Rural Graduates Are in National Capital

1,500 Children, Parents and Teachers

Thirteen hundred rural graduates, parents, teachers and friends left Wednesday morning in two special trains, made up of ten coaches each, on the journey to Washington, D. C. Short stops were made enroute at Milwaukee, Gary, Ind., Youngstown and Willard, Ohio, where the high school band played several selections. At Harper's Ferry a group of 4-H members from West Virginia greeted the delegation of Outagamie county 4-H members.

EDWIN BRUSSO KILLED IN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT

Edwin Brusso, 25, of Appleton and Harry Baldwin, 27, of Princeton were killed Wednesday afternoon when the plane in which they were riding crashed in a marsh between Princeton and Berlin, northwest of Green Lake. Brusso was married and the father of three children. He had recently received his transport license.

The plane was imbedded in mud several feet deep and had to be dug out before the bodies could be removed. Brusso's body was in the pilot's seat.

Brusso and Baldwin had arrived at the Princeton airport early Wednesday morning to repair an airplane and were flying back to Appleton for parts when the crash occurred. The plane which

The High School Band

When fifteen hundred citizens of Outagamie county marched down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington yesterday to the capitol building where three hundred and fifty graduates of the rural schools of the county received their diplomas, the Appleton High School band marched at the head of the procession. In their natty blue and gold uniforms the members presented a striking appearance which did much to attract the attention of the blase residents of the national capital to the delegation from Outagamie county.

But the impression made by the band is by no means entirely due to the smart uniforms. The music they have forty are in the second band, and practicing hard so as to win a place in the real band, while about thirty, a number of them in both organizations, are working hard on orchestra music, so that the high school can also boast of an orchestra of no mean ability.

The boys and girls are proud of their band and grateful to the school and the various civic organizations which have helped them attain their present proficiency. They demonstrate their gratitude, not only by their willingness to turn out for practice outside of regular school hours, even during vacation, but by the eagerness with which they volunteer to march in any parade or to play for any civic event. There is never any thought of asking compensation for this time, they feel more than compensated by the knowledge of very fittingly called, arrived in Washington Thursday forenoon and the crowd immediately entered busses and was driven to the Congressional Library. From here they were taken to the steps of the capitol building where presidents are inaugurated and where the commencement exercises for the rural graduates were held. J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the National Educational association, delivered the commencement address. The diplomas given the pupils here were unique, in that each bears the picture of the national capitol.

Following the commencement exercises the pilgrims were taken to hotels for luncheon and spent the afternoon sightseeing and visiting the various public buildings.

Today, Friday, the group will travel by busses to Mount Vernon and Arlington cemetery, as well as to different public buildings. Three wreaths will be placed on the grave of the unknown soldier at Arlington cemetery.

The return trip to Appleton is scheduled to begin at 7:30 this evening and the trains are due to reach Appleton about 8:30 tomorrow, Saturday, evening.

Witnesses to the accident said that the plane developed trouble for a distance of nearly a mile. They called the Green Lake county sheriff before the plane hit the ground. Parts of the plane were found over a mile area. The machine which the men were flying was of a small type and had only recently been overhauled.

FOUR NEW TRUSTEES FOR LAWRENCE COLLEGE

At the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Lawrence college, held last Friday afternoon, four new trustees were elected to that body. They are Walter Kasten and Harold H. Seaman of Milwaukee, C. B. Clark of Appleton and D. Clark Everest of Rothschild. Mr. Kasten is president of the First Wisconsin National bank of Milwaukee and Mr. Seaman is president of the Seaman Body corporation of Milwaukee. Mr. Everest and Mr. Clark have been actively engaged in the manufacture of paper for many years.

learned under the leadership of their director, Mr. E. C. Moore, is such as would attract favorable attention anywhere. It is a real band and the city has every reason to be proud of it. The boys and girls comprising it did not reach their present proficiency in a day, nor did they reach it without a great deal of real hard work. But they are interested in the work and heart and soul for it, so that there was no shirking the long, arduous hours of practice, necessary to mould the raw material with which Mr. Moore had to work, into a musical organization which can stand comparison with any similar band in the country.

When the band was first organized, few of the applicants had even a rudimentary knowledge of band instruments and none a knowledge of band music. Many hours of hard work, many of them put in on evenings and holidays, finally began to show results, and as the results became apparent, applicants for membership became more numerous, until now the band and orchestra squad numbers more than one hundred and twenty boys and girls. Sixty of these have won their places on the band, the organization with which everybody in the city is now familiar, the painstaking care which brought them to their present degree of efficiency and skill.

STATE FEDERATION A. A. L. ELECTS OFFICERS

Thirty members of the Mount Olive and St. Paul Lutheran churches attended the state convention of the Aid Association for Lutherans held at Sheboygan last week. Louis Freude was re-elected secretary. Other officers elected were: A. G. Nickel, Milwaukee, president; Edward Schmidt, Sheboygan, vice president; and Alex O. Benz, Appleton, and H. A. Braun, Reedsville, members of the executive committee. The following were nominated for the board of directors and will be voted on by the membership at large in the near future: E. R. Schneider, Fremont; J. W. Grupe, Hilbert; R. A. Plogt, Milwaukee, and E. A. Ehlert, Milwaukee. Among the speakers at the meeting were G. D. Ziegler, national president of the A. A. L., Appleton; Albert Voecks, national secretary, Appleton; Alex O. Benz, national vice president, Appleton. Five hundred people attended the convention banquet Saturday evening.

Over Fifty People Attend Reunion of 1920 High School Class

One of the most successful gatherings ever held by alumni of Appleton high school was the tenth reunion of the class of 1920 last Saturday at Hotel Northern. About 55 people were in attendance including more than 30 members of the class, their wives and husbands, and several members of the high school faculty at the time the class of 1920 was in school. Two or three of the latter are still teaching at the senior high school.

Mrs. Myra Buchman Hagen was the general chairman in charge of the event. She was assisted by committee chairmen who were Margaret Abraham, Roger R. Tuttrup, Edwin Voigt, Catherine Bachmann, Patricia Ryan and Ione Flotow Voigt. Some of the alumni of the class came distances of several hundred miles to attend this meeting.

The toastmaster was Roger R. Tuttrup. He introduced the various members of the class and each told what he or she had been doing since graduation ten years ago. Talks were given by Margaret Abraham, valedictorian,

DEDICATE REXFORD MEMORIAL AT SHIOCTON NEXT MONDAY

July 16 is the date chosen for the immortalizing of the name of Eben E. Rexford, the Shiocton poet, writer and floriculturalist who is best known by the words of the world-famous song, "Silver Threads Among the Gold." It was learned by the committee in charge of arrangements for placing a marker at Shiocton that his birthday anniversary falls on that date, and it therefore was chosen for the unveiling of a tablet in his memory.

Public exercises are to be held at Shiocton at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of July 16. They will take place on the lawn of the Congregational church, where a large boulder has been placed

1. Permissible without restrictions—Firecrackers not over two inches long and three-eighths inch in diameter, outside measurement, sparklers not over ten inches long and three-sixteenths inch in diameter, colored fire, torches, fountains and flower pots of prescribed kind and packing.

2. Not permissible—Balloons, mortars, cannons, toy pistols, toy revolvers, explosive canes or other contrivance using explosive caps, firecrackers except as provided in 1, and any fireworks containing mercury or yellow phosphorous.

3. Others—Sold, used and displayed under permit from mayor, village president or town chairman, who may require a bond to indemnify persons injured by fireworks.

Fireworks must not be stored, kept, sold or discharged where gasoline is handled.

Selling fireworks to any one not having a valid permit makes the seller liable for all damages.

Parents knowingly permitting their minor children to buy, have in possession, or discharge of fireworks are liable for all damage.

4. Mayors, village presidents, town chairmen, policemen, firemen and all other peace officers are charged with the duty of enforcing this law, under penalty of removal from office. The industrial commission is the enforcing state body.

5. Each day's violation involves a penalty of from ten to five hundred dollars or jail sentence of from thirty days to six months.

6. Penalties prescribed (5) may be recovered by the state in an action for debt.

And in this connection the attention of dealers should be directed to the fact that the supreme court has ruled that both wholesalers and retailers are liable for injury and damage done by illegal fireworks.

Tell the merchant you saw his advertisement in the Review.

and by Walter Voecks, salutatorian. Mr. Tuttrup then read over the class prophecy which appeared in the Clarion annual ten years ago, and compared it for accuracy with the actual events and experiences which have happened during the decade.

After the banquet program the balance of the evening was spent informally. Dan Courtney's orchestra furnished music for dancing. Cards were played by those who did not care to dance.

The class of 1920 numbered 98 graduates, the largest group to receive diplomas up to that time. Graduation exercises were held in the old Appleton theatre, the last commencement program to be staged there. This class spent its four years in high school under the principalship of Paul G. W. Keller, now city superintendent of schools in Eau Claire. Mr. Keller's last official duty at the local school was the presentation of diplomas to the class of '20. Lee Rasey succeeded him as principal the following fall.

Although the membership of this class is scattered in all parts of the country, more than half the members on which a bronze plate will be mounted. Speakers who knew Rexford or were familiar with his life and work will be invited to take part in the program and an invitation will be extended Gov. Walter J. Kohler to act as master of ceremonies. During the unveiling, a soloist will sing, "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

These arrangements were made at a meeting of the Rexford committee Tuesday afternoon at the office of President Henry M. Wriston, of Lawrence college. Walter Olen, of Clintonville, is chairman, and Dr. Wriston, secretary, of the committee. Eben Rexford was a graduate of Lawrence college.

STATUTES REGULATING SALE OF FIREWORKS

The Fourth of July is only a few weeks away, so that it would seem to be timely to call attention to the state law regulating the sale of fireworks. Section 340.70, R. S. of Wisconsin (Chapter 357 Laws of 1929) regulates the sale, use, storage and display of fireworks as follows:

J. D. Jr. Gives $12,000,000
Fear, Strange Thing
Salary, One Million?
Ocean Air Travel, Perhaps

The world needs little and big things.

It needs little brooks to create loveliness; great Niagara to create power.

It needs little fortunes for millions of happy and useful families; big fortunes, with power, to do really big things.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has offered to New York city land for parks and buildings to the value of $12,000,000. One enormous tract of fifty-six acres in Manhattan could not be duplicated.

Seven million dollars' worth of land and five million dollars' worth of buildings, including the magnificent new building for the Gothic art treasures of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, make a considerable gift. You must have many millions to do that.

Fear works strangely.

Amy Johnson, English girl, twenty-three, flew all alone in her little Gypsy Moth plane from England to Australia, ten thousand miles, without fear or hesitation.

Hurricanes, lightning, fogs, wide oceans, deserts, jungles; all meant nothing to that girl.

But when a radio hookup was all arranged and the world was listening, little Miss Johnson ran away.

"I'm afraid," said she.

Henry Ford says business conditions are improving rapidly. "A lot of these fellows were fooling around with the stock market, and they got caught—badly caught. They had to go to work again. Now they have been at work, and they are beginning to enjoy it."

Business is improving, according to Mr. Ford, because intelligent people that were gambling are now working.

* * *

John D. Rockefeller lives quietly, plays golf, leaving men younger than ninety-one to run Standard Oil. But he keeps track of the world and when he advises he advises wisely. Much wisdom was condensed into the few words he said to a player in his foursome, "Be deliberate" and "Talk less and play better." That is a good "How to succeed" recipe.

* * *

Young ladies, graduating in a college for women, are urged by Rev. Dr. Robert Parrish to "be brain and money women."

We owe much of education, science and art to rich men, says the doctor, and must not "despise wealth."

No tendency to despise wealth is visible in this country. But many still maintain that the "brain and money woman" is not as desirable as the "charm and baby woman."

Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel company, Charles M.

Schwab's creation, declined to answer questions about his salary. Lawyers asked: "Is your salary more than one million a year?"

Mr. Grace replied, in substance: "None of your business."

* * *

Once the mention of a $1,000,000 salary would have shaken the stars in their courses, almost. Now it shakes nobody. Everything is a matter of percentage. If you earn $5,000 a year for your employer, you are worth about $2,500.

If you earn $5,000,000 a year, you are worth $250,000. If you earn $50,000,000 a year, you are worth $2,500,000.

Doctor Eckener's recent exploit, flying from Friedrichshafen to Brazil, to the United States, and home across the Atlantic, may mean the beginning of ocean travel for everybody. Before the Zeppelin sailed Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City bank of New York, Colonel Deeds of the United Aircraft company, and others, discussed seriously with Doctor Eckener the proposition of regular transatlantic air travel.

* * *

The boy that invested one dollar in a derby lottery and won $149,000 "split the money three ways." His brother got $35,000, he kept $35,000 and gave his father $79,000.

There was no quarrel. Each felt that he was getting about all the real money in the world.

Everything is comparative. Many men in the United States would call the total $149,000 "not worth thinking about."

The London Daily Mail is agitated because 3,000 men marched through the street at Poona, in India, "openly abusing the government, carrying a portrait of King George, emperor of India, decorated with old shoes, in token of contempt."

The Mail correspondent thinks something should be done to make the Hindus respect their British emperor.

The fact that not very much is done shows how wise the British are. Great Britain will let you talk to your heart's content, if you don't act.

In Hyde Park, a few blocks from Buckingham palace, you may say whatever you think about King George. Nobody will disturb you while you only talk.

A wise nation knows enough not to sit on the safety valve. Man's mouth is his safety valve.

Lions Club to Place Historical Markers

A natural amphitheatre on the north bank of the Fox river opposite the village of Kimberly probably will be the first historical site in Outagamie county to receive one of the markers to be placed by the Lions club. In a committee report given the club last Monday at Conway hotel by W. E. Smith, the authenticity of this site as the place where the "Treaty of the Cedars" was signed seemed definite enough to carry this project through.

Here in 1836, the Menomonee Indians and the white people of the vicinity assembled, crowding the great bowl overlooking the river. On a flat piece of ground at the front, Gov. Dodge, chief executive of the territory of Wisconsin at that time, met the chieftains and executed the document which ceded to the whites land bounded by the Fox river and tributary waters in northeastern Wisconsin. One tract comprising the present Oneida Indian reservation was excepted.

Another possible marker site is a point on the Wolf river at Leeman, where Father Allouez is said to have established the noted St. Mark's mission. The exact location is still in dispute, and further investigation will be made by the historical committee of the club. Mr. Smith also mentioned in his talk the possibility of marking the site of the first commercial electric plant, the homes of Houdini, the magician, Edna Ferber, the novelist, and other points; also preserving in some way the memory of Appleton as the city having the first electric street car.

A WORD FOR FATHER

Mother has been celebrated in song and story; speeches have been made in her honor and many a toast has been drunk to her. Then some one thought of having a whole day all for mother. We have special flowers, special sweets, special dinners, special sermons, even special bargains, for Mother's Day. She deserves every bit of it and more, too.

But what about father? For a long time he was taken for granted. Handy to have around when he was needed, especially when son, or daughter, was just a bit "financially embarrassed," or mother needed "reasoning with." A good deal of the time it was rather hard to be patient with father—his clothes, his manners, the way he ate his soup, his smelly pipe, his shabby slippers, his hair cut.

Then it dawned on us that father was rather important at times, and, belatedly, somebody thought of Father's Day. So far it hasn't "gone over very big." Sometimes we remember to mail dad a card with a filial sentiment, reminded by a window or counter display. Maybe we buy him a tie, or some cigars, or perhaps some fishing tackle. We fuss over him a bit and try to show him, rather awkwardly, that we really do think a lot of him.

Maybe it would make father's heart swell a bit, if "any old time" (not just on Father's Day) son would say: "Some of the fellows are having a corn roast on the bluff, c'mon along, dad." "Bet you a dollar I can lick you four up on nine holes." "Hey, dad, don't you want some help with that paint job?" Or, if daughter would say: "I'm taking you for a spin, father. Want to talk to you." "I'm counting on doing some fishing with you this summer." "Mother is going on that trip with you, dad, and I'm managing the house." Surely you know something your father would like to hear from you, but he'll never hint.

How well do you know your father? He might be worth getting acquainted with and perhaps he'd like a bigger share in the life of the young person who, not so long ago, was the little tot that rode "a cock-horse to Banbury Cross" on dad's knee with such gay abandon, or sleepily listened to bedtime yarns he'd spin to order.

Dad doesn't keep books on us, but what'll you wager we'd be "in the red" if he did? Let's start paying up.

THE WATERWORKS DEPARTMENT

In last week's "What They Say" column we published a letter from Mr. Joseph J. Plank, chairman of the waterworks commission, in which he defended the commission against the criticisms of "Sixth Warder," published the previous week in the same column. We are sorry a misunderstanding arose, because the waterworks commission needs no defense. Its work during the past few years speaks for itself.

The misunderstanding was entirely due to the published reports of the commission's application to the council for permission to erect its own "office building" on the fair grounds. Those reports were incorrect and unfair because they only mentioned the fact that 1,500 people must go to the city hall each month to pay their water bills and gave the impression that the only reason for desiring a new building was to relieve the taxpayers of the necessity of climbing the city hall stairway four times each year.

The real reasons for asking for a new building were not mentioned in the news reports.

When the city purchased the water works plant and appointed the first commission to supervise its operation, the plant had less than two thousand names on its books. Under the efficient management of the commission the plant has been developed and has grown until at the present time approximately six thousand customers are served. That this represents an enormous growth is self-evident. Meters must be serviced, water mains kept in repair, and equipment provided to make new connections, all of which necessitates the provision of greater facilities. Material must be kept on hand so that work can be done without delay because this material can no longer be picked up piecemeal from local jobbers and plumbers, as could be done in the days when the plant was small.

At present this material is scattered all over town. Part is stored in the basement of the city hall where the traffic in the alley is often such that the commission's trucks are delayed for hours at a time. More is stored in the basement of the Appleton Engraving company's plant and still more at the Fox River Paper company. Shop facilities for the repair of meters and other similar equipment are woefully inadequate.

The commission was requesting permission of the council to erect a building which would serve as a warehouse for its material, so that this could be kept in one place. It would also provide shop quarters in which repairs could be made. Naturally the suggestion would follow that the office be located in the same building, so that records could be more conveniently kept and inventories checked.

Under existing conditions the commission is working under a handicap which would not be tolerated by a private corporation. It has demonstrated that it is operating the water works plant in an efficient and business-like manner and the council should waste no time in quibbling about the matter, but should make an immediate and thorough investigation so that existing conditions may be remedied without further delay.

HELPING TO REFOREST WISCONSIN

One of the most worthy of public spirited projects to be accomplished by an Appleton organization recently was the successful campaign staged among the Appleton Kiwanis club membership for funds to help establish a large forest nursery in the northern part of Wisconsin. The 64 Kiwanis clubs of Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan about three weeks ago entered this project to raise $10,000 and have already succeeded in subscribing more than this amount.

The Appleton club took only about three days to "go over the top" in subscribing and exceeding its quota. Every man in the organization subscribed to the forest nursery fund, and can thus feel partly responsible for helping to perpetuate one of the state's greatest natural resources—its pine forests. Here is a project which Appleton Kiwanians and their fellow service club members throughout Wisconsin and northern Michigan may well be proud of. Wisconsin needs nothing more than she does an active interest in and an aggressive program of reforestation.

Here is just one example showing why members of civic groups such as Rotary, Lions, and Kiwanis prefer to have their organizations called service clubs, rather than luncheon clubs or, what is worse, "knife and fork clubs." They are service clubs, but they much prefer to carry on their good work quietly and without any broadcasting or publicity.

A DIFFERENCE

Because he was not on a public highway when his car crashed into a house in Kaukauna, Arnold Doering of Appleton, who had been arrested on a charge of drunken driving in Kaukauna, was discharged by Judge Berg in local municipal court. Doering was immediately rearrested and paid a fine of $10 and costs for drunkenness.

Testimony showed that Doering's car had been parked in a private driveway and when he attempted to drive away he lost control and smashed into the house. It was indeed fortunate that he was too drunk to drive as far as the highway where he would have endangered the lives of any one unfortunate enough to be in the neighborhood.

In municipal court in Neenah Jack Miller was found guilty of drunken driving. He was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail without alternative of a fine, to pay a fine of $100 and costs or serve an additional four months in the county jail, and to lose his driver's license for one year. Ed Hahn, who was in the car with Miller when the latter was arrested, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs or serve thirty days in jail when he pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness.

Appleton Lions club is making plans for a rural-city meeting to be held Monday, June 23, at Greenville Grange hall. A prominent farm speaker has been secured to address the gathering. Plans are also being made for a number of outdoor meetings to be held during the summer.

The heavy rains of the past few weeks have had little effect on the water level in Lake Winnebago. Most of the rainfall was absorbed by the earth, which was very dry.

Charles Widsteen and Fred Marshall of Boy Scouts Troop 2 of the Methodist church and Leslie Ransley of Troop 5, St. Therese church, will attend the trail building camp for Eagle Scouts at Starret lake from August 17 to 31. The camp will be conducted under the supervision of federal forest rangers.

By a vote of 3,431 to 270 the voters of Calumet county on Tuesday endorsed the proposed $1,450,000 bond issue for the construction of permanent highways in the county. Only one precinct, Chilton town, voted against the proposition.

Fourteen residents of Outagamie county have filed applications for citizenship with Sydney M. Shannon, clerk of courts.

J. G. Pfeil, truant officer, is busy taking the school census.

Perhaps you don't realize you can own such a fine suit for $35.00

Recently a customer of ours said, "Why, had I known that my $35 would have purchased such a fine suit, I would have been in long ago."

Maybe that's the case with lots of others.

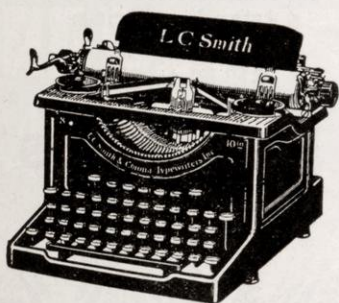

Well, Gentlemen — we can't show you the value on paper here, but we can show you the clothing surprise of 1930 if you'll come to see the suits.

S. D. They will follow a northern route which will take them through Yellowstone National park and out to Portland, Ore., from where they will follow the coast line south to Los Angeles.

QUARANTINE STATIONS FOR AIRLINES

Plans for the establishment of quarantine stations for all airlines throughout the world have been drafted by the health committee of the League of Nations, according to Hugh S. Cummings, surgeon general of the public health service.

The need for a world-wide program for inspection of crews and passengers of airplanes at quarantine stations is increasing in all countries, especially in the countries of Europe, where air-travel to the Far East is becoming very popular. Promiscuous air-travel might result in the transmitting of cholera and plague from India and the Far East to Europe and the west unless guarded against by the proposed quarantine stations.

Stations of this kind are being planned to enforce regulations in this country, which is rapidly expanding in the air commerce with Mexico and South American countries, the surgeon general said.

NOAH BEERY'S VOICE TWO OCTAVES LOWER THAN ANY RECORDED

To Noah Beery belongs the distinction of being the possessor of a basso-profundo voice that is able to register two octaves lower than any other so far recorded on the Vitaphone.

Not very many people today know that Noah Beery has a really remarkable bass singing voice or that before his advent into the silent pictures he was a member of a summer Chicago Grand Opera company. He took featured parts in such operas as "Aida" and "Il Trovatore."

In "Song of the Flame," he takes one of the leading roles as Konstantin, a part well suited to his type of voice and style of acting.

SPARKLING DIALOGUE MAKES "HOLD EVERYTHING" OUTSTANDING COMEDY HIT

The most scintillating dialogue in the history of the talking picture is a feature of "Hold Everything," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone production which is coming to the Appleton theatre starting with the midnight show Saturday; also Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

A portion of these sparkling lines was incorporated in the original stage play by D. E. Sylva and John McGowan, and the remainder was contributed by Robert Lord, who adapted the play for the motion picture screen.

The dialogue keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter, and the librettist is given able assistance by the comedy talents of Joe E. Brown and Winnie Lightner, two of the funniest players of filmdom. As the two lovers who are continually flying at each other's throats, this great comedy team is a positive riot of merriment.

Robbins Bros. Conduct School for the Children That Travel with Their Actor Parents

In these days of the "big circus" where the number employed runs up to a thousand or over, to provide for all of the features, naturally there are whole families in the list of performers. They have children. These children are provided with a schooling. Each morning one of the performers takes the time to gather the little tots under one of the tents and proceed to direct them in their lessons for the day. There is always a teacher or two in the outfit and the instruction is the same as in the public schools. Many of the children are unusually bright and give every evidence of becoming active and important citizens.

The studies are practically the same as those in school although a great deal of stress is put on mathematics and upon physical culture. It is in these lines that some day they will grow up and take the place of their fathers and mothers as performers in the "sawdust ring."

The Robbins Bros. circus soon to be here is the largest in the world giving a street parade. This year they have such world renowned features as Cliff Gregg, the Frenchman who is shot violently out of the mouth of a monster cannon, defying death twice daily. Then there is a baby whale on exhibition by the Pacific Whale company, Buck Owens and his company direct from Hollywood where Buck was noted as a film star in the silent and talking drama. He is accompanied by his leading lady and makes two appearances "in person." The Buck Owens presentation is the same as on location in Southern California and the audience gets first hand knowledge of how they do things out in Hollywood. Then there is Big Bingo the largest elephant in the world. Miss Iowa, the world famous hippo and two hundred other acts with more of everything than ever before.

Short Trips of Interest

St. Nazianz, the Oldest Communistic Settlement in Wisconsin

St. Nazianz in Manitowoc county is the oldest communistic settlement in the state and one of the few which have continued to retain their individuality, in spite of the fact that of late years it has become increasingly difficult to hold the younger generation in the village. The lure of the world is too strong, and one by one they break away from the homes of their fathers. But many of the picturesque old-timers still walk the streets and add to the unusual setting of the village, where the original buildings, erected many years ago, still stand in quaint impressiveness.

A short visit to the village itself is well worth an afternoon and the trip from and back to Appleton can also be made extremely interesting. The most direct route is to take Highway 10 to Reedsville, then turn south on 32. Follow 32 through Collins and over the Manitowoc river until it joins Highway 31. Turn east at the junction with 31 and after a couple of miles turn south on County Trunk "A" which will take you directly to the village. For the return trip, Highway 31 may be followed to Chilton and from Chilton Highways 57 and 114 will bring you home, after a trip of approximately 90 miles over state trunk highways.

But for those who like to get off the main highways and visit the by-roads, we would suggest following Highway 10 until you come in sight of Reedsville, then turn south for a mile, then one mile west and then south again. Follow this road, travelling south and occasionally tending a little towards the east until you join Highway 32 just south of Collins and north of the bridge across the Manitowoc river. Follow 31 and County Trunk "A" to St. Nazianz. For the return trip go west on the little road which leads past the park and winds through the hills until it joins 31 a few miles east of Hayton. Follow 31 to Chilton and at Chilton turn west past the water tower and follow this road which will bring you to the southern limits of Stockbridge, giving you a wonderful view of Lake Winnebago as you cross the top of the ridge. In Stockbridge turn west and drive towards the lake one mile before turning north. Or if you have time, continue on to the lake shore where a splendid view of the lake may be enjoyed from the high banks. A pretty little park is also inviting to the wayfarer. Coming back, turn north at the first road and follow it for several miles, with occasional glimpses of the lake. It comes back to 55 a few miles south of Sherwood and you can either take the conventional way home through Sherwood, or go through High Cliff and down the hill road. If it is about sunset, it would be worth while waiting to watch the sun sink behind the distant horizon. If you do not care to drive down the hill road, on which you should not trust to your brakes alone, but should leave the gears in low, so that the engine will help the brakes, then return to 55 and come back through Sherwood.

This trip is very interesting and the roads uniformly good, except in a few places where the highway crews are working. But even these spots can be negotiated by the careful driver without difficulty and the scenery will more than compensate the passengers for the rougher going. Besides you will meet practically no traffic and consequently will have ample time to stop and admire some of the wonderful honey locusts growing throughout this section and which are now in full bloom.

Chicago Board of Trade opened its $22,000,000 new home on Monday. Eighty-two years ago it began functioning in a little poorly lighted room over a flour store on South Water street.

BREAD

"Fresh Daily"

FOR

Bread is the staff of life. No meal is complete without it. It doesn't make any difference whether it is offered to the family in the regulation loaf or made into separate rolls, bread in some form is a part of every meal. It may be fine white bread, raisin bread, nut bread, bran, rye, entire wheat, graham, or any combination of these various forms of the grain, but it cannot be dispensed with.

if produced by Appleton Home Owned Bakers, you are assured of the finest ingredients.

Why take the responsibility of doing your own baking in these sultry, summer days? Why gamble on the possibility of over-rising, sour dough, or a too-large batch which becomes moldy easily in this hot weather when your home baker makes baking appetizing, health and energy-giving bread his business. Let him do this hard but necessary work for you. He is equipped to handle the job in all sorts of weather, extremely hot or very cold, and his experience and expert knowledge insure a perfect product.

You can have fresh bread daily without the annoyance of making it if you will

He Says County Is Prohibited by Law from Insuring in a Mutual Co.

To the Taxpayers of Outagamie County:—Relative to the controversy over placing of compensation and public liability insurance by the Outagamie county highway commission, I wish to place before the public a legal viewpoint as passed upon by many courts of the land.

The question, "Can a municipality legally insure property in a mutual company?" has been submitted many times.

The decisions bring out these points: "The municipality through its commissioners have no right or authority to become members of a mutual company where it is possible that assessments may be levied to satisfy losses which may accrue in the future and of uncertain amounts. In order to be insured in such a company the insured must and does become a member of the company, (the name 'mutual' indicates this).

"It is suggested also that a rule of public policy prevents a member of board or commission from being interested as a member in any contract made on behalf of the public interests they represent.

"Furthermore, a contract of insurance attempted to be made by a board or commission binding a municipality to become members of a mutual insurance company would be absolutely void as being without power to impose such a liability upon the public."

The above quoted court decisions show that there is no escape from the conclusions that members of a board or commission who place business in a mutual company are in the insurance business and that they have no authority to embark upon an enterprise of this kind. I am strongly of the opinion, therefore, that our highway commission is without authority to place insurance in any mutual company.

Respectfully submitted,
P. M. Conkey.

Does Not Agree with Mr. Conkey

To the Taxpayers of Outagamie County:—I wish to make a brief reply to Mr. P. M. Conkey's letter in the People's Forum in the June 9 issue of the Appleton Post-Crescent.

In his letter Mr. Conkey questions the legal right of the county highway committee to place their compensation insurance with a mutual company.

The Wisconsin insurance laws provide as follows:

(201.11 3.) "Any mutual insurance company may issue policies to any public or private corporation, board or association in this state and elsewhere; and any public or private corporation, board or association of this state is authorized to make application, enter into agreements for and hold policies in any mutual company."

We believe that this clearly and specifically shows that any county or municipality can legally place their insurance with a mutual company.

Respectfully submitted,
H. T. Nolan.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

INSTALLMENT XVII

Even then, in his exhaustion, Paul insisted on walking at her side until the last nerve in him broke. It was this which robbed him of a day and a night of conscious life.

When he came to himself again, after hours of tortuous sleep, Derwent told him that Carla was badly hurt but would live.

Claire, he said, had returned to her people in New York the second day after his supposed death. Lucy-Belle had gone with her. Word had been sent to her that he and Carla were alive, and Lucy-Belle had replied, saying that Claire was very ill. Then had come a telegram from Claire.

Derwent gave it to Paul.

"I am so happy," it said. "Come to me as quickly as you can. Only God knows how glad I am."

"It sometimes takes a thing like this to bring out the love in a woman's heart," said Derwent, remembering Paul's years of loneliness.

"Yes, it does," said Paul, and he saw Carla's face between him and the words which Claire had written.

He went to see Carla soon afterward. He had taken a great deal of pride in the clean, white hospital he had built for the company, and now he blessed it. Derwent told him what it had meant for Carla. They had X-rayed her and had made the extraordinary discovery that there was not a broken bone in her body. But something had happened to her back, and she was paralyzed from her waist down. Temporarily, he believed. Knowing what Paul would have done under the circumstances, he had sent to Quebec and Montreal for expert assistance, to consult with the company staff.

Carla was propped up against a mass of pillows in her snowy bed when Paul arrived. Everything was white about her, except the rich darkness of her hair—the room, the bed, her lacy gown, her face. Like that, with two silky braids streaming over her shoulders, she might have been a child, one who had been a long time sick, with an exquisite, fragile beauty about her. He had not expected to find her so like a lily-petaled flower whose soul a breath might carry away.

He seated himself beside her, and she let her hand creep over the coverlet to him. It was helplessly weak. Her fingers were only a feathery pressure about his.

"Please don't scold me, Paul," she said faintly, trying to smile. "You see, I was right. If the rocks had buried you, I could never have got you out and brought you home. Could I?"

He did not answer, but held her hand so closely that a joyous little melody of content came for a moment in her throat. "I am glad. I was afraid you would be angry with me. Now I know I shall get well quickly!"

It seemed difficult for them to find things to say. Paul, fighting, with the grimly set lines of an Indian in his face, was holding back what he wanted to tell her. Carla knew. A little more and she would have cried, her own weakness letting down the thing which both were valiantly making an effort to hold between them. He told her about the specialists who were on their way, and that their own staff had no doubt but that she would very soon be on her feet again. He tried to talk without a strain in his voice, yet he could feel the falseness and pretense of his effort when he wanted to take her in his arms and kiss her pale, sweet face.

Carla knew this, too.

At last, when it was time for him to leave her, she said: "When are you going home?"

"I don't know," he replied.

"It must be soon," she urged. "I want it that way. You must start today—or tomorrow. Only that will make me well. Claire wants you. Please—read this—"

She gave him a crumpled yellow slip of paper. It was a telegram, crushed, as if she had been holding it a long time before he came. He smoothed it out and read the words which his wife had sent her. The message was almost identical with the one he had received, giving him the impression that Claire, in the stress of her emotion, had been able to find but a single thought for them both.

"I am so happy," it said. "Send Paul to me as quickly as you can. Only God knows how glad I am."

"She has faith in me," said Carla. "She asks me to send you to her. What a privilege that is, Paul, for one woman to give another! No matter how hard I try I can never be as wonderful as Claire. The world does not hold many women like her. She loves you. She wants you. When will you go to her?"

"You said—tomorrow."

"Yes, tomorrow."

He rose, and stood looking down at her. "I will go," he said. "But some time I will come for you, Carla. Maybe not now, not in this life, but sometime. May I continue to dream that?"

"It is not a dream," she said. "It is faith. I am giving you up for a little while, that is all. Sometime, in another life, these tests which God put upon us will return you to me."

When he looked back at her from the door she was smiling, her eyes filled with tears.

He tried to readjust himself between the time of this last visit with Carla and his departure for home. His effort was an honest one, a struggle to fit himself to certain demands which he accepted as necessary and inevitable. He was sure of himself as he returned to Claire. It was almost an exultant sureness, which left upon him no sign of spiritual or physical torment. He was possessed now by memories which blessed even as they burned. It was as if somewhere in him were a little song, a part of himself, which said: "I have a room whereunto no one enters save I, alone. There sits a memory on a throne. There my life centers," Carla was the memory. He made no effort to turn away from the truth, or harden himself in his contemplation of it. Some one had said that memory was a paradise from which Fate could not drive one. And the room which had built itself in his heart could never be leveled or taken away from him. It was indestructible, like a soul.

Claire, in a way, became the keeper at the door. Because of her he had closed it, and because of her he would never open it except to himself. He could conceive of no one but Claire in this sacred place. A long time ago, when he was a boy, there had been in his room a picture of an angel with snowy wings and golden hair. She seemed to be floating through clouds, and he remembered that his first ideas of heaven came from this angel and that she inspired him to ask questions which his mother sometimes found difficult to answer. The picture had always remained in his mind. It recurred to him in thinking of Claire. It was impossible for him to feel resentment against his fate, or even a desire to change it, in going to her. There were occasional women at whose breasts the world found its spiritual glory. Claire, he knew, was one of them—like the angel in his room. It was he who had been the misfit in their lives, and this defect in himself he was prepared to remedy—if he could.

He read Claire's telegram many times on the way south. He tried to read between its lines. He tried to understand more clearly the change which had come over her. Derwent had told him how she had watched where the water roared out of the chasm. "Whiter than death, as if she would die unless you came out alive," he had said. And Carla; "She loves you. She wants you." And now her own words on the yellow paper in his hand, entreating him to come to her as quickly as he could. There was a strange singing in his heart and a dull grief. If she should love him—at last—like that. After years of waiting, and hoping, and of yearning for a woman to be a part of him—children—a home he had dreamed of—

He folded the telegram for a last time and put it in his pocket.

He was seeing the tears in Carla's eyes.

should be arranged to make broken surfaces that result in shelter and that each pocket formed will make an ideal home for some particular plant. You see the necessity of careful planning, beforehand.

Avoid arrangements which reveal too much of a single view, or too direct a slope or bank. Vary the perspective, so that no complete section can be seen from one point. Both rocks and plants, of course, must bear some proportion to the size and plan of the garden, whether you make single plant pockets or have room for grouping.

Placing the foundation rocks is most important. Dig into the banks at a slight angle and place the rocks well into the ground, so that they are almost hidden from view, so that they may hold soil and moisture for the plants.

A lovely type is the sunken garden, formed by excavating a part of the area to be used and throwing up the soil removed around the edges. In this way a depth of four or five feet below ground level provides space for a planting six or seven feet high.

While many alpine plants inhabit limestone rocks naturally, soil composition is not so important as it seems. A large proportion of mountain vegetation will grow freely in a mixture of loam, grit, old brick, rubble or similar soil. Those of you who have transferred the wild columbine, white violet, tiny ferns and other inhabitants of limestone cliffs, to your home garden can testify to this.

If your soil is heavy clay you must lighten it with the materials mentioned to provide drainage. Sand, because it is porous, helps toward warmth and drainage. Leaf mould, of course, is a help in several ways, and generally a requirement in the soil mixture for wood plants.

When you have built your rock garden allow it to settle thoroughly before planting. This will require a week or more, but can be hastened by using water in two or three thorough soakings. Then add more soil.

The success of the planting depends a good deal upon the correct placing of the roots, so that they will quickly reach a cool and nourishing spot.

After completing the planting mulch the surface around each plant, or over all, with small stone and rock chips, using lime chips for lime loving plants and sandstone for the others. In winter protect by covering with straw and a little well-rotted manure.

Nurserymen will supply with seeds, bulbs, plants, or shrubs for your rock garden, whether it be a shady or a sunny space, and advise you of those best suited to your especial needs. Numbers of wild things may find a place there; anemone, violets, buttercups, trillium, harebell, columbine, bits of ferns and a dozen other woody friends that you may wish to bring to this sanctuary.

There are many books available, too. Names will be printed in this column, if you want them. Some are written especially for amateurs in this phase of gardening. Study them, then plan your rock garden and make it a thing of real beauty instead of the sad looking mass of stones and dirt and discouraged little plants that sometimes goes by that name.

IN and OUT of the Kitchen

Blossom Fritters

(From an old German rule)

Did you ever make elderberry blossom fritters? Do try them! They are the daintiest and most "delicate-essen" imaginable and you will soon be able to gather the lacy blooms in your own garden, along the wayside or the hedges and fencerows.

Candied orange peel, ginger root, candied violets and rose leaves; and now these lacy bits made of fragrant blossoms!

Wash the blossoms carefully under running water. Have ready the fritter batter and the hot fat.

Hold the spreading head of blossoms by the stem, which you have left about two inches long, dip it into the batter and drop into the hot fat. Pile the finished fritters onto a platter and sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

Fritter Batter

Mix and sift 1 1/3 cups pastry flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Add 2/3 cup milk and 1 well beaten egg, stirring until smooth.

"Children Should Be Seen and Heard"

By Edith D. Dixon

"Should children be restrained in the presence of their elders?" asks a worried parent. "I do not want to constantly suppress them and yet I am disturbed by the way they monopolize the conversation at meal time. My husband and myself cannot get a word in edgewise and when guests are present I am so ashamed."

If children are to show consideration for guests, they must practice that same consideration daily in the home. Have you experienced, as a guest at a meal when you were attempting to carry on a conversation, the annoyance of repeated interruptions such as, "Helen, hold your spoon correctly," or "William, don't take such big bites," or "Henry, dear, tell Mrs. Blank what you got in spelling today. Henry always gets 100 in spelling."

Children who interrupt their elders in conversation usually live in a home where the elders interrupt each other. Such children need to be shown by example as well as by precept that a social group must have both talkers and listeners. That if you have something entertaining to tell, you are justified in expecting others to listen, but also that having told your story, it is then your business to give someone else the same privilege.

Too often we wait until the children get into discussion and wrangling and then try to suppress them. It is possible to establish standards for table conversation by which pleasant and entertaining stories and experiences are reserved for that time. This gives the child practice in developing conversational power and saves him from feeling like a "dub" when later he accepts social engagements. It is also a better aid to digestion than growling over the meals, complaining about the teacher, or telling about one's own failures. The family table should not be the place for checking on the misdemeanors committed by the children during the day. Too often the father's pleasure in the meal is destroyed by such practice.

The maxim, "Children should be seen and not heard," is woefully out of date and rightly so; there is no legitimate reason for excluding children at all times from a share in the entertainment of guests. But the child who is forward and plays up for attention is the one who has been stimulated by the approval and encouragement of adults to show off in the presence of company.

Until the child is old enough to take a legitimate part in the conversation at 11 or 12 years, it would be better to excuse him from the table early or to serve his meal in another room or before the guests arrive. It is expecting too much that he sit quietly through a long dinner hour.

Our Friendly Neighbors

The Tale of a Wren

On Christmas eve, a long time ago, a little boy came to my door. He had in his arms a big bulging package all wrapped in white tissue paper and ornamented with Christmas seals, and said as he handed it to me: "I made this for you at school. I thought you'd like it. It's a wren house."

Well, in due time the wren house was mounted on a strong pole against the fence which ran between this little neighbor's yard and mine. And again, in due time, the wren came, examined the house inside and out, and appeared over-joyed. He gathered, as is their wont, all the coarser sticks for the foundation of the nest, singing all the time; then seemed to be waiting, sitting atop of the house and singing in a different way. Then he was gone for three days. I wondered how far he flew and where.

When he returned he had with him the tiniest female, who immediately accepted the little house and carried in the finer materials with which to finish it, threads, feathers, soft bits. And then when she had laid her eggs and was incubating, an English cock sparrow placed himself on the roof over the entrance and stayed there. Every time the little wren attempted to come out he would peck at her; every time the male tried to bring his little mate a worm, the sparrow would stand guard and drive him off. Between times I tried to help by driving off the sparrow, but to no avail. In the end the female left the place and I never saw her again.

In the autumn, and again the next spring, the male wren came back and set to work busily carrying materials into the house, singing fiercely in the meantime, but all that summer no female came with him. The next summer it was the same, and I determined to investigate. The house was taken down and the top removed. To my everlasting consternation I found it filled—so tightly jammed that I could with difficulty remove them—with tiny pieces of rusty woven-wire fencing

I decided that the wren had determined that, if his family couldn't live there in peace, no one else should! But it has always been a puzzle to me how that little bird had the strength to crum the house so full and so tightly with the pieces of wire, that I could hardly get them out.

RECENT DEATHS

Carl W. Kamps, 31, formerly of Appleton, died last week at Pasadena, Cal. He had been engaged as golf professional at Beverly Hills, Cal., for several years. He leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Kamps of Pasadena and formerly of Appleton; four brothers, Norman, Sherman, Victor and Richard; five sisters, Mrs. P. C. Knight, Mrs. J. Pappas and Miss Olive Kamps, all of Pasadena, Mrs. B. J. Beschta and Mrs. E. W. Bates of Appleton. The funeral was held in Pasadena Monday.

Charles E. Forward, 68, formerly of Appleton, died Friday evening at Milwaukee. He leaves two sons and two daughters in Milwaukee; two brothers, Frank Forward in Sheboygan and Judson Fowler in Appleton. The body was brought to Appleton and the funeral was held Monday from the home of his brother, Judson Fowler, 1208 N. State street. Rev. E. Hasselblad officiated.

George L. Simpson, 60, who formerly lived in Appleton, passed away at his home in Manitowoc Monday. He was a brother of Miss Minnie Simpson, who died two weeks ago.

Boy Scouts Camp-O-Ral

Flag Day and Covered-Wagon Day To Be Commemorated by Demonstration in Erb Park

Probably the greatest outdoor gathering of boys that the Fox River valley has ever seen will take place when over 400 Boy Scouts of the Valley Council assemble for their first annual Camp-O-Ral, on June 14 and 15, at Erb park in Appleton.

The days' activities will start with a "Covered Wagon parade" on College avenue, from State street to Durkee street, then out to the park. At this time, throughout the entire country, the Covered Wagon centennial is being celebrated and the Scouts are going to attempt to give spectators a glimpse of what the early settlers looked like as they opened up that great country to the west of us. One exception, however, will be that these boys will be clad in their snappy looking khaki uniforms, with packs and blanket rolls on their backs. Ahead of them will be the covered wagons and old pioneers on horseback. The parade should be a most interesting sight.

Within an hour after reaching Erb park, a section of the park will be turned into a camp of live and swarming boys. Tents and shelters of all descriptions, will be erected to sleep in on Saturday night, probably over 150 of them. About 80 Scout patrols will kindle fires and start to prepare the noonday meal. A great collection of choice dishes will come off the fires and be consumed in short order by this hungry gathering. Many a mother will be surprised to see what a good cook she has unknowingly had in the family. Each Troop is providing its own equipment and food. They have worked out their own menus and if you don't believe that boys can cook, just come to the park and watch them.

Each Troop will set up an exhibit of some of the handicraft work done throughout the year. Included in these will be archery tackle, bird houses, model airplanes, bridges, towers, ships, air ports, leather work, beadwork, wood carving, whittling, knots and splices, nature collections and many other things close to a boy's heart.

During the afternoon, all troops will put on demonstrations in woodcraft in which they will build everything from model bridges to real man sized log huts, hewn and notched with a hand axe. This will be followed by demonstrations in coat stretcher making, fire building, chariot races, rescue races, drill, blanket stretcher races, shoe races, life line contests, water boiling contests, shelter tent pitching, pillow fights, tub tilting, wall scaling, first aid, and many others. All of these will be in the nature of games demonstrating the play way of learning which predominates in the Scout program.

At 4:30 P.M. there will be a formal retreat and flag ceremony in commemoration of Flag day. Music for this occasion will be provided by the Scout Drum and Bugle corps.

After supper a program of a varied nature will be carried out in co-operation with the 120th Artillery band which will play its regular weekly concert, and with the Appleton Elks, who will conduct a Flag day program. Mayor John Diener of Green Bay will be the speaker. This will start with the Scout campfire at 7:15. Features on the program will be community singing, investiture of new Scouts, Artillery band concert, burning of the mortgage on the Scout camp, an address by the mayor of Green Bay, a colorful historical flag pageant and stunts by the Scout troops.

Taps will be sounded at 10 P.M. and the 400 boys will crawl into their tents for a good night's rest. The call of the bugle will rouse them at 6:00 A.M. on Sunday morning. The Catholic boys will go to mass at St. Therese church, near the park. At 7:00 A.M. a fellowship service for all Scouts will be held in the park following which they will prepare their breakfasts, eat and break camp in sufficient time that they can all attend their own Sunday school or church.

An interesting day is in store not only for the Scouts but for those who want to see scouting in actual operation, and citizens of Appleton are earnestly invited to visit the park and get first hand acquaintance with the work being done by the Scouts.
