I am sweaty and nervous. My hands are cold and shaky. I press the big keys on the piano harder than I probably should. There are twelve days of Christmas and I will play EVERY DAY. My teacher is next to me, turning the page if I need it. My mom always praised George for how he kept time by nodding his head, so I rock HARDER. The bench below me creaks. The pounding of the piano is still going. On the sixth day of Christmas my true love gave to me - "no one is singing. It's a Christmas piano recital. I'm towards the end. I was waiting behind the altar and watched as the chairs around me emptied as each student went to play. TICK TICK TICK. It's dark out now and the windows show no stars. The Church is lit towards the front but dark in its corners. My parents and brothers are ~~in~~ in the pews somewhere. I return to my piece. The repeat sign taunts me as I repeat go back to play again and again. I'm more focused on getting through the song to notice how parents check their watches and lock eyes with each other. The slight pause of my hands before I start again for day 9 allows enough time for people to mistakenly clap. I play on. People nervously chuckle. My cheeks burn and I play faster. Faster. Why did I choose such a long long long song? Twelve days long of a song? It's the twelfth day. I am now playing back with furver. I am done. A pause. people clap and sigh in relief. I look to my teacher and she smiles. I grab my sheets, stand up, and bow. Rush back to the pews.

I am walking to a teacher's classroom with a boy, we are carrying something about filled w/ stuff? Point is it doesn't matter. What matters is that middle crushes are weird. They can be so sweet and innocent but also painful and deep for the young. My chest felt tight. TICKTICKTICKTICK I peek glances at my partner of delivery. He's not even looking. Maybe he's also shy, maybe he likes me? I think. I'm so wrong. I put scenarios in the air between us. It's a one sided crush built on imagination. My mind more romantic than this boy will ever be even when he eventually proposes to someone in his early 30s.
My cheeks get red. I don't know this yet. Hope fills my everyday. TICKTICKTICK we keep climbing up the bright stairs. We don't speak to each other. For me, a sign of requited longing in the preteen way, for him indifference.
I don't speak and instead my breath is caught in my thoughts throat. I know if he spoke I'd have to clear my throat by speaking. My dreams are more eventful than this moment between "us" or you and me. We're almost to the desired classroom. My arms ache a bit. I lag behind. No I will not walk even with you—side by side. That's too obvious. You'll know and you'll be grossed out.

THEN

Tues. Oct. 19

When I was a kid, I spent countless hours watching TV in my parents' room. I would sit on the ground in front of their bed, eyes glued to the TV—directly in front of me. I sat there in the dark all alone and I often try to remember how I was feeling back then ~~to~~ no avail, I'd switch from Disney channel to Cartoon Network to Nickelodeon and back. Was I sad? Was I lonely? Was I trying to fill some void in my chest? ~~when~~ I remember turning the TV off, putting the remote back on my dad's nightstand, and slowly opening the door, light nearly blinding me as I stepped out to join the others.

Called my mom on the way home that class.

Wed. Oct. 20

Now I watch a lot of TV and movies with my roommates. The lights are on and I'm on a futon! I'm no longer alone as I watch. We don't have cable but we still are able to surf through Netflix, Hulu, HBO Max. I'm just as focused as I watch and I still don't like when people interrupt but the whole in my chest ~~doesn't~~ is no longer there. I watch to watch not to fill my time.

Thurs. Oct. 21

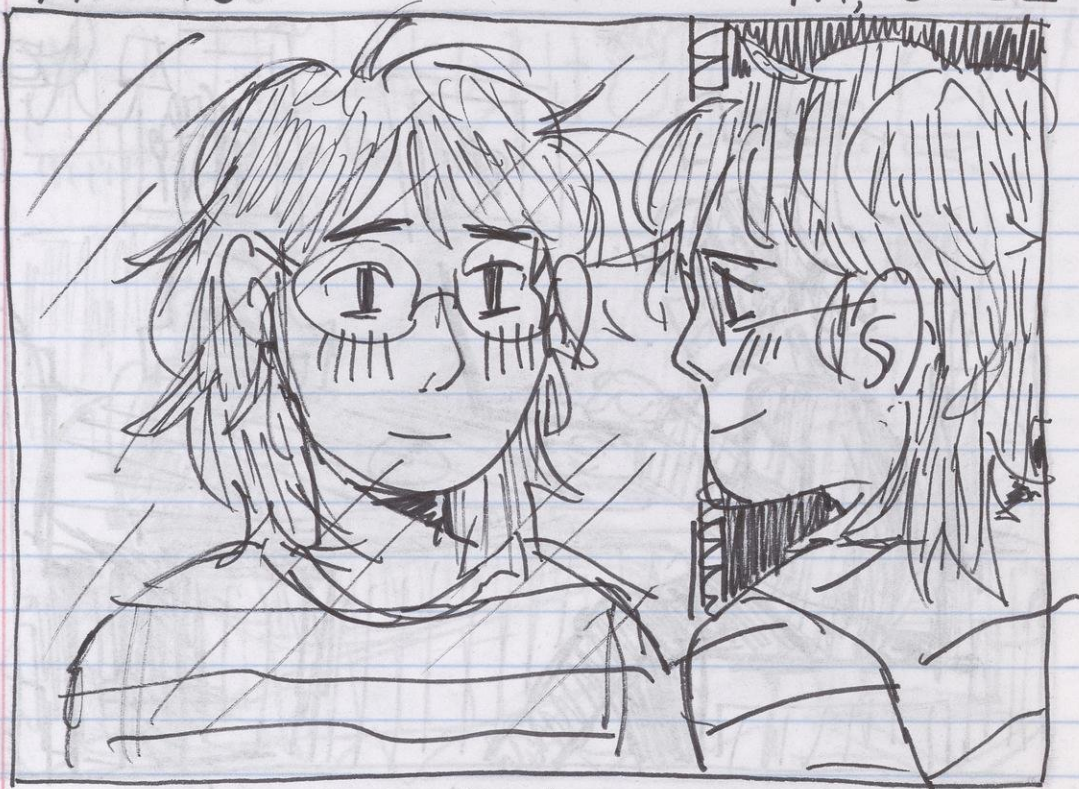

When I was in middle school and high school I hated my hair. It was always frizzy and way longer than I wanted. I'd always put it in a ponytail, not knowing how to do anything else with it. On my bad days I would grab fistfuls and pull, frustrated and angry and full of hate. I felt like I couldn't cut it because my dad preferred it long - he'd always say not to cut my hair. I was afraid to.

Fri, Oct. 22

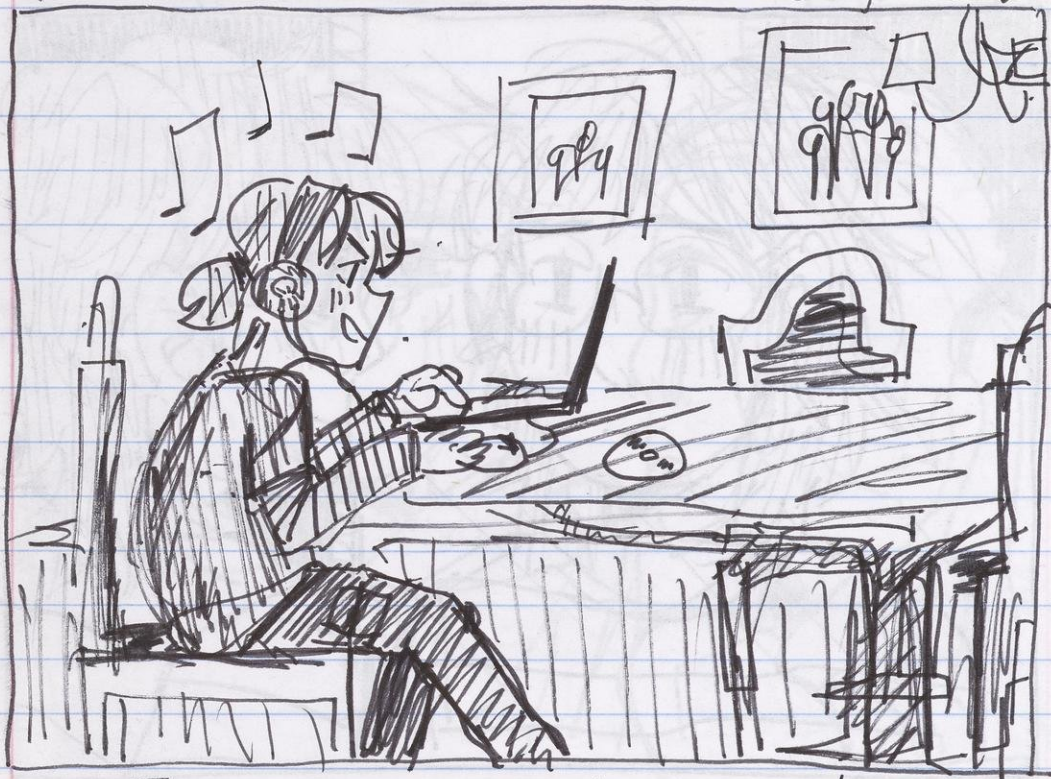

I think I've finally come to a place where I don't look in the mirror and want to rip my hair out from its roots. It's a relief. I like to keep my hair short. It needs lots of layers for its "shag"-like look. It's just a little thing about me but I feel like I've reclaimed a part of myself from my parents, from my dad... I feel more like me with this type of haircut. But also! I want to note that I need to work on self-love more. I feel bad for the me who'd fall apart, face red in embarrassment of her hair and I want to grow away from that. One step at a time though.

Sat, Oct. 23

Ever since I was a kid, I've loved music. It's hard to track when it began. Whether it was listening to the Radio Disney CD on Mom's ~~po~~ Sony portable CD player, listening to "Born to be Alive" on cassette in Dad's Camaro on hot summer days, or when I got my very own ^{BLUE} iPod nano when I turned 10. I've always been obsessed. I burned my own CDs for gifts since fifth grade. Since ~~then~~ even then, I've collected music in some way. Sometimes I feel like music has been my longest friendship.

Sun, Oct. 24

If I made CDs ~~there~~ for people when I was younger, now I make playlists. Music has changed and I've grown with it, as well as technology. In my last two years of high school and college so far, my music tastes have expanded more and more. I can't go a day without listening to something. I take pride in my Spotify account and will admit to being somewhat of a "music snob". It is an essential part of my identity.

Movie

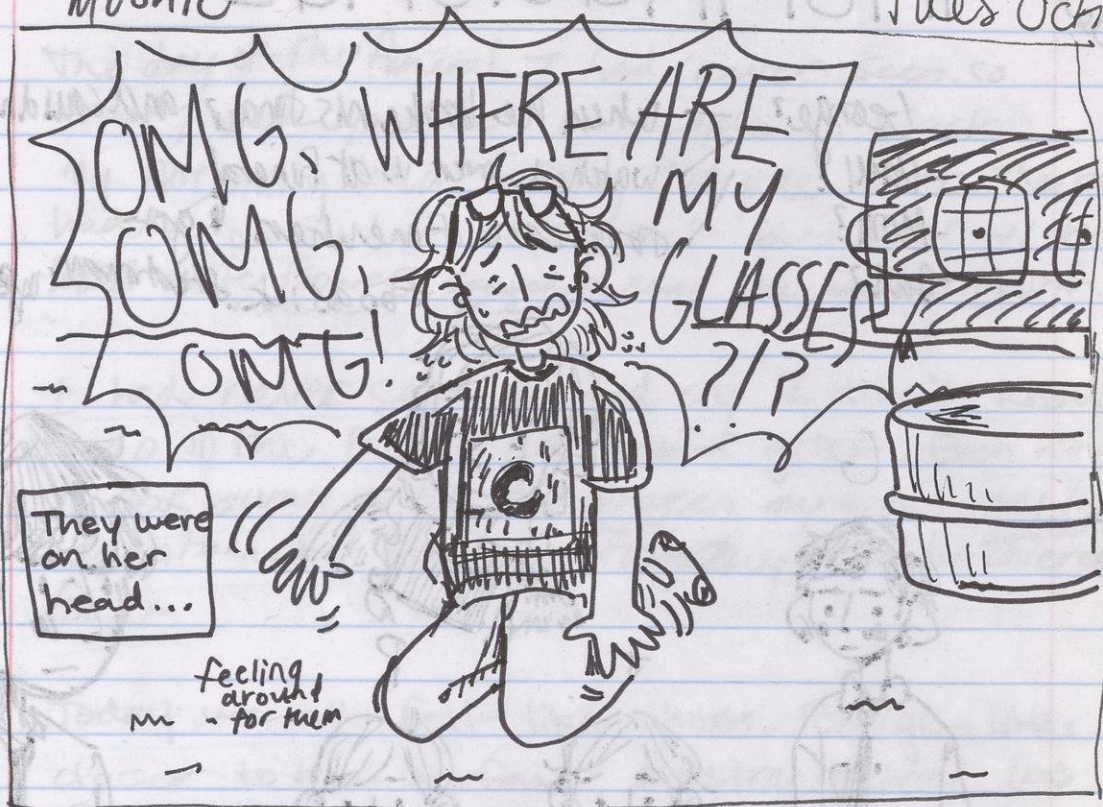

Mon. Oct. 25

In grade school and middle school, I was too embarrassed to wear my glasses. I would pretend to forget them at home because I was too self-conscious of how I looked with them on. As a result, I would ask my teachers if I could sit closer in the front so I could see the board better. My eyes often hurt from squinting so much. When people said "hi" to me in the halls, I wouldn't know who it was—couldn't see them clearly. Crazy how I'd rather sit on the dirty classroom floor than put my glasses on.

MOONIC

Tues Oct 26

NOW, I can't do anything without my glasses! In fact, I feel like my face ~~feels~~ looks weird WITHOUT them. I wear them all the time and only take them off for sleeping and showering. People have said I should try contacts ~~because~~ but I'm afraid I would mess up and stab my eye or something... I finally started wearing my glasses like I should in sophomore or junior year of ~~high~~ highschool. I'm proud of overcoming my embarrassment/fear of wearing them.

The day of the funeral. I had never seen so many sad people. or people in black.

My normally loud family had gone quiet. The room had a particular odor that blended w/ the ~~fresh~~ white flowers ~~around~~ near the ~~walls~~ front.
near her.

I had never seen my dad cry. I didn't know what to do in the face of his ~~great~~ grief. Even now I look away, a furrow between my brows, my lips downturned. His glasses ^{would} fog up and he ^{would} cover his face.

Today we all felt like ghosts. Feelings a little closer to the surface, more transparent. We floated around the room from here to there seeking warmth, faces pale in silence.

My mom stood with my dad, a united front in the line of people giving them words of sorrow and love. I didn't know what to do with the space they left.

But George was there always. He held his head high and we looked to him for direction, for a rope tied to reality. Funerals are scary for kids. Gloom in the air. But even so George held our hands and put his arms around our shoulders—what he often did for school pictures—a first day of school photos or family vacation poses. I thought he'd rather hang out with our cousins in Mitchell but instead he took care of us. Talked when we were spoken to, facing relatives we still didn't know how to ~~talk~~ to.

Funerals are scary for kids.
The fresh flowers and gloom filling the air.

10/2/10

We lurked in corners, but we stood together. A huddle. George told us that dad would be okay and he just needed time. He was so brave ~~it~~ in a time where I was lost, confused, adrift.

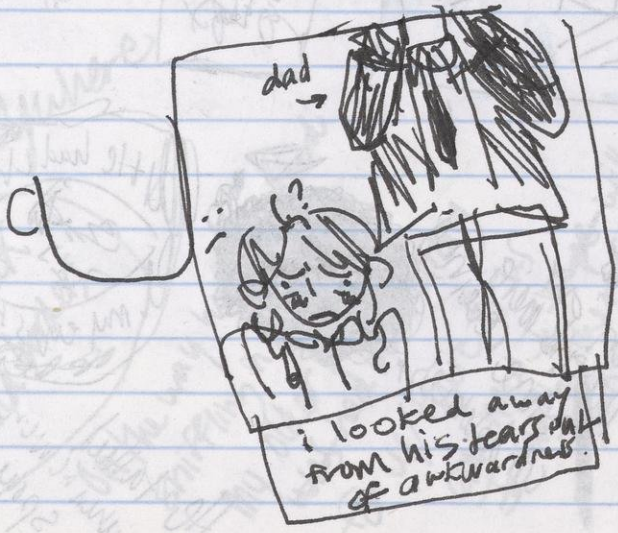

I am amazed at the skinny, pimply faced sixteen year old boy who watched his parents cry and held onto our hands. When I cried as a result of seeing my parents cry he hugged me so tight. The brother who I would get in fights with was ~~our~~ our life preserver in this sea of tears and Kleenex.

I didn't say much that day. Was wide-eyed, nervous. The three of us went to the open casket and knelt and prayed. I quickly peeked at my grandma then looked away. Unsure of what I was seeing. We did not linger, ~~and~~ ~~the~~ long.

He had changed in my eyes that day. No longer a source of teasing and complaints but an older brother I could depend on, lean on. He wasn't just a person I lost to in Pokemon ~~at~~ all the time or the person who'd get angry when he didn't eat but the person who held our hands when we didn't know what to do with them. Who's changing voice would comfort us when our parents weren't ^{there to} ~~there to~~ comfort us. He is my older brother and I want to be like him to others.

It'll be okay.

 Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets. Full of

MOONIE

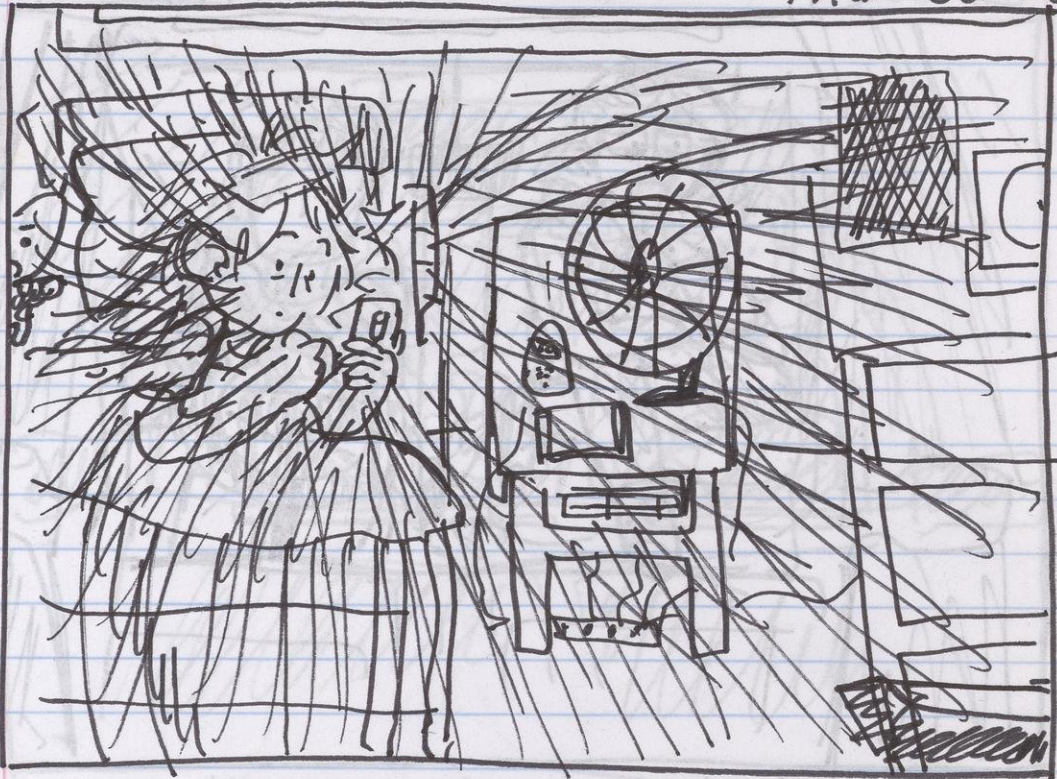

Wed. Oct. 27

Ever since I was a kid, I would stay up late reading. I was very skilled at shutting my light off whenever I heard my parents' door open. Younger me was a night owl, a ninja at reading past my bedtime. Some books I stayed up reading include: the Percy Jackson series, Dork Diaries, Harry Potter, and The Keeper of the Lost Cities. Full of adventure and friendship, they bled into my dreams when I turned my light off for the night.

Moonte

Thurs. Oct. 28

Now, I still like to read before bed every once in a while. However, the pages ~~are now~~ I turned are now a scroll on my phone screen. I read more fanfiction than novels. My nighttime routine still takes me on adventures late into the night. This time, I don't have to worry about my parents checking to see if I'm asleep or not.

Fri. Oct. 29

In high school I was always exhausted from staying up super late doing homework. A mixture of anxiety and depression lead me to habits of procrastinating starting homework till 10 pm on a good day. I'd often get 4 hours of sleep, if not less, before having to wake up again for another day of school. My little brother, also in high school with me, would wake me up and drive us to school. I wonder if it hurt him to see me that way or if he just thought it was normal. It was a dark time for me.

moonie

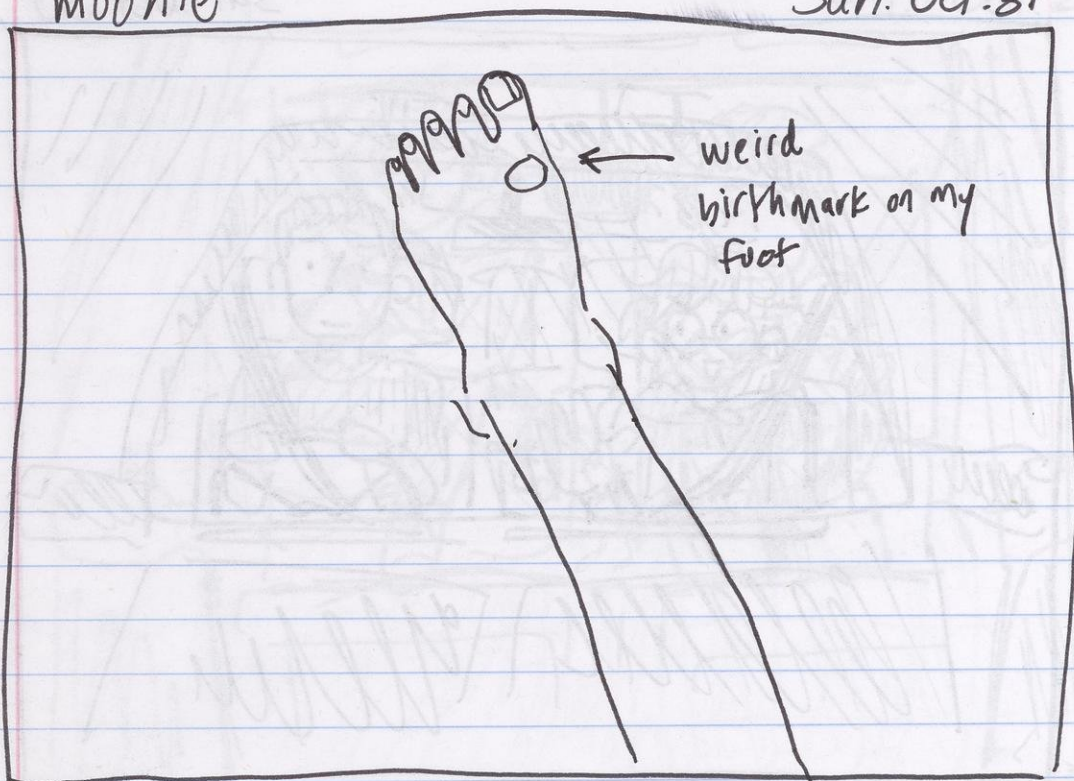

Sat. Oct. 30

I still struggle with my anxiety and depression is never too far away but I have found my footing a lot more since then. I wake up happier than I did back then. Now when Paul drives me, it doesn't feel like the end of the world.
We actually talk during it, too! :))

moonie

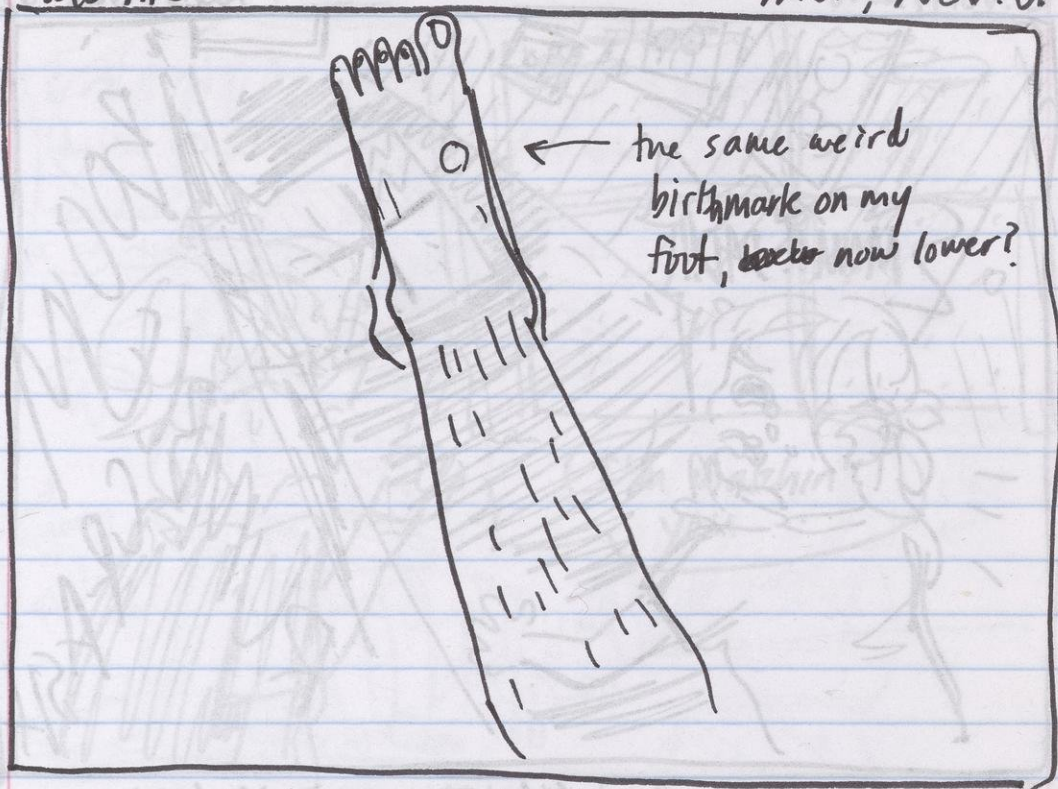

Sun. Oct. 31

I think I've had this ovalish birthmark since I've been born. It's slightly a darker color than my skin and I thought it was super cool. My mom and dad always said that if there was someone pretending to be me, they'd know which one was really me because of this mark. ~~Therefore~~ (THEREFORE, THIS IS TOP SECRET INFO!!). Drawing this made me realize I'm terrible at drawing feet.

Mon, Nov. 01

I still have the birthmark on my foot after 20 years. Two decades with this thing!! I should definitely name it... By now, it's slightly faded and lower. Maybe that's because my foot grew and the skin stretched? I'm not sure how it works. It's not very noticeable to other people but I'll always know it's there. A part of me.

Tues, Nov. 02

When I was a kid, I was terrified of thunderstorms. I would try to hold out as long as I could alone in my room, often crying and shaking, until I finally had enough and would run, screaming, down the hallway to my parents' room. I always felt bad about waking them up, but I bet they knew I'd come. I remember the window in the bathroom would light the hallway up if lightning struck. My parents would let me snuggle up between them in their bed. When I was a little bigger, they let me sleep on the couch in their room if I still got scared. I'm very thankful they let me crash in their room for all those years of thunderous nights.

Moonie

Wed, Nov. 3

Now I'm still kind of weary of thunderstorms. I get kind of nervous and still count the seconds between lightning flash and thunder booms. HOWEVER, I can sleep in my own bed during one!.. If I hide underneath my covers then that's nobody's business but my own...

In middle school I would get crushes on boys in my class pretty easily but could never talk to them. It's very cringey to think about now but the sad part is I'm still very much like this. . .

Moonie

Sun, Nov. 7

TO sum it up. Now I struggle with talking to TWICE as many people. AHHHHH!! My crushes are still very much unrequited. Since I know I'm turning this in I still feel a little nervous writing about this part of myself. ~~But~~ But I do think it's a funny then and now.

I loved basketball. I started playing in fourth grade instead of soccer. My dad and I would practice together on the deck behind our house. We'd practice free throws everyday and I even went to state for them! I was point guard for my school and travelling teams. It was a big part of my identity.

Moone

Tues, Nov. 9

Well in highschool, sophomore year, I was cut. This part of me, a big part of me, was rejected. I was heartbroken. The next day my dad took me to get a sundae at a diner to cheer me up.

It still hurts to think about because I kind of gave up on basketball after that. I was too bitter. Ever since then my passion for sports dwindled. I turned to art more. I still haven't quite looked back.

wed, Nov. 10

In my house, we never had horror movies on. My mom didn't like that type of stuff on in her house, she said. Even if I had caught glimpses I probably would've been too scared to finish watching it. I'd get scared of Adult Swim let alone if I saw a slasher movie. Sometimes I'd catch my dad watching stuff like Robot Chicken or Kill Bill and for some reason those would scare me.

Thurs, Nov. 11

now I love watching horror movies with my friends. We have watched so many together since we met freshman year. I've lost track of how many we've seen. Slashers, thrillers, found footage, psychosexual, supernatural, straight up B-horror movies. The list goes on and on! A few of my faves include: The Blair Witch Project (REALLY scared me), The Babadook, The Craft, The Shining, and Evil Dead 2.

Fri, Nov. 12

I had a lot of passions growing up. I remember wanting to be an animator or voice actor because I loved watching cartoons with my brothers.

MOONIE

Sat, Nov. 13

I am very confused—AND TERRIFIED—with what I'm going to do after college. I don't really know. I would love to do something with film, music, and cartooning. Those seem to be my biggest interests. My comm arts major is more for live action filming but I'm in love with everything we do in comics ~~and cartooning~~ and I don't know.

I don't really want to think about it tonight.

Moonie

Sun, Nov. 14

My little brother, Paul, and I were in marching band in middle school. I really think we were best friends at this time. We had so many inside jokes and did everything together. We'd have our own little jam sessions together and went on so many adventures. We were two peas in a pod.

FINAL JOURNAL DAY!

DI. VOL Monte

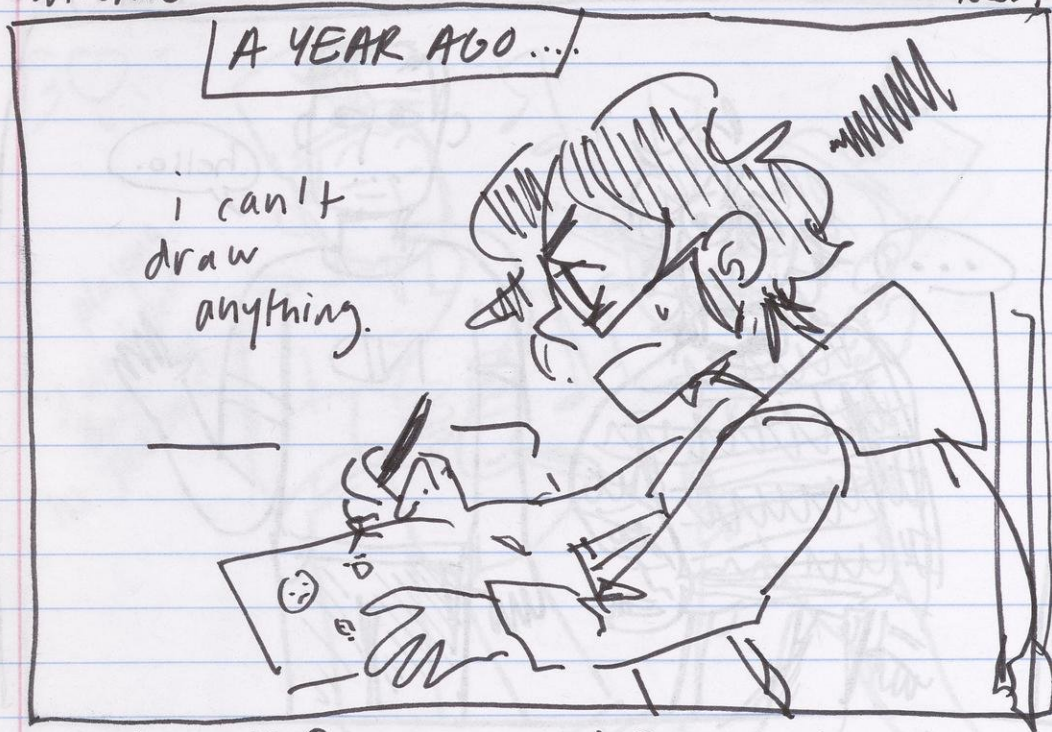

Mon, Nov. 15

Once I went to college, Paul did a lot of growing on his own while I was away. He's more private, reserved, and very intelligent. He now is a freshman at Notre Dame and doesn't text me much. I can't help but miss our old friendship a bit despite how proud I am of him and his growth. It's now how it used to be and I don't think we'll ever be as close as we were. This makes me sad.

Moonte

When I finally emerged from my depressive state and wanted to draw again, it wasn't the same. I couldn't think of anything and even doodling seemed scary. What once was effortless now was a difficult task that was upsetting to me. I thought my drawing days were over.

Thanks to this class I feel like I'm right back where I left off - if not MORE in love with the art of drawing. I still need to work on not putting so much pressure on myself and having fun with it, but I'm so so so glad I took this class. I'm not so afraid of drawing anymore.

★ the great snow day. It was a lot of snow. Maybe what I needed, with old sweat pants and snow pants tucked in. Dirty jackets wet from snow.

Starts with frozen ice on the tassles, hat hair and emergency plan. Hide in our deepest wall corner.

It's cold. We peak. The ~~head~~ old head still there.

We duck. Then we crawl all the way back to the deck through our tunnels. We slide our own door open and stomp our boots of snow, removing of our many layers ensures as we tell our story - no adventure, to our mom. The fire is going. she makes us hot chocolate in christmas mugs and you feel

- Or how about the time, that our cousins came over and we showed them the little pond ~~and~~ our dad inserted from lower 5. And we showed them the little fountain feature plugged in that had long been broken. In the pond was magnet or should I say a pickle!

But a magic pickle all the same because all the tadpoles swam to it and ate and ate. It was cool and gross and everything in between. For days they swarmed that ~~at~~ same pickle. The pickle had turned white and was stark against the murky water. The little tadpoles looked like little ~~at~~ bears with tails that constantly were moving like a mermaid. Then one day the pickle was gone. And so were the tadpoles : (

- When Michael our neighbor got heat stroke and passed out and we thought he died. While we were playing pickle in between our house and Carolinats.
- Playing graveyard robbers with the cooks and we'd hide on the hot street behind the truck till we had to run back to the Kiddy pool base.
- Paul and I spying on people we saw outside and writing down their license plate numbers.
- Me ~~crashing~~ crashing into the mailbox on my bike when I was learning - the ladybug on my helmet scaring me.
- The time when dad pulled up with the DRAGONFLY!!! air boat. She was a dream.

Demon: ANXIETY

ANXIETY. a demon. always there in my car. whispering things I don't wanna hear.

ANXIETY drips down my neck. slowly creeping into my stomach. sitting there, laying there, living there. ANXIETY. a constant shadow that takes many shapes and forms. Thoughts, sweat, swallows, palms, stomach, legs, head ~~be~~ heart. The worst-case scenario. TTK TTK TTK TTK thought on loop replaying a talk something you said. stops you in your tracks. you can't go anywhere you're trapped.

there's eyes everywhere JUDGING you.

knowing what's wrong with you. fear to act fear to move cuz of that pit in your stomach that yawn in your head. ANXIETY. always there but never a friend. I shake as I think what's next.

Procrastination. What a long word.
Describes how long it takes for me to DO things. It's 6:01 pm. Now you have to wait till 6:15 pm. You missed it! Now start at 6:30 pm. Oh no! It's 7:48 pm. Might as well wait till 8 pm!
But now you're hungry. Time for your 8:10 snack. You can't have a snack w/o watching something. Now it's 9:06 pm - start at 10 for a fresh start. Oh wait, you missed it how about 11? No? Try 12:30, Suddenly it's 1:32 am and you still haven't started your homework. But you were having fun right? It was worth it? This stress this anxiety this PANIC. Your eyes are tired but you don't allow yourself to sleep. Just push to the end! That road kept stretching but the finish line is actually closer than you thought - in fact, it wasn't far at all.

Demon - Procrastination

We're best friends. We hang out alllllll the time. ~~We~~ I want to be with her all the time.
We just have ENDLESS fun
I never want it to end.

I take care of her.
I know what she REALLY wants.
Who cares about homework and emails and texts and sleep.

We watch so many movies
and play so many things. She's my soul mate
and there's not enough time
for us to play
other people
try to take her away from me but she's
my best friend.
I only support what she wants to do...

I know we have a problem. Like I let her take advantage of me. She's so convincing. ~~and~~ only wants me to be happy and not stressed.

It just sometimes goes far. I end up avoiding things I need to do even if I don't want to. She's so fun and distracting and makes me feel so good UNTIL AFTER. And when after comes all I feel is HATE. I HATE HER. And yet I keep falling back to her. I need help and to someone. She makes those

how i told Paul i wanted to die and he told me about his first kiss

it all started freshman year of college well, actually it started before that but I just Linda't know.

one of the scariest things I've ever done

but this is

My first art class at madison!

- pink hair, cool girl
- I've always gotten crushes easily
but never become a bumbling mess saying hi
multiple times
etc.

at the time
the VM kept dying in the mountains

the lower part of a border
got to Paul's Bookstore
on State.

• i made a playlist. THIS was my secret. i spent hours adding to it. the songs about spring, girls, crushes, and sweetness, the pink.

i come from a very religious catholic family so feeling this way didn't seem possible.

I did RESEARCH:
took quizzes, reflected,
watched movies
→ Bill is the warmest friends in the summer.
→ Jennifer's Body Color

the legendary
continuation of COMING-OUT story

Eventually

one night my friends and I watched Jennifer's Body in the basement.
All squished on the couch (Soph in middle)

Throughout the movie I found myself feeling tight in the chest whenever Amanda Sevigny's character was on screen. It was like I was holding my ^{Needy} breath trying to melt into the couch and hide. Eyes widened.

It helped that I also had a crush on Johnny Simmons's character—so adorable!

But I still felt my stomach burning w/ my secrets.

Later that night my one friend went to bed, leaving me and Elize to devolve into late night ~~giggles~~ giggly nonsense.

The lights were off and my feet were
by her head and hers by mine.

We were talking about the boy she likes when she asked about me. Earlier I had lied and told them about a ~~boy~~ boy in class.

But on the safety of the summer night sleepover, darkness wrapping around my words, I ^{panicked}
That cool person I have a crush on... was a girl.

Things were going to be okay.

That next morning, I only ~~thought~~ ~~about~~ panicked for a couple of minutes but Elise up
I shared a look and laughed.

My breath hitched. The silence crushed me when I heard Elise instantly start soothing me as I had started crying.

She bent up and hugged me and said
guess what — I'm hi too.

~~After~~

I'll admit @ first I didn't believe her.

But as she started crying too

I realized she wasn't just saying that.

We sat there laughing and ~~and~~ full of snort, our secrets / feelings held gently in each others hands.

The
on screen
kiss made me warm
as if I was being called out.

I told her that while watching Jennifer's Body I kept staring @ Needy and Elise said it was that for her and Megan Fox's chara — Jennifer.

We laughed how Sophie was oblivious to our internal crises throughout the movie.

It was almost 6 am by then. Elise played Harry Styles' (she's a big fan) sleep asmr episode — funny. It relaxed us until we heard Sophie's brother come down + take a shower in the basement, stifling our laughter, we texted till we fell asleep.

Don't

Do you remember what we promised?

We're not gonna lose anyone else ~~else~~ close to us again.

We swore that we would always be there for each other.

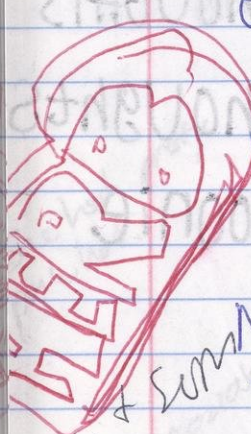

No matter what happens though, I promise that I'll protect you.

If you were a boy, I would ~~be~~ actually have fallen for you if you were careful.

- Oh umm! Well maybe I'm the one who should have a crush on you.

PINK THOUGHTS Page 01.

~~Here's a story about a girl~~

It started with a playlist. ~~the girl's story~~

~~When spring came new feelings, like this rainy secret.~~

Each track reflected the ^{reflected} ~~arrival~~ ^{of} ~~gentle~~ ^{of} ~~spring~~ ever-changing ~~your~~ ^{of} ~~spring~~ ^{of} ~~spring~~ and the arrival of a new crush with it.

She had pretty

And because these feelings ~~wouldn't~~ wouldn't stop ~~buzzing~~ ^{buzzing} I used music to capture them — I called it ~~pink thoughts~~

It started with a playlist.

Each track reflected the ever-changing youth of spring and the arrival of a new crush with its _____.

①

Her hair was a lovely pink.

And because these feelings wouldn't stop

I used music to capture them

I called it "Pink Thoughts".

This was my secret.
