indoctrination on the campus of Iowa State Teachers' college at Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Dorothy Browne Edits Cardinal DOROTHY BROWNE, Madison, has been appointed editor of the Daily Cardinal following the resignation of Stanley Glowacki who left with the ERC early this month. She is the first woman editor of the paper in its 51 years of publication.

Houses are Vacated for Meteorologists SWENSON, Jones, and Chamberlin houses of the Kronshage units of the men's dormitories have been vacated by students and are now being occupied by student soldiers of the army meteorology training school.

Former occupants of the three halls are now living in Conover, Turner, Gilman, Mack and Showerman houses.

The first group of meteorologists, numbering 350, arrived Mar. 15, and another group of 150 will come to the campus on May 17.

Approximately half of the courses taken by the meteorologists, which are not included in the regular army training plan, will be in mathematics, while the remainder will concern

Men's dorms now house navy units, meteorologists

English, physics, and geography. The men are in uniform and are under military command, and are eligible for the school only after undergoing a basic training period in military camps.

War Causes Change in Social Events

THE war has changed the spring social calendar of the campus considerably, in that Military ball, which was scheduled for April 2, has been canceled, and Senior ball, renamed Senior Sendoff ball was held Mar. 6 instead of later in the year as has been customary in the past.

Senior Sendoff was not a dance primarily for seniors this year, but was an opportunity for members of the undergraduate classes, as well, to gather once more before many of them left for the services.

Agriculture

THE new head of the animal husbandry department of the College of Agriculture is Gus Bohstedt, widely known in the field of livestock nutrition. He succeeds A. E. Darlow who resigned to accept a similar position at Oklahoma A. & M. College.

In announcing the appointment of Bohstedt, Dean Christ L. Christensen also reported the promotion of Burr Ross from the rank of instructor to that of assistant professor of animal husbandry. Dean Christensen advised that the work in sheep husbandry in the reorganized department has been assigned to Burl Winchester, who did his graduate work at the university, specializing in genetics and animal husbandry.

Mr. Winchester has been serving as civilian instructor in the radio school at Truax Field, but army authorities have announced that they will be glad to release Winchester to the university where his training and experience can be directly employed in the livestock and meat production works so essential in the food program for victory.

Prof. Darlow, in accepting a position at Oklahoma A. & M., will be returning to his own alma mater.

Food Supplies Sufficient, Says Prof. W. P. Mortenson

IN TERMS of nutritive value and total energy we have more food than is recommended by the national Research Council, Prof. W. E. Mortenson, College of Agriculture, told radio listeners in a recent broadcast over the university "Our Enemies and Our Allies" program.

Prof. Mortenson has been serving since last April in Washington as chief of the dairy and poultry branch of the food section of the Office of Civilian Supply. His talk was transcribed in Washington.

Showing that the country will be reasonably well supplied with vitamin A, found in green and yellow vegetables as well as dairy products, he pointed out that there will also be a sufficient supply of iron and thiamine, which come mainly from whole grains and pork, and of ascorbic acid from citrus fruits and tomatoes.

"All of us Americans can make a contribution to the war by remembering what foods will give us a balanced diet, by not wasting foods and minerals. We have enough food for national vigor and health if we use it well," he declared.

New Test for Organic Matter

IN THE past it was a tedious laboratory task to determine organic matter content, but now a new portable kit is making it practical for nurserymen, foresters, and agricultural extension men to test for the organic or "humus" content of the soil. The test has been developed at the University of Wisconsin by S. A. Wilde and W. E. Putzer.

The new test should be most valuable in nursery and forestry work, where the organic matter content of the soil can determine success or failure, and in soil conservation, which is largely a matter of keeping enough organic matter in the soil to prevent erosion.

Seed Corn Driers Recruited for New Use SEED corn driers, on Wisconsin seed corn producing farms, may be recruited for a new use—dehydrating of sweet corn.

Dehydrated foods, much heralded as a solution to the wartime shipping problem, possibly could include sweet corn dehydrated in Wisconsin's seed corn driers, should the need arise. This was the conclusion reached by Robert Andrew and Norman Neal after a preliminary trial.

They submitted samples of their dehydrated sweet corn to the army quartermaster corps and a number of housewives for trial. Comments were uniformly encouraging, except that the reconstructed sweet corn was considered a little more "chewy" than desirable.

Corn driers, of which there are many in Wisconsin, ordinarily stand idle at the time when sweet corn is harvested. By using these driers it would enable processors to meet a wartime need with a minimum of new equipment.

To reconstitute dehydrated sweet corn, all that is necessary is to soak it in water for three or four hours, simmer for about fifteen minutes or until tender, salt and pepper to taste.

Staff Member Finds Poison Ivy Killer POISON IVY, impertinent weed which brings woe to picnickers and fruit growers and resists ordinary weed killers, can be squelched with ammonium sulfate, John Callenbach of the agricultural staff has found in two-year trials.

All the poison ivy was reported as killed in plots sprayed in June, 1941, with ammonium sulfate at a concentration of half a pound per gallon of water.

Although none of the old plants survived in 1942, a few come back from seed late in the summer.

Potato Research Finds Two Kinds Best to Plant

FOR the man who grows potatoes on a small scale or simply for home use, two new kinds, tested for half a dozen years at the university by potato research men, promise a complete answer for the question of what variety to plant.

The two are Red Warba, an exceptionally productive early potato, and Sebago, which is highly resistant to the late blight rot which has done so much damage throughout the state.

Red Warba potatoes frequently mature as much as ten days earlier than any other potato variety grown in America, Gus Rieman, potato specialist at the university, told growers recently. Yield tests carried on for six seasons and in nine Wisconsin counties show that they are one of the highest yielding early types, usually producing their crops before potato diseases and insect pests become severe.

As for the Sebago, farmers and gardeners who grew it last year report very little blight rot despite the fact that the crop was not sprayed. Under the same conditions considerable late blight rot developed in the other varieties, Rieman continued.

Engineering
by Joe Hull, E. E. '43

THE Chemical Engineering Department welcomes back Prof. Kenneth M. Watson, who was an assistant professor here before he left in 1931 to enter the petroleum industry.

Prof. Watson received his entire university training here, obtaining his Ph. D. in 1929. He served as instructor for the five years preceding this, and was then appointed assistant professor.

In 1931 he left to assume charge of pilot plant and physiochemical research for the Universal Oil Products Company and from 1936 to 1941 was director of engineering research there. This past year he was with the engineering department of the Gulf Oil Corp., and was the Gulf representative and chairman of the joint technical committee of major oil companies responsible for the development and design of synthetic rubber processes.

Prof. K. M. Watson, chemical engineering

Prof. Watson will continue his relations with the petroleum industry as a consulting engineer, and also expects his varied research here to include further work on petroleum and hydrocarbons. At the present he is working on a problem for the WPB, and is conducting a graduate course in distillation.

Senior chems know him as the co-author with Prof. Hougén of "Industrial Chemical Calculations." He has also written a section of "The Science of Petroleum," and has published many papers and bulletins in various technical journals, principally in "Industrial and Engineering Chemistry." He has approximately 10 patents issued and pending on various phases of petroleum engineering and technology. At the present he is a member of the Publications Committee of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and of the Symposium Committee of the Industrial Division of the American Chemical Society.

Faculty Read Papers at Chem Society Meet

FACULTY members of the department played an important part in the Ninth Annual Chemical Engineering Symposium on Industrial Reaction Rates, sponsored by the Division of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry of the American Chemical Society at the Palmer House, Chicago, December 28-29. Prof. O. A. Hougén served as chairman of the Industrial Division Symposium, of which Prof. K. M. Watson was also a member. Wisconsin men presented five out of the twelve papers given during the symposium.

Changes Occur in E. E. Curricula

ELECTRICAL engineering at Wisconsin offers two specialties, power and communications. Before the war both the power and the Concrete blocks being measured for freezing and thawing effects communications courses were always well filled. But from the time the trouble started in Europe in September, 1939, more and more electrical engineers have shifted to communications with the idea that this study would soon make them more valuable to Uncle Sam.

So it's communications all the way now for the Electricals. Starting out with simple vacuum tube theory, a succession of courses leads finally to a study of ultra-high-frequency techniques, which prepares the student for research and operational work on aircraft detection and army communication systems.

WARF Sponsors Engineering Apprentices

EACH year the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation awards twenty undergraduate apprenticeships to students of the natural sciences. The apprentice carries on a specialized research under the direction of a faculty member in the department in which he chooses to work.

Eleven engineers won apprenticeships this year. In chemical engineering Robert Buckley is studying the suitability of hydrocarbons for replacing fuel oil in carburated blue gas manufacture, Jerry Fallon is studying the extension and application of generalized thermodynamic relationships, and Roger Lescohier is investigating the thermodynamic properties of hydrocarbons. Arne Larson, a mechanical engineer, is studying comfort conditions in air conditioned spaces. In civil engineering Robert Munson is investigating the effect of method of freezing or thawing on durability of concrete, and Jesse Saemann is making exploratory tests on the fatigue properties of wood and plywood. The electrical engineers have three apprentices; James Cockrell is working on high-frequency measurements of wood glues, Paul Hoffmann, electrical appliances, and Joseph Hull, mass spectroscopy. In ag. engineering, Norval Rather is doing research work on hay making machinery. William Wilcox, a chemical engineer, was studying flotation reagents until his call into the service.

Gulf Oil Provides New Research Fellowship THE Gulf Oil Corporation of Pittsburg, Pa., has recently provided funds for a new graduate fellowship in the College of Engineering called the "Gulf Fellowship in Chemical Engineering." The purpose of the fellowship is to "encourage and facilitate advanced study and research by promising students in chemical engineering." The preferred field of study is catalysis and catalytic reactions, which is a speciality at Wisconsin. The fellowship may last for a period of three years with a monthly stipend of $100.

Durability of Concrete Studied in Mechs. Lab. A NON-INJURIOUS method of measuring the effects of freezing and thawing on a concrete beam is being studied in the materials testing laboratory.

The apparatus used is a clever combination of the principles of electronics and electrical measurements which have been devised by the electrical engineer to assist the materials engineer in his studies on the durability of materials.

Withey New President of American Concrete Institute PROF. MORTON O. WITHEY, professor of mechanics, was elected president of the American Concrete Institute at the society's convention held Feb. 17 in Chicago.

The Institute has 1900 members in the U.S. and abroad who are outstanding engineers, research men, manufacturers, cement producers, designers and architects.

A paper entitled "Some Long Tests of Concrete" by Prof. Withey and Kurt F. Wendt, associate professor of mechanics, appeared in the February issue of the Journal of American Concrete Institute.

Frank O. Holt, Dean of the Extension Division

Extension Division

by Editor Louis W. Bridgman

THE utmost in training resources for the army, navy and marines within the available physical means while offering unabated opportunity for the normal extension clientele—this is the double-sighted aim of the Extension division in time of war. The impact of the world struggle is being felt in every phase of extension teaching and service. The faculty has given up many members to the armed forces and to Washington agencies; the entire commonwealth is dotted with extension classes for war training; government war films are sent to organized groups in every section of the state; student pilots are undergoing fulltime, rigorous training at Madison and other centers under Extension division direction; men and women in the armed forces everywhere are finding stimulus for renewed education with the realization that from the University of Wisconsin they are offered a choice variety of study opportunities by mail, regardless of their distance or station.

Pilots Trained for U. S. Service In the wartime reorganization of education with a view to filling the growing needs of the armed services, the university continued at the forefront in providing pilot training facilities for the army, navy and marine corps. About 100 young men—60 naval aviation cadets, 40 marine glider pilots—are in training at Madison. The Extension division, in charge of these activities, also supervises pilot training programs at La Crosse State Teachers college and Stout institute.

With the broadening of its scope, this wartime agency has been given a new name — Civil Aeronautics Administration War Training service.

The pilot training activities at the University, dating from 1939, rank among the most productive in the nation in turning out students qualified for advanced training at army and navy flight schools. The nationwide enterprise has become the backbone of the pre-flight training in both branches. According to Col. Roscoe Turner, noted combat pilot of World War I, 16 of the 75 army fliers listed as having participated in the bombing of Tokyo were taking civilian pilot training less than a year before the raid.

Whole State is War Training Area

IMPRESSIVE totals characterize the federal and university program of war training known as "Engineering, Science and Management War Training." In this effort the Extension division has organized and directed the instruction for 572 classes in 56 Wisconsin cities, where nearly 700 industries have benefited from the special training given their employes. From the program's inception in January, 1942, to February, 1943, as many as 14,082 men and women received training for work in war industry—business and technical. Approximately 20 per cent were women, for whom the demand is great in order to replace men needed for the army and navy.

One phase is refresher courses designed to give teachers and prospective teachers adequate preparation in mathematics and physics to meet the increased demand for this teaching in our schools. The Extension division introduced correspondence courses in both subjects to supply approved instruction adequate to qualify for teaching positions in high schools. In the first month, enrollments were recorded from 30 cities. The courses, prepared by University of Wisconsin teachers, also are supplied to 18 other universities engaged in ESMWT activities.

A new field of training is map making, obviously important to a nation at war. Classes in military map making and topographic map making were started in Madison, catering to interests of men and women seeking government positions vital to war operations.

"Free" French for Soldiers

EXTENSION class offerings promoted in this period were distinguished by their application to the practical needs of a war economy. A free evening course in Practical French was offered in Madison for soldiers, university students, and others who may need a knowledge of French for war service. This was a contribution by members of the university's department of French, serving without compensation.

A new series of classes in marksmanship, giving training to amateurs, was undertaken at the stadium range. The first group in rifle shooting completed 12 weeks of instruction under Capt. J. J. Peot, of the university's military department, with ratings of rifleman first class bestowed upon 16 for having scored 245 or better out of 350 shots. Fourteen rated rifleman second class, and seven rifleman third class. Women were numerous in each class.

Army Institute Branches Out

CORRESPONDENCE courses, largely at government expense, as made available to soldiers everywhere by the War department through the Army Institute, proved so attractive as a means of educational training in spare time that the service has now been expanded to include men and women in the navy, marines, and coast guard. With the expansion came a change in name to the "United States Armed Forces Institute."

Operated at the University of Wisconsin the Institute administers 68 courses of its own, largely to promote military efficiency, and offers credit and non-credit courses of many standard educational institutions. The Extension division at Wisconsin regularly received enrollments of service students for its own correspondence courses.

Thousands from Main to Texas and from Iceland to Australia now are enjoying the benefits of the government's farsighted educational planning.

A similar service is offered to Wisconsin men and women in uniform, at the expense of the state of Wisconsin, through correspondence courses of the University under the legislature's generous subsidy.

War Films Bring Lessons to Civilians

THROUGH the bureau of visual instruction, as state depository of OWI films, the Extension division is making it easy and economical for organized groups anywhere—schools, clubs, churches, etc.—to show government war films at about the cost of transportation. About 50 copies—all in the sound field—are available. Recent subjects include "Campus on the March," "The Spirit of '43," "Negro Colleges in Wartime," "Lake Carrier," "Arms Behind the Army," "Manpower," "The Price of Victory," "Work of a Rescue Unit," "U. S. News Review," "Divide and Conquer," "Men of the Coast Guard," "Dover" and "Listen to Britain" (British films), "Winning Your Wings," "Target for Tonight," and "Youth on the Industrial Front."

Sailors, WAVES Come and Go

THE war has called still more naval enlistees from their Madison training stations. In January, Division 7 of the sailor contingent was graduated. Of 228 who finished, 45 had the rating of radioman third class. The same rating went to 107 WAVES, while 325 others were rated seaman radioman. Division 8 of the sailors, graduating in February, had a class of 226, of whom 71 were rated men.

Destinations of sailors at graduation were battle points all over the world; of WAVES, shore posts in the United States, relieving men for active service. A contingent of 55 WAVES reported for duty at the naval training center at Corpus Christi, Texas, while 30 others were transferred to the SPARS, women's reserve of the coast guard, for Atlantic and Pacific coast duty.

With the graduation of the last of the first WAVES contingent, their places were taken by a full complement of recruits from every part of the country. February arrivals totaled 127, March arrivals 120.

War Agencies Draw on Faculty

WITHDRAWALS from the Extension faculty for government service were increased with granting of leaves to Robert H. Weidman, of the German and French faculty of the University in Milwaukee, to do civilian work at Washington, and to James S. Parker, of the economics staff, for war work with the U. S. department of agriculture. Dr. John E. Hansen, chief of the bureau of visual instruction, enlisted in the army with rank as captain. He is a veteran of World War I.

Wilbur M. Hanley has been advanced from instructor to acting assistant professor of geography.

Rural Government is New Course

A NEGLECTED field of study—town and county government—is covered in a new extension course, "Rural Local Government," and the popular course in "American Government and Politics" has been revised to meet late developments in that field.

The social science department, where these courses originated, recently announced a new edition of "Social Problems," in the Appleton-Century series, a basic text in sociology at the university and used in a large number of colleges and universities. The authors are John L. Gillin, professor emeritus; Clarence G. Dittmer, now professor emeritus at New York university; Roy J. Colbert, professor of economics and sociology in the Extension division, and Norman M. Kastler, assistant professor of economics and sociology, Extension division.

Home Economics

SENATOR FREEHOFF of Waukesha introduced a bill into the Legislature which provides an appropriation of $350,000 for a new wing to the Home Economics Building. Mrs. Harriet Grace, '37, is president of the Wisconsin Home Economics Alumnae Association; Mrs. Mildred Frazee Ryerson, '22, is chairman of the legislative committee of the Association and Mrs. Virginia Clement Sprague, '30, is the third member of the committee.

On March 13 the students living in the Home Management House entertained at a tea for the members of the Daughters of Demeter, the organization to which all women connected with the College of Agriculture and wives of men who are on the staff of the College of Agriculture are eligible for membership.

Miss Zuill Heads Registration for Ration Books

THE week of February 22 found Miss Zuill again in charge of the registration of university students for a war ration book—this time Book II. The place of the registration was Lathrop Lounge. Members of the university staff as well as university students assisted with the registration. A total of 4,333 students received ration books.

Home Ec's Attend Intra-regional Meet

AN INTRA-REGIONAL Conference called by the Home Economics Division of the Office of Education to discuss war time problems in teacher training for home economics students was held at the Curtis Hotel in Minneapolis, February 10 to 12. Miss Rua Van Horn represented the Office of Education and acted as chairman of the meeting. Miss Ruth Henderson and Miss Frances Zuill were the representatives from the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Helen Brown Giessel, '27, is the chief instructor for the Navy Cooks and Bakers school which is operating under the Department of Residence Halls on the University campus.

School of Journalism

by Prof. Frank Thayer

BECAUSE of the great emergency demand in newspaper offices for women who have special training for editorial and advertising positions, the School of Journalism of the University of Wisconsin is announcing an intensive two-semester "short course", beginning in June, for women who have college degrees or substantial college background.

Chicago Sun's Catledge Wins Prized Red Derby TURNER CATLEDGE, editor of the Chicago Sun, was the winner of the Red Derby at the nineteenth annual gridiron banquet sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, at the Memorial Union Tuesday, March 2. The Red Derby, symbolic of the greatest contribution to the banquet, was awarded to Mr. Catledge who presented a clear statement of the Sun's position in the highly competitive Chicago newspaper field.

Charming hostesses dressed in gowns of the bustle age were introduced by the toastmaster, Joe Rothschild.

"Pat" Norris, as Chief Air Raid Warden, and Coach Arthur "Dynamite" Mansfield, as the hardboiled sergeant of the home guard, put some of Madison's "biggest" men through a terrifying calisthenics course.

A near record group of more than 300 business and professional leaders of Madison and nearby communities attended the banquet.

Theta Sigs Give Up Matrix for War Work AN 18 YEAR tradition was broken when members of Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalism sorority, decided to give up Matrix Table for the duration and devote themselves to war work. Taking over most of the publicity for the Campus War Council has become a major project, with different girls assigned to the various projects of the council. Other activities include publishing for former journalism students in service a monthly four-page military news-letter giving campus news, as well as names and addresses of former members of the School of Journalism who are now in the armed forces; assisting in the Work Nights held by the professional sororities to aid the Red Cross, and acting as USO hostesses.

SDX Initiates Louis Lochner LOUIS P. LOCHNER, '09, was honored by being made a professional member by the Wisconsin chapter of Sigma Delta Chi on January 21. Other professional members included:

Carl T. Anderson, King Features' creator of "Henry"; Charles E. Broughton, editor of the Sheboygan Press; W. J. Erlandson, '27, editor and publisher of the Lake Mills Leader; and W. D. Hoard, Jr., president of W. D. Hoard & Sons Company, Fort Atkinson, publishers of Hoard's Dairyman and the Jefferson County Union.

Norris G. Davis, graduate assistant in School of Journalism for the last two years working toward the doctor's degree, left the faculty to return to his home in Texas on February 18. He will enter the military forces.

Peter Turco, Sigma Delta Chi president, also left for military service.

Chicago Alumnae Hear Miss Patterson MISS HELEN M. PATTERSON, associate professor in the School of Journalism, spoke at the Founder's Day of the Wisconsin Alumnae Club at the College club in Chicago, February 6. Her talk covered the wartime Badger campus today in comparison with the campus in other war times.

Sigma Delta Chi initiates W. J. Erlandson, W. D. Hoard, Jr., Carl T. Anderson, Louis Lochner, President Peter Turco, Prof. Frank Thayer, advisor, and Charles E. Broughton

Miss Bauer Heads SDX Auxiliary

MABEL BAUER, secretary of the School of Journalism, was re-elected to the presidency of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Sigma Delta Chi. The purpose of the Ladies' Auxiliary is to help the chapter, particularly in regard to clerical work for the Gridiron Banquet and to assist in Sigma Delta Chi social functions.

Milwaukee Center by Recorder Irene M. Bozak

THE Milwaukee Center's list of men in the armed services grows each day. Students who were in the Army Air Forces reserves have all been called to active duty. According to Merlin L. Hayes, armed services representative, the ERC reserves will be called soon. The student council at the center is preparing an honor roll of its students in service. Recent additions to this list include: Maurice Behr, USNTS, 16th Reg., 21 Batt., Great Lakes, Ill.; F. Kingston Cook, Co. 41, USNTS, Great Lakes; Robert J. Foulks, Co. 215, USNTS, Great Lakes; Jerome Greenblatt, Co. 215, USNTS, Great Lakes; John L. Karrer, Co. 1959, 41st Batt., 25th Reg., Great Lakes; Keith Kummer, Co. 1936, USNTS, Great Lakes; Gerald J. Lacher, Pvt. U. S. Army, Area D, Bk. 118, 1610th R.R.C., Camp Grant, Ill.; Tony J. Muehlbauer, Co. 1843, USNTS, Great Lakes; James Retzer, Co. 246, Bat. 31, USNTS, Great Lakes.

Center Students Have Interesting Careers

MICHAEL WOLF, former assistant in botany and zoology at the center, who received his Ph. D. in botany from the university last year, is in charge of sanitation at Fort Benning, Ga.

Head of the laboratory, Ozalid Products Division of the General Aniline and Film Corporation in Johnson City, New York, is Sam C. Slifkin, who was chemistry stock room clerk at the center before going to Madison to complete work for his degree in chemistry.

Other former extension students who have had interesting careers include Edward Hoffmann who was in forestry engineering in California, Alaska, and Hawaii before his entry to the armed forces. Paul Danner has written that he is in ordnance training at the Aberdeen proving grounds in Maryland doing research work on bombs exploded and otherwise.

Charlotte Stewart writes that her brother, Charles E. Stewart, former Milwaukee Center student, who was married to Miss Lorraine Barnekow last April, was sent to Hawaii in May and is now in the Solomons. He is a First Lieutenant, and as maintenance officer he keeps the trucks and jeeps running.

Hugo Maechler, lieutenant (j.g.) is at present attending classes in the navy diesel engine training school at Beloit College. His brother, Gerald Maechler, is also lieutenant (j.g.) and is in command of a ship in the Pacific. Both Maechlers attended the Milwaukee Center and the university at Madison.

Corporal Philip F. Malmsten who is stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Co. B, 719th Reg. Op. Bn., recently was home on furlough and visited the Center.

Faculty at the Milwaukee Center are also in the news. Dr. Joseph G. Baier, Jr., associate professor of zoology, had a paper, "A Null-Reading Photoelectric Microdensitometer for Use in Turbidimetry and Abridged Spectrophotometry," appear in a recent issue of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

Acting as technical aide to the Committee on Scientific Instruments, Northwestern University, Evanston, Dr. Miles J. Martin is now on leave of absence from the Milwaukee Center. Dr. Robert H. Weidman who taught on the "hill" before joining the German department at the Milwaukee Center is also on leave of absence. He is with the government in Washington, D. C.

Medical School by Exec. Sec'y. Harold M. Coon

ON OCTOBER 15 Sister Kenny was presented as a feature at the Wisconsin Medical Society by Alpha Epsilon Iota Sorority. Her talk was of great interest. She gave in detail the story of her work with poliomyelitis cases and her struggle for recognition. A packed lecture hall expressed its appreciation of her—her sincerity—and her achievements.

But in the afternoon preceding her lecture she had an even more enthusiastic reception at the Wisconsin Orthopedic Hospital from the children there who had been receiving treatment for poliomyelitis that has come to be known as the "Kenny Method". The children, eighteen of them, were examined by Sister Kenny and their progress discussed with the hospital staff. This meant a great deal to the children as well as to the staff that has been caring for them since the treatment was made available by the hospital.

The story, however, really goes back to November of 1941 when the Morgan Manchester family of Madison presented a sum to the board of regents to be used by the Medical School for poliomyelitis work. This fund provided for the training of several staff members at Minneapolis under the personal direction of Sister Kenny. Following this the treatment was introduced at the Wisconsin Orthopedic Hospital. Fortunately the year 1942 was not an epidemic year for poliomyelitis in Wisconsin. Only forty-three cases were reported in the State but of these twenty-one were cared for in the University Hospital.

Med. School Graduates First War-time Class THE Medical School had its own graduation for the first war-time class, normally the Class of 1943, on March 2. Certificates showing the completion of the medical course were given to 62 students, 48 of whom are already commissioned and must, as a military obligation, begin the service of their interne training in order to complete their requirements for active duty in the military services.

President Dykstra presented the certificates and a message from the Surgeon-General of the Army was brought by Lt. Col. J. W. Gale of the 44th General (University of Wisconsin) Hospital Unit and greetings from the Surgeon-General of the Navy were given by Commander Hogan.

Frank L. Kozelka, Assistant Professor of Pathology in the Medical School, has been commissioned as Captain in the Army and is now on active duty.

School of Music

by George Hanson

ALUMNI whose introduction to the university came through the Music Clinic will welcome news of the 1943 "Victory Corps Clinic".

Dr. John Finley Williamson, conductor of the famous Westminster Choir and president of the Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N. J., will lend this year's Clinic great prestige in vocal fields. The outstanding success of the Westminster Choir in appearances with Toscanini, Stokowski, Bruno Walter, and the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia, and NBC orchestras witnesses Dr. Williamson's ability. He will teach and demonstrate his methods 4 hours a day to choir directors, with the All-State Chorus serving as laboratory.

Another new feature will be the complete housing of the Clinic in West High School. All classes and rehearsals will take place there; in addition, the supervised living quarters will be set up in the school building, so that all activities will be under one roof. This was partly brought about by the armed forces' use of the campus, but also furnishes ideal conditions for the conduct of the clinic.

Prof. L. L. Iltis is director of the Music Clinic for the fourth year. Prof. Raymond F. Dvorak, director of university bands, will conduct the All-State Band; and Richard C. Church, well-known director of instrumental music at West High School, Madison, will be in charge of the All-State Orchestra.

Pre-induction physical fitness training will be under the direction of Prof. A. R. Maseley. Professors Iltis and Gordon will direct the work in piano and musical fundamentals.

University Bands Still on Hand UNDISMAYED by competition from Paul McNutt, the University bands are continuing to carry their schedule. To date, 72 men have been lost to special training courses or to the induction centers, but performances proceed as usual. The weekly broadcast, the basketball and boxing, have all been supplied with music, plus 4 graduation exercises at Truax Field, 6 on the campus for navy trainees, and 1 for WAVES.

Pro Arte Uses Outside Talent

THE Mozart chamber series by the Pro Arte Quartet has drawn upon other members of the university community for added talent. Prof. Brieken aided in the performance of the G minor piano quartet, and Clare Schwarztrauber and Mrs. Oskar Hagen played viola during the series in the two string quintets.

Naval Training School

by Jerry Bartell, Sp 1/c USNR

A NEW kind of graduation was held at the university on January 27. It brought to Madison news representatives from every wire service, photographers, news camera-men and newsreel hedgehoppers. And no wonder.

That was the first class of Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Services to be graduated from any enlisted women's service school for radio in the country! Three hundred fifty WAVES and SPARS had completed their four months of training in radio communications, and were now ready to take their places on land stations throughout continental United States.

They came to Madison last autumn. The trees had turned, and red leaves were rustling about the front yard of old Chadbourne Hall. The cat-a-corner paths in the lawn were already well-worn from many a saddle shoe, for the students were already registered and going to classes. Not as many, to be sure, but students.

First there were vague rumors . . . then an unofficial announcement . . . then a trumpet call with gold braid attached. The WAVES were coming.

Lieut. Dorothy C. Stratton—better known at Purdue University as Dean of Women, during a happier day—and a staff of eight administrative WAVES officers came on a bright day the first week in October. University officials scurried about, showing dormitories, classrooms, equipment to a blue-clad coterie of Navy men and women. By October 9, everything was ready.

The news wires carried stories and pictures of celebrities soon to arrive in Madison. . . .

“Edith Kingdon Gould, granddaughter of Jay Gould, financier” . . . “Deborah Kirk, daughter of Rear Admiral Allen G. Kirk, one of the planners of the Tokyo bombing raid” . . . “Emily Saltonstall, daughter of the governor of Massachusetts” . . . coming to Madison.

They came. So did 477 other girls. They came from 35 states, three U. S. possessions, England, Scotland . . . all American girls who saw their opportunity to help. All came to Madison.

They threw their bags on the newly-installed two-decker beds; were given their “shots” immunizing them against everything but blisters on their heels; finger-printed for permanent navy files; shown how to march in formation; sat down at the code tables, a telegraph “bug” under thumb and forefinger; and they were off.

Four months of marching to classes . . . of sending and receiving code messages . . . of spending week-ends with Madison people . . . of romances involving university men which budded and bloomed.

Now they were graduating. The Memorial Union theater was crowded to capacity. The ever-present Ray Dvorak and his concert band to the rear of the stage; and at the front, gold-braided men and women waiting to make the goings-on official. At either side of the stage, news-camermen and all their friends of the press world. A hundred spotlights lit the stage as the girls passed by. Cameras clicked and turned. Radio announcers described the procession, step by step.

By January 28, they were gone.

The front yard of old Chadbourne was piled high with snow. Winds of the coldest winter in years whistled about her eaves. Inside, the beds stood at double-decked attention, waiting for the next group soon to come.

In radio “shacks”, air stations, observations towers, communications bases in Jacksonville, Fla., Anacostia, D. C.,

A new WAVE receives instruction from an old WAVE concerning the traditional navy mascot—the goat

San Diego, Cal., Pasco and Seattle, Wash., Corpus Christi, Tex., Washington, D. C. . . . the girls are working for their country, carrying happy memories of Madison with them.

Diesel Engineers Go to Sea THE Naval Training Schools sent its third and last group of junior officers engaged in the study of diesel motors to sea on Feb. 20.

Under the supervision of Dean F. Ellis Johnson, College of Engineering, the 31 officers were "shoved off" with orders which will take them all over the world . . . many in command of small craft . . . others on submarine duty.

One of the officers, Ensign Elton J. Wilkins, was most anxious to get back to sea. A veteran of two major naval battles, Wilkins will now return as a commissioned officer for the first time in his naval career of eight years. When he came to Madison with his class during the middle of last December, he hadn't been paid for almost five months. All his winter clothes and navy "gear" had been lost, and when he reported to Commander L. K. Pollard, commanding officer of the schools, he owned one set of "blues" . . . and no overcoat!

Lieut. Cmdr. Elmer H. Schubert, executive officer of the training schools, handed the men their orders.

Cooks and Bakers Have Novel Graduation THE scene—the beautiful dining room in Elizabeth Waters Hall overlooking Lake Mendota—the time—February 5, 3:30 P. M. Enter President Dykstra, Commander L. K. Pollard, Lieut. Cmdr. Elmer H. Schubert and a coterie of gold braid and chevrons.

Lined up behind the prettiest festal table that ever eye beheld were nine crisp, starched sailors. Before them, a roast turkey done to a turn with all the trimmings—cranberries, stuffing, etc.—tossed salad, navy-style baked beans, rolls, coffee, cakes, cookies, open-face sandwiches with navy flags and symbols styled thereon, and . . . a crowning achievement—the "Captain's Cake".

All this was the idea of Dormitories and Commons Director Don Halverson. This was their final examination. And it was a straight "A" culinary achievement.

The students so proudly lined up behind the table were graduating members of the Cooks and Bakers school—the smallest unit of the Naval Training Schools on the university campus. Each month, the school graduates just nine cooks and bakers, the constant enrollment of the school being 36.

The first class established a new tradition for the king-pins of the galley. Henceforth, all graduations will be held in the same manner. Dean Frank O. Holt has asked to be placed on the permanent guest list. Mrs. Helen Giessel, head instructor for the school, provides the feminine touch which was complemented by Cmdr. Pollard when he distributed the certificates and the "crowns"—rating badges to the new third class petty officers.

AGAIN Wisconsin takes the lead in war activity, this time being one of the nation's universities chosen to inaugurate the Army Specialized Training Program which will be carried on under the administration of the Military Science department.

In addition to supervising the ROTC department, Col. Herbert H. Lewis and Lt. Col. Franklin W. Clarke are working at full schedule getting into shape for things to come—namely, an estimated 500 soldiers initially who are expected to take up engineering study here. Not college students in uniform but soldiers going to college, the men will be chosen for training on a basis similar to entrance into Officers' Candidate School after completion of their basic training. Living 100 per cent under army regulations, the soldiers will be subjected to the most rigorous training. Their 59-hour week includes 24 hours of classroom instruction, 24 hours of supervised study, six hours of physical education, and five hours of military training.

This doesn't mean that the army is taking over the university; the army has merely contracted with the university to furnish instruction, barracks and mess hall facilities.

Although there has been much speculation as to the future of the ROTC, Lt. Col. Clarke states that the ROTC will continue in its present form until the end of the semester. Then, beginning with the summer session, only one basic course will be offered. But this training will fit a man to slide into various types of army specialization.

Speech Course Completed by Officers

FOURTEEN officers of the ROTC instructional staff recently completed a speech course designed by the university speech department at the suggestion of Colonel Lewis to improve the speaking ability of those whose chief duties here are principally concerned with classroom instruction. According to A. T. Weaver, professor of speech and director of the class, this course was believed to be the first course of its kind offered by a college or university in this country.

To facilitate greater progress in the work, a magnetic tape recorder permitted the officers to hear themselves speak. Work in both radio and public address was offered. Among the officers from the department completing the 13-weeks course were:

Lt. Col. F. W. Clarke, Maj. J. O. Neighbours, Jr., Captains J. J. Peot, G. L. Hudson, R. B. Port, K. H. Newbury, A. H. Peterson, Lieutenants F. H. Schiffer, D. A. Lillegren, R. R. Rippey, J. C. Palmer, R. B. Honig, F. T. Cameron and L. E. Williams.

Working Full Speed Ahead

... ONCE upon a time when Schickelgruber was a paperhanger and all dime-store goods bore the label "Made In Japan", the ROTC was considered just another course on the hill. The all-out training program has changed this idea so greatly that students now jeopardize their courses on the hill for practically a full-time job in military training. A series of "refresher" courses have been added to the already heavy curriculum of the advanced corps cadets, and night classes are held frequently in addition to a heavy daytime schedule. In fact, Colonel Lewis has announced that Military Ball will not be held this year because both members of the ROTC staff and students will be too busy with departmental work to do justice to a function as elaborate as this annual social function.

ROTC ski troops in a successfully camouflaged position

Ski Troops Learn Winter War Tactics

COMMANDO winter warfare tactics were featured at the ski meet held at Muir knoll February 14. The ROTC ski troops, garbed in all-white uniforms, presented a demonstration which included a machine gun mounted on skis in its tactical maneuvers. In camouflaged positions, the cadets manned all types of infantry weapons, while "Walkie-Talkies" furnished the communications for this mock battle.

Appoint New ROTC Cadet Officers

HEADING the recent appointments of cadet officers for this semester were: Robert W. Bird, senior in the Law school, cadet colonel of the infantry; Harold C. Needham, chemical engineering junior in the corps of engineers, cadet colonel of the composite regiment. James C. Larson was chosen as cadet lieutenant colonel, and George Gurda, cadet lieutenant colonel of the composite regiment.

Radio . . . WHA

by Jean Fleming

THOUSANDS of Wisconsin school children who look forward all spring to traveling to Madison for the great music festival arranged every year by Prof. E. B. Gordon of the University Music School, will this year help save rubber by holding one-room festivals in their home schools, with a token group broadcasting from Radio Hall in Madison, over WHA, according to the genial pioneer in educational broadcasting.

Formerly attended by over 4,000 school children and broadcast on an NBC national hook-up, the festival this year can be attended by parents and friends. The radical change in plan may affect the date also, Prof. Gordon said, and the festival may be held on the last class Wednesday of his weekly broadcast "Journeys in Musieland."

University Forum Tackles Current Problems

THE University Forum, which in a few months has come to approach the renowned Chicago Round Table in the opinion of the AAUW Good Listening Committee, discusses questions pertinent to winning the peace, Sundays at 3:30 p. m.

Prof. A. C. Garnett of the University philosophy department is chairman of the series. A faculty committee comprising Prof. H. L. Ewbank, Prof. Selig Perlman, Prof. Marvin Schaars, Prof. Ernest Schwartztrauber, Prof. Garnett outlines in advance a series of discussion topics. They are chosen in accordance with the availability in Madison of traveling experts or authorities.

"Music Hall Hours" New Feature of WHA

"WHEN the Japs were chased out of Guadalcanal a few days ago, some of the best chasing was done by Fighting Badgers from the University of Wisconsin. With typical Wisconsin courage and bravery, they overcame the handicaps of jungle conflict and pushed the Japs one step closer to Tokyo." These were the words used by Mr. John Berge, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni Association, when he spoke on the first of the Music Hall Hours.

Talks by campus personalities telling the people of the state about their university are regular features of this new series of broadcasts heard at 4:30 p. m. Tuesdays over WHA. Music is supplied for the program by Prof. Raymond Dvorak and the university concert band.

With the threat of induction hanging over most of his concert band members, Prof. Dvorak has been working against time transcribing Music Hall hours at the rate of two a week while his band personnel lasts. As the programs are heard only once a week he will have transcriptions stored against the time when his band will be so depleted as to be unable to furnish music for the Music Hall Hours.

"Treasure Island" Broadcasts Keep

Children Amused, Happy IN RESPONSE to much weeping and wailing and wringing of hands by letter, WHA began on Feb. 1 a program of 15 minutes of Adventure Stories to be heard every afternoon at 5 p. m. For some time distracted mothers had written WHA asking "Can't you give our children something to take the place of all the blood and thunder for youngsters on the radio?"

"Treasure Island" was the first dramatic production classic chosen for the program. Ben Park, '42, production manager of WHA, has been reading the story with characterizations of Stevenson's heroes and villains, even getting into costume for a picture for his fans. Dressing up took Park back to his undergraduate days when he was prominent in singing and acting parts in the University Theater. He still gets in a little singing—his theme song is "Yo! Ho! Ho! And a Bottle of Rum!"

"Growth in Human Freedom" New WHA Series

A NEW radio series over the state station WHA on the university campus, will be called "Growth in Human Freedom," and according to Prof. Robert Pooley, chairman, "is to show from the various viewpoints of history, literature, biography and the arts, how man has striven to release himself from bondage by fighting the traditions, circumstances, oppressors and ideas holding him subject."

The series will be heard each Monday and Wednesday evenings, from 7 to 7:30 p. m., April 5 to June 2. The committee comprises Professors Walter Agard, Gilbert Doane, Merritt Y. Hughes, Pooley, and William G. Harley and Walter Kay of the WHA staff.

Staff Welcomes Visits of Two "Old" Members

TWO of WHA's former student announcers, in army and navy uniform, visited the station last month enroute to officer's training schools.

Bill Carlson, '38, appeared Feb. 26 from Camp Roberts, Calif., where he had been in personnel work as a sergeant technician, on his way to the Army Intelligence Officer's training school in Washington, D. C. He was guest announcer on WHA's weekly program "Over at Our House" and suffered from 'mike' fright after his long absence.

Prof. Gordon

Burt Brazier, '42, appeared March 1, prior to reporting for officer's training at Northwestern University. He has been in Jacksonville, Fla., in aviation radio.

Harold A. Engel, M. A. '32, reports from Seattle, Wash., that he has been transferred from Army coast artillery to Army public relations, also in Seattle. He was formerly director of the College of the Air and promotion manager of WHA.

Jerry Bartell, '37, former WHA producer now a first class specialist with the Navy in Madison, conducts a weekly WHA program, 4:30 p. m. Saturday, called "Notes on Your Navy."

Alan Beaumont, x '43, former announcer, is now a second lieutenant in the anti-aircraft division of the Army Coast Artillery at Fort Sheridan.

Jean Fleming Takes Over WHA Publicity

TAKING over one of the many jobs formerly held by Harold A. Engel, now in the army in public relations work, Mrs. R. H.

Fleming of Madison, the former Jean Heitkamp, '34, has joined the staff of the state station, WHA, to work on public relations.

Mrs. Fleming was on the campus from 1930 to 1934. She was a reporter and editorial writer for the Cardinal for three years, was president of WSGA, and a member of Sigma Kappa social sorority. After graduation she was a reporter, re-write and advertising columnist on the Bergen Evening Record, New Jersey daily.

Department of Speech by Prof. Henry L. Ewbank

PROFESSORS A. T. Weaver, H. L. Ewbank, and R. W. West conducted a special speech course for the 14 army officers of the university military science department and the 26 navy officers, including 10 WAVES, who are stationed on the campus.

Colonel Lewis has requested a similar, but more extended, second-semester course for the advanced ROTC students. Professors Weaver, West and Ewbank are the instructors and almost 100 juniors and seniors who will be called into active service in June are enrolled.

By vote of the faculty of the College of Engineering, freshmen in mechanical engineering and sophomores in chemical engineering are now required to take courses in public speaking.

Wisconsin Speech Leaders Contribute to New Book

WHEN PROFESSOR H. L. Ewbank was President of the National Association of Teachers of Speech in 1934, he appointed a committee on research in the history and criticism of American public address. He has served as vice-chairman of the committee which announces the appearance in March of a two-volume History and Criticism of American Public Address, published by McGraw-Hill under the editorship of Professor W. N. Brigance of Wabash College. The following former Wisconsin graduate students prepared chapters or sections of the study: Professors George Bohman of Dartmouth, Walter Emery of Ohio State, Marvin Bauer and Louis Mallory of Brooklyn College, C. P. Lahman of Albion College, Mildred Berry of Rockford College; Marie Hoehmuth of the University of Illinois and President Rexford Mitchell of the La Crosse State Teachers College.

Prof. Johnson Co-author of Interpretative Reading

PROF. GERTRUDE E. JOHNSON is co-author, with Professor Lowrey of Baylor University, of a textbook, INTERPRETATIVE READING, recently published by Appleton-Century.

Prof. West New Pres. of Nat'l Assn. of Speech Teachers

AT THE convention of the National Association of Teachers of Speech held at Chicago during the Christmas holidays, Professor Robert West was elected President for 1943.

Cleft Palate Institute to Be Held Here in Summer

AT THE request of the State Department of Public Instruction, the Department of Speech will hold a special institute for the rehabilitation of cleft palate cases during the coming summer. Dr. Charlotte Wells of Mt. Holyoke College, who received her Ph. D. at Wisconsin in 1941, will be in charge.

The Union

by Fannie T. Taylor

AS THE male population on the campus dwindles, co-eds are taking over more and more jobs which were formerly "for men only."

Nowhere has the trend been more noticeable than in the Wisconsin Union. Jean Larson, of Plymouth, Wis., has one of the most unusual jobs, having taken over the operation of the movie projection machine in the Play Circle. Miss Larson is one of the two or three women in the country undertaking such work, and was specially trained by Fredrick Buerki, technical director for the Wisconsin Union theater and the Play Circle, when he saw his men projectionists leaving him on all sides for the armed forces and other jobs in the war effort.

Another woman student is also being trained as her assistant, Eileen White of Eau Claire.

In the catering department of the Union, a co-ed, Angela Bewick of Evansville, has put on the white coat of the waiter captain, who has heretofore always been a male student, and gone to work in charge of student waiters.

Women have been hired to tend bar in the Rathskeller, long the last refuge of men on the campus, which has now been thrown open to women also. Dressed in red check uniforms the women turn out short orders, and dispense cokes and coffee with all the dexterity of their masculine predecessors.

Visiting Minn. Symphony Almost Goes Homeless

THE final concert of the Union concert series this year found the 90 musicians of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra who played in the Wisconsin Union theater March 6, virtually homeless for the performance.

Crowded hotel conditions in Madison made reservations for the large group of men and their conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, an impossibility ahead of time, and many of the hotels turned down every request for a room.

In desperation, the Union concert committee turned to the university housing facilities, only to find a new group of the armed forces taking over the only available dormitory rooms. Fraternities whose members were leaving, and whose houses, in some cases, were to be closed became the next housing possibility.

Finally, five days before the 90 musicians were scheduled to arrive and find no lodgings, several of the Madison hotels were able to offer accommodations, and the overflow was placed at the Delta Kappa Epsilon house, which had 28 beds to spare.

The orchestra members took the housing problem with good grace, being used to similar experiences elsewhere. They are the last large orchestral organization able to complete its tour contract. Every other orchestra in the country had to cancel concert bookings being unable to transport baggage and men.

Service Men, Women Flock
to "At Ease" Hours

STUDENTS, sailors, marines, WAVES, soldiers, flock to the Sunday afternoon "At Ease" hours in Great hall of the Memorial Union, to dance, play games, watch an impromptu "home talent" floor show, drink milk and eat the cookies baked by the thousands for them by members of the University League, who also act as hostesses at the refreshment table.

With a crowd of a thousand or better as the usual attendance, the "At Ease" hours have become the most popular weekend event on the campus, and typify the stress now placed on the end of the week for social activity exclusively, and the fusion of students and service men and women on the campus.

Co-ed hostesses, organized by the Wisconsin Union, and administrative work by the new student committee in the union, the service committee, keep the program in full swing.

Union Runs All-out-of
in This All-out War

A "FIRE-CIDER" is Wisconsin's adaptation of the old time coffee hours, now that we're "all-out-of" coffee. Hot cider served around the lounge fire-places proved a welcome substitute. Now there is no more cider, so the hours are called "Union's Friday Fire-cider Without Cider". When spring comes there will be no fire, so then they will be "Friday Fire-ciders Without Fire and Without Cider."

When spring comes there will be no fire, so then they will be "Friday Fire-ciders Without Fire and Without Cider."

Lowell Frautschi on Union Council

LOWELL FRAUTSCHI of Madison has been appointed by President Dykstra as alumni representative on the Union Council, general governing board of the Wisconsin Union building at the University. He succeeds Frank Ross, Madison attorney.

Other alumni and faculty representatives on the Union Council are Robert Murphy, Madison attorney, and Dr. H. C. Bradley and Prof. W. R. Agard of the faculty.

Frautschi was student president of the Union in 1926-27 when the first units of the building were under construction. He led a campaign among students for building funds which produced $133,000 in subscriptions.

Meet Fredric March—Beloved U. W. Alumnus

IN 1920, a young man known popularly as Freddie Bickel was president of the senior class—the one which is characterized as being among the first to subscribe to the erection of the Memorial Union building in those initial years of struggling to obtain the money for the campus community center.

Twenty-three years later, his name changed to Fredric March, but still the same interested and loyal Badger, the university's favored and successful son accepted an invitation to become a member of the Memorial Union Building Committee, the group of leading alumni who in 1919 initiated and raised funds for the Union.

The announcement of March's acceptance was made recently by F. H. Clausen, Horicon, chairman of the committee which represents 20,000 alumni subscribers in the direction and development of the Union. In 1939, when the new theater addition to the Union was built, it was March who led a campaign among New York alumni to raise funds for the theater switchboard and lighting equipment.

March got his start in dramatics at Wisconsin. Not only did he excel as a thespian, but, as BMOC whose activities ranged from politics (senior class president) to executive duties on the Union Board and Cardinal Board. A member of Iron Cross, men's honorary activity society, he managed to keep his scholastic record as high as his extra-curricular one. He played in Union Vodvils, annual student talent revue, and in Haresfoot. He was a member of the Edwin Booth society, the dramatic group on the campus at that time.

March, a Racine boy, had entered Wisconsin in 1916 and pledged Alpha Delta Phi. He served in the army in 1918 as a second lieutenant and came back to be graduated from the School of Commerce in 1920.

With commerce diploma in hand he travelled east, for he had received a position in the National City Bank of New York City as a scholarship. His banking career was a short one. The management of the bank changed hands, and the new boss did not have his predecessor's faith in bright young men. So Freddie turned his talents toward more interesting fields.

He initiated his stage career in 1922 with extra parts in several Broadway plays which eventually led to a leading role in Emery Gilbert's "Tarnish". In 1924, Frederick McIntyre Bickel became Fredric March for purposes of euphony. Then followed a series of successful parts in four New York Guild plays.

From Broadway to Hollywood wasn't a very long step and Fredric March took it in his stride, scoring a huge success in his characterization of John Barrymore in his first vehicle, "The Royal Family". In 1932, he was proclaimed as the best actor of the year for his "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Currently appearing on Broadway in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth", March is not much changed by a long, successful acting career. An article in the New York Times describes him as a "hard-working family man and a good provider." His accomplished acting is the result of the same conscientious effort that characterized his successes at the University of Wisconsin. "He works just as hard as other ambitious people labor to get ahead in less exotic fields."

His wife, Florence Eldridge, and he make their home in a comfortable apartment house that lacks the glamorous ornaments usually accompanying the transient Hollywood couple.

Play or no play, Christmas eve and Christmas day are spent at home with their two children—a boy and a girl. They have no complications about missing several performances to be with their children. Declares Miss Eldridge, "I think it's all just pish-tosh about how the play has to go on even if you're ready to drop with pneumonia."

Both Marches read a great deal, although they have to stay up until 2 in the morning to do it. It's an upside down life they lead anyhow, so they figure a little relaxation and reading stolen in the early hours of the morning really isn't harmful.

As for New York night life—that's not for them. Says March, sounding like a modern Methuselah, "At our age you don't want to run around night clubs."

Varsity Sports

by Sports Editor Bob Foss

Wisconsin's major sports teams are continuing their winning ways this year, holding firmly to places in the first division among their Big Ten opponents and soundly trouncing most of their non-conference foes.

The sensational Badger football team of last fall started this winning ball rolling, and it has kept going at a good pace during winter sports program, in spite of war and consequent loss of athletes to Uncle Sam's great armed forces.

Fredric March, U. W. '20

The 1942 Badger gridders, you remember, won eight of ten games, tied one and lost only one, to win second place in the conference even after defeating the Big Ten championship winner, Ohio State, by a decisive 17-7 score. Outside the conference, Wisconsin tied Notre Dame, and licked Missouri, Camp Grant, Great Lakes, and Marquette.

Cardinal Cagers Tie for Fourth Place Coach Bud Foster's basketball team did not fare quite so well, but it managed to split even on its 12 conference games to tie for fourth place with Purdue, and it defeated six of its nine non-conference opponents. The Badger quintet won 12 of the contests on its tough 21-game schedule, rolling up a total of 1,022 points against its opponents.

The end of the basketball season brought to a close the brilliant college career of Big Johnny Kotz, Rhinelander, Wis., the Badgers' All-American forward. John was the Big Ten's most prolific record-buster last year, and even as he closed his college career, he smashed one last record. He brought his total points in three years of Big Ten competition to 512—a new record for individual scoring in the conference—and Johnny is now the first and only charter member of the Big Ten's most exclusive scoring group, the "500 Club."

Track Team Takes 2nd Place at Chicago Then along came Coach Tom Jones' indoor track team to upset the dope and walk off with second place in the conference indoor meet at Chicago. Coach Jones is now in his 30th year as Badger track mentor, and he has consistently turned up with strong, winning teams. In spite of terrific losses to the armed forces, the Wisconsin indoor trackmen this year defeated Iowa and Iowa Pre-Flight, Minnesota and Northwestern, Marquette, and the "Little Big Ten" meet, besides their second place conference win.

Badger Boxers Win Them All! Now, as spring returns to Wisconsin's beautiful campus, along comes Coach John Walsh's battling Badger boxers, pounding out wins over the best college boxers in the country.

Coach Walsh's boys have won all five of their dual matches this year, beating some of the best ring teams in the country. In doing so, they set a new winning streak record for collegiate boxing in this country, and established a couple of new "firsts" for Wisconsin athletic teams.

But first, the Badgers' dual match record for the year: Wisconsin's leather-pushers downed Michigan State 6½-1½; turned back Virginia 7-1; soundly trounced a combined Washington State-Idaho ring team 6-2; invaded and overcame Penn State 4½-3½; and finally defeated the Kirtland Field Bombardiers, a team representing the U. S. Army flying school at Albuquerque, New Mexico, 6½-1½.

As to the athletic "firsts" which the Badger boxers achieved in their 1943 season: Their match with the combined Washington State-Idaho team marked the first time in American college boxing that one team matched its strength against the combined manpower resources of two teams—and won; Secondly, as far as is known here, the match with the Kirtland Field Bombardiers was the first between a college team and a U. S. armed forces training camp team in the history of college boxing in this country.

And finally, about that new winning streak record which Wisconsin's valiant boxers established as the result of their undefeated season. The five dual match wins of this year brought to a total of 20 the number of consecutive wins which Badger boxing teams have strung together since their last defeat in 1940. This is the longest win streak in American collegiate boxing history. The former record of 19 consecutive wins was also held by the Wisconsin ringmen, set by the Badger fighters of 1937-1938, and 1939.

Furthermore, Wisconsin's sensational record in national intercollegiate boxing now stands at 58 wins, only four losses, and two draws. That's the mighty record which Coach John Walsh and his fighting Badgers have hung up in the last 10 years since boxing became an intercollegiate sport on the Hill. And twice during that period, in 1939 and 1942, Wisconsin boxers walked off with four individual championships in the national meets of those years. That record also has never been equalled by any other college boxing team.

Five Boxers are National Champs!

WISCONSIN'S boxing team really stole the show Saturday night, March 27, as five members of Coach Johnny Walsh's sensational team won five of the eight championships, incidentally annexing the team crown with a total of 31 points and, as if that wasn't enough, won more individual crowns than any other team ever has won in the history of the NCAA boxing tournament. This record broke that set by the Wisconsin men in 1939 and equalled in 1942, of four wins in the national meet.

Cliff Lutz, last year's titlist at 155 pounds, this year fought at 145 pounds, and his match against Sgt. Ken Summers, from Kirtland Field was really a battle royal with both boys tossing plenty of leather at all times.

Don Miller, 155 pounds, clearly defeated Mike Melson of Washington State, a fight which was more or less of an upset victory. Don's freshman brother, Myron "Mick" Miller was not to be outdone by his brother's victory and kept the wins in the family by taking the verdict over Stan Smith, tough 165-pounder from San Jose State. "Mick" fought a beautiful fight although handicapped considerably by a cut over the right eye received in his match Friday night.

George Makris, NCAA light heavyweight champ and a workmanlike boxer, fought his toughest foe yet in Harold Titus from Superior State. Makris won.

Verdayne John ended the brilliant evening for the 11,000 spectators by winning the heavyweight crown from Frank Hawrylak of Penn State. Capt. John was the winner of the John S. LaRoe trophy awarded to the most representative boxer in the tournament. Warren Jollymore, now Lt., who coached the Kirtland Field boxers at the tournament, won the same trophy in 1942 at Baton Rouge.

Baseball Comes With Spring — A concluding word about spring sports coming up. Although losses to the armed forces have been terrific, it looks as though the Badgers will have a baseball team and some outdoor track competition. Waiver of the freshman rule has helped considerably, especially in baseball. At any rate, Coach Arthur "Dynamite" Mansfield's diamond hopefuls are hard at practice, and the veteran Coach Tom Jones, now in his 30th year of track coaching at Wisconsin, is making plans for the outdoor season. And Harry Stuhldreher, head football coach and Badger athletic director, has moved his grid-iron hopefuls outdoors for their spring training period.

Yes, Spring has hit Wisconsin's athletic campus, too.

Badger Boxers: They "dood" it again!

Headlining Summer Session

THREE distinguished foreign speakers, two of them from Axis-dominated countries, will lead a three week symposium on "Bases of World Peace" to be held at the University July 5-23. This program is part of the 17 special institutes, workshops, laboratory schools and clinics that will be a special feature of the summer session this summer.

The three internationally important figures are Carl J. Hambro, former head of the Norwegian parliament and chairman of the league of nations; Count Carlo Sforza, leading Italian anti-Nazi; and Dr. Hu Shih, former Chinese ambassador to the United States, who was 1942 Baccalaureate speaker and who received an honorary degree at the last Commencement.

In explaining to the regents about the symposium, President Dykstra said, "We hope to have an intensive program of real significance, exploring considerations that include the economic social organization, social psychology of peoples and other practical matters that will affect world peace."

Besides the symposium on world peace, John Guy Fowlkes, director of summer session, announces 16 other special institutes. This number is more than twice the number of special programs ever offered on the campus before. The institutes will be open to the public, as usual.

Here 'N There With The Clubs

72 Alumni at AKRON Founders' Day Dinner THE Wisconsin Alumni Club of Akron set some sort of attendance record for that city when 72 alumni and guests met for dinner on Feb. 5 to celebrate Founders' Day. It was the largest group to attend an alumni club event in many years. Included among the guests were Mr. A. R. MacLaren, '11, president of the Cleveland Alumni Club, three alumni of Ohio State and the president of the Ohio State Alumni Club of Akron.

Movies of the Wisconsin-Ohio State football game were shown and the remainder of the evening was devoted to bridge.

CHICAGO ALUMNAE Hear Journalism's H. Patterson HELEN M. PATTERSON, associate professor of journalism at the University, addressed the University of Wisconsin Alumnae club of Chicago at its Founders' Day luncheon on February 6. Miss Patterson described the wartime campus of today in comparison with the campus of other wars.

DETROIT Alumnae Has Full Plans for Year THE University of Wisconsin Women's club of Detroit decided last spring to continue to meet in order that the record of 21 years of continuous existence might not be broken. The first meeting of the year was held at the home of Mrs. J. T. O'Hara, '10, and was a Saturday luncheon on November 14. Twenty were present. The December gathering was held at the Fort Shelby Hotel on December 12 with Mrs. Alice Quade Tellez, '21, as chairman. A visit to the recently opened USO building followed luncheon, and gaily wrapped gifts of candy and cigarettes were left for the service men.

Two potluck dinners were held in the next two months. Mary Ann Lowell, '19, was hostess at her home on January 22 and Mrs. A. J. Olshefsky, entertained the group on February 17. Mrs. Olshefsky is the wife of Alex Olshefsky, '18.

Plans have been made to continue monthly meetings through the year. No money making project is planned, however. The group voted at the first meeting to take out a Victory membership in the Alumni Association to aid in sending alumni publications to the boys in service. The usual $50 scholarship money was also provided this year for the use of a woman student at the University.

Dykstra, Christensen Speak at FOND DU LAC Farm and Home Meet BECAUSE of the war and transportation difficulties, no Founders' Day banquet was held in Fond du Lac. Instead, alumni attended the banquet held in connection with the Farm and Home Week celebration on Jan. 20.

President Dykstra, as the principal speaker, discussed "Agriculture and Total War." Dean Christensen of the College of Agriculture introduced the farmer from that area who was honored for his outstanding contribution to rural life.

GREEN BAY Participate in Farm and Home Week MEMBERS of Green Bay Alumni club participated in the Farm and Home Week banquet which was held at the Hotel Northland on January 19. No other Founders' Day activity was planned because of the war.

Speakers at the banquet included Dean Christensen of the College of Agriculture, Ensign Leona Jackson, United States Navy nurse, and Stanley Johnston, war correspondent.

MADISON Elects New Officers ROY T. RAGATZ, '27, has been elected president of the Wisconsin Alumni Club of Madison, to succeed Ruth Kentzler, '17. Mr. Ragatz had served as the club's secretary-treasurer for the past year.

Other officers include Mrs. John Wise, '19, vice-president; and Mrs. Marshall Browne, '18, secretary-treasurer.

Women's Branch New at MILWAUKEE Alumni Club WOMEN have always been members of the Wisconsin Alumni Club of Milwaukee but since men's activities and interests were emphasized at the meetings, H. E. Grant, '32, treasurer of the club, suggested that the women form an organization of their own. Only three members attended the first meeting in July, 1942 but the number has grown with successive meetings.

Since the group is still in the organizational stage, Eunice Biggar, '39, as chairman replaces a regular president. Others instrumental in the organization were Helen Poleyn, '41, and Carol Waisbren, '42, program chairman. There are no special dues but the meetings are always preceded by a luncheon. Football movies have been shown at the meetings and plans are being made to bring representative faculty speakers to future meetings.

In November the project of the group was the inviting of 12 servicemen from the USO to the annual fall informal dance. The women's group provided partners for the men.

NEW YORK Iowa Alumni Honor Justice W. B. Rutledge

WISCONSIN alumni joined with Iowa

alumni to do honor to Justice Wiley B. Rutledge, '14, who was formerly dean of the Iowa College of Law. The Iowa Association held a dinner at the Western University Club on February 26 and special tables were arranged for Wisconsin alumni.

On February 2 Harry Stuhldreher addressed the club and showed pictures of the Wisconsin-Ohio State football game.

Stuhldreher Talks on Athletics PHILADELPHIA Founders' Day Meet

THE Wisconsin Alumni Club of Philadelphia held a Founders' Day

banquet at the University club in Philadelphia on February 4. Singing was led by Charles Carpenter, '20.

Harry Stuhldreher, athletic director of the University, addressed the group, telling of the changes on the campus effected by the war and also of the things which had not changed. He stressed also the importance of all kinds of athletics now. After the talk Mr. Stuhldreher showed moving pictures of the Wisconsin-Ohio State football game and made comments explaining the action.

The following new officers were elected: President, William Hadfield, '14; Vice-President, Roy Weston, '33; Secretary-treasurer, Gertrude Potter, '28.

WEST BEND Breaks Attendance Records

THE West Bend Alumni Club

broke all attendance records for that city when 75 alumni attended the Founders' Day celebration on February 10. The highlight of the evening was the talk by Judge Frank W.

Bucklin, '02, who spoke on "The University of Wisconsin at War."

One of the local high school boys entertained at the piano during the evening. He also led the group in singing, accompanied by Mrs. C. A. Collins, '29.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: President, Robert G. Lauson, '29; Vice-President, Mrs. Ernest W. Hesse, Jr., '40; Secretary-Treasurer, Roger R. Sacia, '36.

During the year the Club has purchased five Victory memberships in the Alumni association at a cost of $50. These Victory memberships help in sending the Association's publications free of charge to alumni in the armed services.

The retiring officers made their reports: Harold O. Leiser, '29, president; Reuben Luehoff, '29, vice-president; R. G. Lauson, '29, secretary and Fay Hickey, '36, treasurer.

After the business meeting a social hour was held, with bridge, sheephead and skat.

Many Notables Celebrate Founders' Day at WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON alumni were fortunate in having two headliners at their Founders' Day luncheon on January 30. President Dykstra, who is Honorary Chairman of the club, discussed the University's part in the war and the post-war world. Harry Stuhldreher showed movies of the Wisconsin-Ohio State football game and reviewed the 1943 season. Willard Blaesser, '34, assistant dean of men at the University, who is now doing special work with the American Council on Education, also attended the meeting.

The guests of honor were Wiley B. Rutledge, '14, recently appointed to the United States Supreme Court, and Mrs. Rutledge. Other guests included Dr. W. M. PSYCHOLOGY THROUGH LITERATURE. By Professor Caroline Shrodes, Professor Justine Van Gundy, and Professor Richard W. Husband (former U. W. faculty member).

This anthology of half a hundred passages drawn from the prose and poetry of world literature, and representing all forms of creative expression, from autobiography to drama, has the merit of being original. Its aim is to enable one to know himself through the mental, emotional, and spiritual experiences of others. The fact that the authors of these extracts are widely known and accepted gives a reader confidence in the validity of the varying experiences.

The volume is admirably organized and documented. It presents its material under two major divisions—The Formation of the Personality and Adjustment and Maladjustment of the Personality. Under the first category there are five sub-heads; under the second, three. Prefacing each of the major and minor divisions are found non-technical introductions indicating clearly the scope and significance of the section that follows. Furthermore, before all of the separate passages is placed a professional analysis of the special psychological phenomena involved. As an appendix, over two hundred volumes by prominent authors are listed as suitable for study under the eight sub-divisions indicated above.

So much for the objective dissection of the book, its vertebration. The three collaborators have presented it as a college text designed primarily for courses in psychology or creative writing. Its appeal should be wider than that, especially in these days of emotional strain when even normality is caught off-balance. The aftermath of any war marks an influx among a nation's psychiatric clinics of thousands of minds eclipsed by the shadows of an obscured sun. The Biblical mandate, "Know thyself," grows over difficult. It may well be that a volume like the present, through the deputy of the varying human experiences it presents, can enable one to know himself better, and thus to realize that what he considers abnormal in himself will find unexpected parallels in people basically sound. Certainly it is a provocative book.—By Warner Taylor, Professor of English, University of Wisconsin.

WHO WALK ALONE — By Perry Burgess.

Perry Burgess gives us the story of Ned Langford, a prosperous young American, who with his prospective young bride had found his proper niche in life, when suddenly tragedy singled him out. He, Ned Langford, was destined to live the life of a leper, torn away from every vestige of life and love he called his own.

How a seemingly blighted life was converted into one of courage, of success, and of happiness, is simply told in Ned's own words.

Ned was a soldier all his life. He had fought valiantly in the Philippines back in 1898 and the years to follow. Now Ned chose to shoulder his musket alone, and to his brother, Tom, only, was his affliction revealed. To his dear ones, Ned's existence ceased—it was better that way.

In a world far-apart, amidst the tropical beauty of Culion, Ned experienced the quintessence of life in his paternal love for Thomas, his comradeship with Jose, Arang, Conrado, and Marciano, and his affection for Carita.

How a man was victorious in a life's struggle against hopelessness is manifested in Ned's pioneering spirit at the lepers' colony of Culion. But his undaunted will was a mere fraction of that sum-total ardor of his comrades.

This story has an added significance today. With Thomas, Jose, and Conrado behind the enemy's bulwark, every reader will be imbued with concern for them. Their essential need for medical supplies and for scrutinizing physicians is not being answered. How many will be affected and forced to bear unnecessary sufferings because of these non-fulfillments? We can only wait to know.—By Romaine O'Day, SJ3.

LEONARD WOOD MEMORIAL (American Leprosy Foundation)
One Madison Avenue, New York City.

I will be pleased to accept an autographed copy of the special edition of WHO WALK ALONE without any financial obligation. I promise to lend to at least ten of my friends with the hope that their interest may be sufficiently aroused to help the Leonard Wood Memorial prosecute its scientific efforts to eradicate leprosy.

BOOM COPPER. By Angus Murdoch, x '27.

Angus Murdoch has accomplished an interesting and descriptive historical narrative in "BOOM COPPER". The Keweenaw Peninsula comes again to the life it saw in the development of its copper deposits, and you can gain its experience most attractively in the comfort of your favorite arm chair. The visiting with old-timers, the reading of other literature, and the natural talent of the author have produced such a continuing series of descriptive stories as to hold the undisputed interest of anyone even moderately acquainted with the district.

Nothing is spared from the realm of art or science to make the picture comprehensive. Chemistry, geology and mining are well translated and reduced to terms the most inexperienced would understand and enjoy. Capital and labor share equally in the attention paid them. The part played by the geography of this remote country, the isolation incurred by severe winters, the fickleness of Lake Superior toward mining and navigation, and early land transportation are spread through the stories in such delightful fashion as would do credit to a Robert Service or a Jack London. Studies of local characters are done well, and character studies of the various nationalities involved are excellent.

"Mission to Moscow"

Selection of Malone for the Churchill role was inevitable, for the noted lawyer bears a marked resemblance to the British Prime Minister. Malone was introduced to Churchill in London back in 1924 by David Lloyd George at 10 Downing Street, the London residence of the first minister of the British Empire. He recalls that Churchill surveyed him with amazement, and asked as he shook hands: "Where have you been all my life, brother?"

It was because of his close friendship for Davies, who was named commissioner of corporations by Wilson on the same day that Malone was appointed assistant secretary of state and Franklin D. Roosevelt was made assistant secretary of the navy, that Malone agreed to turn actor for this picture. That and his sincere desire to make some tangible contribution to the war effort by helping further mutual understanding and good will between the peoples of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Marjorie Post Davies, wife of the diplomat, does not herself appear in the picture. The role of this lady, whom Hollywood found as gracious and unaffected as though she didn't have $40 for every face on the cutting room floor since films began, is entrusted to Ann Harding.

Just as Davies picked Huston for his role, Mrs. Davies chose Miss Harding to portray her. With the picture almost finished, everybody concerned is still happy about these choices, particularly Warner Bros. Oddly enough, however, no great dramatics are required from either Huston or Miss Harding, who find themselves in the unique position of "playing straight" for the more than 140 character men and women who appear in scenes with them.

When Davies is depicted in his memorable interview with Stalin, the scene belongs to Manart Kippen, New York stage actor who portrays the Russian leader. When Davies attends the Moscow Purge Trials, one of the high points of "Mission to Moscow," the interest inevitably is centered upon the character men, rather than upon Huston.

And the most dramatic spots of the entire piece, apart from the scenes of the Battle of Stalingrad, perhaps, are held by Oscar Homolka in the role of Maxim Litvinov and Leigh Whipper, the distinguished Negro actor, in Haile Selassie's unforgettable speech to the League of Nations.

Now that the picture has been completed, Mr. Davies still finds himself in a state of surprise over the whole thing—that his book, which was originally a compilation of documents and journal entries, became a best seller and then that it should be considered picture material. He believes that success came about because of happy timing and the fact that its documentary form gave the book authenticity.

The price the studio paid for the film rights is said to exceed anything that had ever been paid previously for a non-fiction book. Davies derived no personal profit, as all proceeds obtained from the publishers and the film studio have been turned over to philanthropic causes.

Complete U. S. patent records, 4,900 volumes, are on file at the Wis. Historical Society, right

In Our Front Yard

by

Marvel Ings, '38

Assistant Curator, Wis. Hist. Soc.

BACK in the good old days a hundred years ago, when horses got into the news because they had run away or set a new running record, David Irvin of Madison, Wisconsin applied for a patent for the "improvement of saddles."

Since April 11, 1842, when Irvin was granted the first patent issued to a Wisconsin resident, thousands of patents to Wisconsin citizens form part of the 2,300,000 certified copies of United States patents now on file in the document division of the Wisconsin Historical Society. These patent records are for the use of the public, and it is not necessary to wait until you get to Washington to have a look at them.

The United States patent records, consisting of 4,900 volumes, are nearly complete except for a few issued during the first World war when federal agencies were unable to send them to depository libraries. This gap, Leroy Schlinkert, B. S. '33, document division chief, says is gradually being closed. From 1790 to 1843 only the lists of patents are recorded.

Besides the American patents, 12,000 volumes of British patents are also available in the Historical Society document division. The British file, which was secured for the society through Charles Francis Adams, American minister to England 1861-69, begins with the first patent issued in 1617. The patent was issued by James I to one Aron Rathborne, "Gentleman, practiconer in the mathematiques who hath a greate desire to take a pfecte survaie . . . of London . . . and make suche and exacte plotte, mappes . . ."

After Irvin got his patent on "something new" in saddles, a patent was granted to Peter Yates of "Milwaukie" for pulleys and shafting on April 25, 1843, and a third one went to George Easterly then of Heart Prairie for a harvesting machine on October 22, 1844. Easterly's invention is one of the great contributions to Wisconsin agriculture.

One of the more famous early patents was granted to a group of Milwaukee men for a modern typewriter of the 'swinging type-bar' or 'type-basket' pattern. This first typewriter was "devised in 1867 by C. Latham Sholes, Carlos Glidden and Samuel W. Soule." Sholes was a printer by trade, an editor by profession and at that time, collector of the port of Milwaukee.

Soule was also a printer, and he and Sholes were good friends. During the winter of 1866-67, they were at work developing a new machine for printing page numbers on bound blank books. At the shop where they were having the

His columns have a dual purpose—to entertain and to teach his young readers.

Kenneth W. Purdy, x '35, Edits Government Magazine "Victory"

KENNETH W. PURDY, x '35, has been picked by Robert W. Sherwood of the OWI to edit the new magazine, Victory which OWI will distribute in six languages all over the world. A frankly propogandistic picture magazine, Victory will carry information about the U. S. to overseas countries, particularly in the Eastern Hemisphere, where newstands have been flooded with Axis publications and where news about the U. S. has been decidedly conspicuous by its scarcity.

Kenneth Purdy, whose father was the author of our famed and favorite "On Wisconsin" tune, left the university to become editor of the Oshkosh Fox Valley Free Press, later working on the Annenburg publications, Radio Guide, Radio Digest, Click and Look. He joined the Donovan Committee in 1941.

Current plans call for 225,000 copies in English, 50,000 in Afrikaans, 75,000 Portuguese, 40,000 Spanish, 75,000 Arabic, total—540,000 copies in all.

Julius A. Krug, '29, Wins Important WPB Position

JULIUS A. KRUG, who got his B. A. degree from the university in 1929 and his M. A. in 1930, recently won the WPB post of chief of materials distribution section, formerly held by Ferdinand Eberstack. Mr. Krug also became chairman of the requirement committee.

Mr. Krug, before his recent promotion, was head of WPB's power section and co-ordinator of defense power for the office of production management in Washington.

Dave Willock, '31, Announced As "New Comedy Find"

DAVE WILLOCK, '31, the comedian that used to bring down the house at Haresfoot shows about a dozen years ago, is announced a "new comedy find" by Twentieth Century-Fox studios in Hollywood.

Willock has had small roles in previous pictures, and recently took care of a sizable part in "Dixie Dugan." He has been signed to a long term contract by the studio for movie funnyman parts.

After graduating from the university Willock went to Milwaukee and starred in vaudeville there. Later he and Jack Carson of Milwaukee got up a vaudeville act "Goofytone News", which was a take-off on the newsreels. This act was so popular that they toured with it all over the country.

Herbert W. Parisius, '22, Consultant on No. Africa

HERBERT W. PARISIUS, M. A. '22, has been named special consultant to Herbert Lehman, director of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation. He resigned as director of the food production administration in January.

Parisius will leave for Tunisia as soon as arrangements can be made and it is believed that he will be America's food production director for the reconquered territories in Europe as well as Africa. His immediate job in North Africa will be to re-establish agriculture so that the United States will not have to do any more relief work than necessary.

In Tunisia, where the pattern for reviving European agriculture will undoubtedly be laid out, Mr. Parisius will have an opportunity to put into effect his ideas of increasing agricultural production by the full utilization of the "little fellow", the purported issue that brought about his resignation as food production director.

St. Louis Symphony Plays Work by Rudolf Uhlig, x '41

CORP. RUDOLF UHLIG, x '41, who came from black despair in Germany to freedom in the United States, received quite an ovation recently when the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra presented Uhlig's "My Country" at the regular symphonic program held in the St. Louis Municipal Auditorium.

Corp. Uhlig, who is stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, was in the audience and was summoned to the stage to share the applause his composition won.

Coming home from the Court House in Milwaukee the day he took his oath as an American citizen two years ago, "My Country 'Tis Of Thee" hummed through his head and became the inspiration for his "My Country."

While at the university Corp. Uhlig studied composition and orchestral work, and before that he studied for two years at the Leipsig Conservatory. Besides "My Country" his works include a piano concerto, a symphony, and a "romantic symphony" he is composing in the army.

Rev. Lieut. Henry Rubel, '23, Is Boogie-Woogie Minister

REV. LIEUT. HENRY RUBEL, '23, Episcopalian minister who wrote Joe Penner's first show and had a life contract to supply him with jokes and songs, is chaplain at the State Guard headquarters at Exposition Park, San Francisco, California.

A genial, wise and witty friend and counselor, he is probably the only chaplain who ever played boogie-woogie while the soldiers danced, or provided other entertainment to take the black out of gloom when other means were lacking. Lt. Rubel, incidentally, was author of "Kikmi", one of the Haresfoot comedy hits, while at the university.

Called on to provide entertainment at a luncheon at the Authors Club recently, Lt. Rubel joked, "Perhaps I should introduce myself in the words of one of our soldiers who said, 'This guy decomposes all his own music.'" whistling softly to himself. He wore spectacles and a Phi Beta Kappa key.

Maybe Student Life and Interests could whip up a swimming meet as soon as the lake opens. Then, when the Gremlins came trooping out of the rathskellar to see what they could do to gum up the works on the water front, some W club men could push them all into the lake. This would clear the whole thing up beautifully.

Unless, of course, the Gremlins pushed the W club men in first. Then where would we be?

mechanical work done, they came to know Glidden, who was having an agricultural machine of his own made.

Glidden was an ingenious inventor and retired manufacturer, and in their almost daily meetings at the shop, he became interested in the paging machine that Sholes and Soule were working on. One day, he suggested that a machine could be made that would write letters and words instead of figures and numbers. Shortly afterwards the three men decided to try and finally secured their first patent in 1868. From this time on, they were busy perfecting and improving the device and took out numerous patents covering each step.

The first typewriter factory in this country was established by Sholes about 1870 on the banks of the old Milwaukee canal which supplied the water power for running the machinery. Here twelve machines were made and all sold at a price of $125 each!

In the United States, the first patent was granted as early as July 31, 1790 to Samuel Hopkins for making pot and pearl ashes. The second, August 6, 1790 was granted to Joseph S. Sampson for manufacturing candles, and on March 14, 1794, a patent for a "machine for ginning cotton" was given to Eli Whitney.

Uncle Sam needs you!
Men and women college
graduates, here are some

War Service Opportunities!

CIVILIANS, (particularly faculty members and alumni of the country's colleges and universities) possessing outstanding qualifications for special services for which vacancies exist will be considered for appointment in each of the following services: in the army of the United States; in the United States naval reserve; and in the United States marine corps reserve. Women graduates have opportunities to serve in the U. S. marine corps women's reserve, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC's), women's reserve of the U. S. navy, WAVES and SPARS.

In general, though not without exception, applicants should be at least 30 years of age and in most cases not beyond the age of 50.

It should be borne in mind that the principal source of commissioned officer personnel for the army is the Officer Candidate School program. For prospective commissions in the naval reserve under the age of 28, the principal avenues are the V-1, V-5, and V-7 programs for men only.

Army Commissions Through O.C.S.

Regarding the Officer Candidate School of the army, it is worthy of note that civilians in class 3-A under selective service may apply for voluntary induction solely for the purpose of prospective officer's training. If such voluntary inductees do not qualify for admission to an O.C.S. within four months after induction, or if they fail to qualify for commission after admission to such a school, they may request release from active duty and transfer to the enlisted reserve corps, where they will not be subject to further military duty until reached in the usual selective service procedure.

The prospective applicant for a commission in the army direct from civil life must first write to the nearest office of Officer Procurement Service, saying "I wish to become an applicant for a commission in the army." He will then receive a brief form on which to list his qualifications. This form should be filled out and returned to the office from which it came. If the application warrants an interview, the applicant will later be called to that office for a personal interview.

There is no assurance that the applicant will be commissioned as his application must wait to meet the requirements of a specific vacancy for which some unit requisitions an officer.

All recommendations for appointment are finally approved or disapproved by the Secretary of War's Personnel Board. No index of vacancies is available for publication. As the types and numbers of vacancies are constantly changing it is obviously impossible to publish such a list, although the district offices of officer procurement service keep on file the complete formal applications of all specially trained individuals, and when a vacancy occurs, they are usually able to supply immediately a man specially qualified to fill it.

Opportunities in the Navy

Qualified civilians not above 50 may be considered for commissions in the naval reserve in various service classes where vacancies exist. The first step is to execute a brief questionnaire form and submit it to the nearest office of naval officer procurement.

Opportunities in the Marine Corps

The principal avenue to commissions in the marine corps is for selected college graduates under 30 years of age to qualify for the Candidates Class in the marine corps reserve.

A limited number of specially trained applicants usually not above the age of 50 may be appointed from civil life. Age limits and minor physical defects may be waived for specialist appointments. Though appointed for special or technical duty, officers will be assigned mainly to serve with troops on the field.

Information as to current requirements at any time may be had by visiting or writing the nearest marine corps recruiting station.
