Police Can Make Arrests on State Land--Reynolds

District Attorney Makes Informal Reply to Daily Cardinal Query

"In my opinion, university students can be arrested by Madison police officers when on university property within the city limits," said District Attorney Glenn D. Roberts to the Daily Cardinal Friday.

This opinion follows an announcement made Thursday night that City Attorney Frank Jenks would be requested by Frank Trostle, chief of police, to ask Attorney General John W. Reynolds for a formal opinion defining the rights of Madison policemen on state property, including the capitol, the stadium, and other university property.

Attorney General Refuses Opinion

"Any request for a formal opinion as to the rights and jurisdiction of Madison policemen on state property will have to come from the district attorney," said Attorney General Reynolds Friday afternoon when asked for an opinion.

Geo. F. O'Connell, president of the fire and police commission, made the suggestion that the opinion be obtained at a meeting of that commission Thursday night at which the Cardinal's accusation of police laxity was discussed.

No Policemen at Union

Speaking of the complaint made by students that no police could be obtained at the Memorial Union last Friday night, Mr. O'Connell said, "I wonder if that isn't just where he should have been. I doubt whether we have jurisdiction inside."

Just when the request for Attorney General Reynolds' formal opinion will be made has not yet been determined. According to Mr. Reynolds, however, it will take quite a bit of time to look up all the information needed in handing down such an opinion.

Suggests Forensic Board Break-up

Decreasing Student Interest Causes Consideration of Disbanding

Although dissolution of the Forensic board, the oldest board on the campus, was suggested in an informal meeting of the board yesterday noon, Ronald Kuckok '29, president, denied last night that such a move would be contended.

Few Attend Lecture

The suggestion of dissolution is the result of student apathy to the program of the board, the most recent evidence of which was the small attendance at the lecture of Edward Albert Wiggam, noted scientist who recently appeared on a Forensic board contract.

Kuckok said after the meeting: "I still think that we have a purpose and that we must go ahead regardless of campus attitude. I will not listen to any such proposition. The board has been in tight places before and escaped, it can do so again and prosper."

Social Standards Non-intellectual

The vice-president of the board, Gen Florez '29, said, "There is no use to purposely cover our eyes and think that we represent a sufficiently large number of students on the campus. The Forensic board has tried hard for years, and arrived nowhere. This is due to the social standards of our present day universities which run counter to all sincere intellectual enterprise."

Cornelia Fleith '29, secretary of the organization, was also in favor of dissolution. "Football and dating hold the upper hand in university extra-curricular activity; debating is altogether a thing of the past. The students will not back Forensics because of various reasons; for one, they have little time to better their intellects; again, they think that forensics is an inferior activity and see little prestige to be gained; and lastly the number of those interested is so small that it hardly draws attention."

Why Not Have "Railroad Jack" Offer Lectures?

(EDITORIAL)

Yale has given three lusty cheers for Browning's ghost. Gene Tunney has lectured on Shakespeare. Why can't Railroad Jack, nationally known collegiate history expert, speak to one of our university classes?

Certainly none will doubt Railroad Jack's ability to lecture effectively on history, political science or English. He, at least, would prove interesting and no doubt would be avidly heard.

Won't some broad minded instructor step up and offer his pulpit for the hour to this gentleman?

Sigma Phi Sigma Suffers Fire Loss

Small Blaze Causes $200 Damage; Endangers Four Lives

A fire at the Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity house at 140 W. Gilman street, started while Joe Teska '30, a member of the fraternity, was sleeping only three feet away from the flames, yesterday afternoon and caused damage estimated at $200.

Five men lost belongings, when one whole room and other parts of the third floor were wrecked. All losses were covered by insurance, according to members of the fraternity. No clue as to the origin of the fire was known.

Mark Keehn '31 sustained the heaviest loss when three suits, an overcoat, and all his books were burned along with many other belongings. His estimated loss is $150. Other men who suffered losses were Sydney Drew '31, Fred Geuttmann '30, Melvin Karby '29, and Hyde Stevens '29.

Sleepers Endangered

At the time the fire started there were five men in the house. Four of them were asleep, and the fire was discovered by a passerby, who came in and woke up the sleeping men.

Hilmer Schuerman '31 then ran up the fire escape from the outside, and woke Teska who was sleeping in the dormitory room in front of a closed door. The fire was in the next room and the flames had come through the cracks in the door as was shown by the black streaks on the side toward the dormitory. The men tried putting the fire out with water, but were not successful.

The fire department had been called at the first discovery of the fire and two engines and a ladder wagon arrived. At first they played the hose on the third floor room from the outside, but later dragged the hose inside and upstairs.

Clothing Destroyed

The fire started in one corner of the small room behind Keehn's desk. A long 10-foot closet about two feet from the corner contained the destroyed clothes. Clothes hanging across the room were also destroyed. Keehn's only remaining clothes are a sweater and pair of trousers which he was wearing at the time of the fire. The losses of the other men were only slight.

The wall in the corner where the fire started was completely torn out and the windows were broken. One of the men expressed the opinion that a faulty electric light box had been the cause of the flames, but others denied this statement. The fire was put out in 20 minutes after the two engines arrived.

$300 Lamp Taken From Villa Maria

Professors Are 'Truants' From Teaching, Claim

Charges of Magazine Article Stimulate Survey of Faculty Activity

Are Wisconsin professors inaccessible to students?

Are they so engrossed in "state service," petty administration, and private research as to be of little value to the student outside the classroom? Are the best teachers being taken from the student body to be shoved into administrative positions?

These are questions which are raised by a magazine article "Our Truant Professors" which appears in the Outlook and Independent for Dec. 5, and, acting on the criticisms of Prof. Addison Hibbard, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at the University of North Carolina, the Daily Cardinal has investigated the application of his charges to the Wisconsin campus.

Some salient features of the local situation are contained in the following article by Peg Joselyn, Daily Cardinal staff member, concluding with a summary of Prof. Hibbard's expose of education.

By PEG JOSELYN

One might as successfully count the hairs on their heads as to compute the number of outside activities in which Wisconsin professors are engaged.

W. H. Lighty, director of the extension teaching; T. J. Mosely, editor of the extension division; Charles A. Smith, secretary of the faculty, and Miss J. M. Wilkinson, executive secretary to President Glenn Frank, each stated yesterday that a tremendous amount of extra curricular work, practically impossible to compute comprehensively, is being done. Here are some facts of the case:

Many Professional Writers

Thirty per cent or more of the professors draw an income for writing or professional services in addition to salaries ranging from $3,500 to $5,000 paid by the university, according to H. R. Briggs, county assessor of in-

Five Guggenheim Fellowships Go to Wisconsin Faculty

Five members of the University of Wisconsin faculty are included in the 1928 Fellowship appointments of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial foundation, the purpose of which is to "advance human achievement by aiding students to push forward the boundaries of undertaking and to enrich human life by aiding them in the cultivation of beauty and taste."

Faculty members who received 1928 fellowships from the foundation are Helen C. White, assistant professor of English; Thomas W. Stratman, research pharmacologist; Curtis P. Nettels, assistant professor of history; Antonio G. Solaini, associate professor of Spanish, and Carl Stephenson, professor of history. Others who have previously received fellowships are Glenn T. Trewartha, assistant professor of geography; and Paul Knaplund, professor of history.

The standing committee of the Guggenheim foundation considered approximately 600 applications for fellowships this year, and from this number recommended 61 grants. There are now 50 fellows, each at work in his own field, in 15 different nations.

Deaf Mute Hikes 57 Miles to See Grid Captain; Fails

Hiking 57 miles from Delevan, Wis. in order to meet the new captain of the Wisconsin football team, Harvey Hansen, 20-year-old deaf mute failed Thursday in his purpose.

His handicap prevented him from obtaining a lift, while the bitter cold and the accumulated snow delayed him to the extent that his walk took more than 70 hours. He left the farm where he works as a hired man at 4 p. m. Monday in order to be on hand for the selection of the new captain on Tuesday night. It was not

Veteran Star Heads Cast of 'Cradle Song'

Bernadine Flynn '29, who has been called by capable critics an amateur La Gallienne because of her work in

Bernadine Flynn

La Gallienne because of her work in the lead role of "The Swan" last year, returns to Bascom theater tonight to head a cast of 16 appearing in "The Cradle Song," G. Martinez Sierra's "atmosphere" play to be staged by the University Players under the direction of Prof. W. C. Troutman. Successive performances of the play will be shown on Friday and Saturday Dec. 14 and 15.

Star Filled Theater

When Miss Flynn played in "The Swan" last year, she turned in performances that filled Bascom theater at each staging of the play.

In "The Cradle Song" she has been cast as Sister Joanna of the Cross to play opposite Cornelius Fleith '29 in a story laid in a Spanish convent. Francis O'Connor '29 as the doctor introduces the first worldly element into a hitherto severe cloister, and Harold McCarthy, LS grad, as Antonio provides the plot complications when he falls in love with Teresa (Cornelia Fleith) and seeks to take her away.

Complete Cast

The complete cast for the production to be staged tonight follows: Margaret McClellan '30, prioress; Catherine Tebbets, vicar; Theodore Jax '29, mistress of novices; Bonnie Small '30, Sister Marcella; Lorraine Demarest '31, Sister Maria Jesus; Dorothea Sander '30, Sister Tornera; Marion Gilbert '30, Sister Inez; Lawrence Mendenhall, grad, poet; Margaret Cushing, Eunice Edwards, Dorothea Schmidt, and Eleanor Savery, nuns.

A special private matinee of the play will be given this afternoon in honor of the Catholic nuns and priests of Madison, and several invited guests. A number of the sisters at the Edgewood convent have assisted in coaching some of the scenes.

SENIOR PICTURES

All proofs of Senior pictures for the 1930 Badger must be returned to De Longe's studio before 6 p. m. on Wednesday, Dec. 12. The staff itself will select the pictures for the Senior section for those who do not observe the deadline.

Explosion Mangles Hands of One; Others Bruised and Shaken Up

Mixing a chemical compound in direct violation of the rules, John P. Consigni '32 of Oconomowoc, was said to be in a serious condition from the resulting explosion during a laboratory period in the Chemistry building Friday. Other students were either lightly injured or shaken up.

The accident occurred shortly after 2:30 p. m. when Consigni and another student began to experiment with the manufacture of gunpowder. They mixed together the proper quantities of potassium chlorate, sulphur, and charcoal, the needed ingredients.

Hands, Face Injured

While they were mixing the chemicals in a porcelain mortar, the other student went away, leaving the grinding entirely to Consigni. Shortly afterward it exploded in his hands, severing the small finger on his right hand, and badly mangling the thumb on his other hand.

Both hands, his face, and his eyes were injured by the blast, according to information obtainable later in the day at the infirmary where he was confined, following the operation on his thumb in an attempt to save it.

Other Students Hurt

Ben J. Axel '32, working across the table from Consigni, was hit by several flying fragments when the explosion occurred. It was necessary to treat him at the Wisconsin General hospital, but he was able to leave following treatment. Others experimenting in the room were either shaken or hit by various fragments of the mortar which scattered in every direction.

Prof. J. H. Mathews, head of the department, pointed out, when queried in regard to experiments which students may perform of their own accord, that the department distributes a printed instruction sheet to each pupil at the beginning of the semester. This reads in reference to this matter as follows:

"Students must not perform experiments other than those regularly assigned, without special permission from the instructor in charge."

Information obtainable showed that the injured student had not applied for any permission to make gunpowder. The instructor had even warned the members of the class on this subject only two days earlier, at the previous session of the section.

Yuletide Fair in Great Hall Today

Y.W.C.A. Offers Varied Effects, Entertainment at All-Day Affair

A colorful transformation of Great hall has taken place for the International Christmas fair, sponsored by the Y. W. C. A.

At 2 p. m. today a crier at the door will begin her ballyhoo, and from then until 9 tonight, the crowds which flock to Great hall will mingle in a gay gathering.

It is a continental scene—countries of the world are represented in booths which line the walls. A good bit of travelling can be done, when you figure that within five minutes you can leave the fine leather work of Italy and be looking around at Chinese ware. There are booths for Russia, for Armenia, for Scotland, picturesque booths, placarded with the "Merry Christmas" of the country's language which is represented, hung with flags of every hue and design.

Many of the gifts are imported, and whether choice runs to the Far-East gifts or the Armenian ones, interest will run to looking at all of them.

A play to be presented at 3 p. m., called "The Persian Poppy" will be a simple one, rather in the monologue form, which contained both genuine humor and wistful bits. Virginia Barrus '30 take the lead.

A matinee dance is scheduled to begin at 3:30 and to continue until 5:30 p. m.

Huber Bill Will Come Up Again

Prof. Commons' Unemployment Plan to Be Discussed Again

An attempt to meet the unemployment situation by legislation similar to that in operation in European countries will be made at the coming session of the legislature when a bill incorporating the Huber plan will be offered. Several years ago Prof. John R. Commons of the university worked out a plan of unemployment insurance. The bill was introduced at three sessions of the legislature, but failed of passage.

A measure incorporating Commons' ideas is being drafted by one of the state senators, who says it will be offered early in the session. Under this plan both the employee and employer would contribute to a fund which would be used to pay a part of the employee's salary during a period of unemployment.

It is claimed that such legislation would result in a more even employment of men and women in the state. Data has been gathered by the state reference library showing the experience of unemployment insurance in certain industries of this country.

Time was some 15 to 18 years ago when any suggestion on insurance against unemployment would be rejected as visionary. In the face of apparent difficulties, England in 1911 made experiments with compulsory unemployment insurance. Since that time a number of other European countries have adopted the plan and results, according to reports, are encouraging.

There has always been some objection by employers of the state to the insurance plan. Many of the employers favor the idea but believe that a national law should be enacted so that Wisconsin employers should not be placed at a disadvantage.

Wisconsin Mecca to Russian Exiles

Several Have Graduated; One Now Attending University

The University of Wisconsin is one of the most popular educational institutions among exiled Russians who are assisted by the Russian student fund, according to the annual report of the organization in charge of the fund.

One Now in School Ilarion Gopadze, 642 State street, is the only Russian expatriate now at Wisconsin being aided by the fund. Mr. Gopadze is studying medicine.

The report shows that 133 students were helped during the 1927-28 school year to the extent of $57,320. Sums totaling $18,760 have been repaid.

Several Exiles Graduated

Several exiled Russian students have been graduated from Wisconsin, the report says. Among them is Vladimir Rimsky-Korsakov, a graduate from the college of agriculture. He is from the same family as the famous composer, Nicholas Rimsky-Korsakov.

Gopadze, who has achieved some reputation as a fencer, also comes from a high Russian family. His people were closely allied with the late Czar.

Professors Are "Truants" From Teaching, Charge

A large number of the professors in the Engineering school, according to Mr. Briggs, give part of their time to the university and part to commercial or governmental service. Prof. Dan Meade is a member of a firm of consulting engineers. Internationally known, he has been hired as an advisor by flood control committees. He is an expert in hydraulic engineering.

L. S. Smith augments his income and his tax—by city planning work which he does during the summer months.

Professors Are Authors

Of the 1,000 titles in the Co-Op bookstore approximately 200 bear the names of Wisconsin professors. At least 150 of the professors have written books which are for sale at the Co-Op.

M. V. O'Shea has at least 10 books to his credit. Among the works of E. A. Ross, one of the greatest sociological writers in the country, are books on India, China, and South America.

A vast amount of research work is being done in every department. The geological survey is making investigations of lands from which the best road materials can be obtained. There are several full time workers in this department.

Seeks Municipal Information

Ford MacGregor, of the political science department, is in charge of a Bureau of Municipal Information, which is a clearing house of information for cities and villages. At present he is engaged in a study of licenses in order that newly incorporated villages and cities may know what amounts other municipalities levy as dog, marriage, soft drink, and other fees.

Professional service to the state and federal government has decreased. According to W. H. Lighty, years ago, during the presidency of Van Hise, 30 or 40 professors were engaged in governmental service.

Duties Are Many

However there was so much criticism of the professors who divided their services, that the numbers thus engaged, gradually diminished.

Water power commissions, the Blue Sky Law commission which endeavors to discover shyster stocks and other public utilities commissions often call on professional authorities for advice, according to the faculty secretary.

Several Give Lectures

Filled with R. B. Duncan of the extension division are the titles of speeches, prices—ranging from $30 to $40—and the names of the professors who can be obtained to address the graduating classes of Ojibway and Conrad, Oshkosh and Milwaukee.

Mr. Duncan also has a file of professors and their lectures obtainable for women's service clubs and other organization programs.

Give Short Courses

A number of professors who conduct classes on the hill also give short courses and correspondence work. An average remuneration for this outside activity, according to Mr. Lighty, is from 30 to 40 cents an hour, about the same amount professors' wives pay the ladies who clean professors' houses, or wash the professors' shirts.

M. C. Otto, professor of philosophy, who goes to Milwaukee every week to deliver a lecture, is one of a number of professors who regularly devote their weekends to similar purposes.

Twenty-three standing committees, composed of members of the faculty, were appointed for the year 1928-29.

Departments and professors mentioned above were drawn at random to illustrate the types of activities in which professors are engaging at Wisconsin.

Article Flays Professors

Good teachers are swallowed up by the jaegeraut of administration, the pot-pourri of activities, and the "service of the people," Prof. Addison Hibbard, dean of the College of Liberal Arts of the University of North Carolina, charges in an article entitled "Our Truant Professors" which appears in the current issue of the Outlook and Independent.

Professors Seek Publicity

"Better one column on the front page of a leading daily in the state," college administrators too often think, "than one hour or 20 hours of honest teaching in the classroom," is the theme which Professor Hibbard, who is a brother of C. V. Hibbard, secretary of the University of Wisconsin Y. M. C. A., elaborates.

"Promotion," he writes, "goes most quickly to the man who attracts attention to himself outside of teaching."

Three principal fields of activity claim the professors' time which once was devoted to students on the campus: research, extra-curricular activities, and petty administrative details.

Over-emphasis on Research

"I am not so foolish as to argue that advanced and original study in one's field hampers teaching," Professor Hibbard writes. "Certainly it need not do so, and properly emphasized, should make a man a more valuable instructor. But the emphasis placed on research by administrators is infinitely stronger than on teaching."

"There are, however, worse enemies to good teaching than research. Somehow the democratic ideal of which we all talk so glibly eats the heart out of the college teacher in its demand that he take an active part in petty administration. In the university which I know best there are 26 standing committees and at least 46 running ones."

"Appoint a committee to handle it's so common a cry when any new idea is broached that any faculty man will recognize the phrase as a pass-word to his order. Effective teaching and long hours of committee service simply do not go together."

Outside Work Disconcerting

"But both research and committee work find more justification in university organization than does the third enemy to good teaching: the extra-curricular activities which are expected of college professors. Many a man today keeps his position on a university faculty simply because he is a good liaison officer between his institution and the women's clubs, the business organizations, or one sort or another of the state's activities."

Dean Hibbard illustrates the lectures with selected titles from the lists available from one university. "Service" is as much the watchword of the modern university as it is of any garage, but too often the service is accorded to the state at large at the expense of its sons and daughters registered on the campus as students.

"Faculty men are constantly bemoaning the interest of undergraduates in the 'campus activities' and their lack of interest in their studies. Yet these same professors under the system now operating are tarred with the same stick. The only difference is that the student confines his activity to the campus, while the professor must needs 'serve the state'."

"Professors, too, are the 'great makers of textbooks in or out of their field'—and students, in their classes keep on buying them," the article continues.

Suggests Changes

Professor Hibbard concludes his case with examples, and then makes the following suggestions:

1. "That every institution provide from two to 10 super-professorships carrying at least $1000 in excess of the usual salary scale and that these professorships be awarded to only one type of instructor—the man who is pre-eminent as a teacher."

2. "That so far as possible an undergraduate faculty be built up of men who are not scornful of the undergraduate mind because of their prime interest in research."

3. "That administrators and department heads in employing new instructors take at least as much cognizance of a man's teaching power as of his publicity value to the institution."

"Teaching is a fundamental of good education yet," Professor Hibbard concludes.

Delta Sigma Phi Bowls 1000-Pin Game Thursday

Other Fraternity Teams Fail to Maintain Previ- ous Records

The first 1,000-pin game of the season in the interfraternity bowling league was rolled Thursday night by the Delta Sigma Phi five in the third frame of their three-game series. Every man on the team was in top form with four men bowling over 500 for their three games and the fifth within 12 points of that number. Schmitt was high man with 597.

With the exception of the above game the scores indicate few games of interest, the teams as a whole failing to keep up their work of the previous games. Three games were also forfeited.

Wrend, Phi Epsilon Kappa, had the high individual single game score with 238 in his second game.

Behr to Be Lost to 1929 Cardinal Basketball Team

Sammy Behr, sophomore football star, will not report for the Wisconsin basketball team this year, it was disclosed Thursday.

Behr, who is the brother of Capt. Louis Behr of the 1927-28 team, gave as his reason the fact that he had considerable work to do in his studies, and would not have time for basketball.

The fact that he does not intend to try for basketball this year will prevent Behr from being a nine letter man as had been predicted. He is a star in track, and at the present time is taking occasional workouts in that sport to keep himself in shape.

Close Tilts Mark First Rounds of Dorm Basketball

Four games completing the first round of dormitory basketball were played Thursday evening in Wisconsin high gym resulting in close wins for Faville, Spooner, and Bashford houses, while Ochsner registered a very decisive victory over Tarrant house.

With Reid and Thomas contributing 14 points, Ochsner house had no trouble in running a 29-6 victory over its opponent, Tarrant, which was held to two baskets.

Ochsner: Harris, Spengeman, Rennen, Kuehn, Reid, Thomas.

Tarrant: Fischer, Kaplan, McFadden, Lemm, Mole, Davis.

Richardson 14, Faville 15

In a game marred by 16 fouls, Faville house won a fast game by a one point margin. Learner of Faville lead the scoring with 11 points.

Richardson: Rose, Snecker, Brantigan, Glassow, Roettig, Wesendonk. Faville: Learner, Powers, Hess, Currick, Wormley, Mershon.

Spooner 8, Frankenburger 7

Inability to sink their shots gave a low score to Spooner's victory over Frankenburger house. Bainbridge, Frankenburger house man, scored five of his team's seven points.

Bashford 9, Gregory 6

Ragged offensive playing, coupled with bad luck in shots made the Bashford-Gregory game a close affair until the final play. Stolz, of Bashford gave his team the winning punch with seven points.

Women to Start Sports Practice

By B. H.

The women's winter sport season opens this week with the announcement of practice hours for class teams in basketball, indoor baseball, and bowling.

In basketball, practices will be held for freshmen and juniors on Tuesday nights, on Thursday evenings for sophomores and seniors. There will be a physical education major team and a college team for each class. All women interested are urged to come out to these first practices, as one practice a week is necessary to make a team. Open practice is held Saturday at 11 a. m.

Indoor baseball will begin Saturday, when open practice is at 10 a. m. Sibley Merton '30, student head, announced yesterday. Also practice will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. Wednesday for all classes.

W. A. A. bowling is scheduled for 4:40 p. m. Tuesday and Thursday. Jean Webster '29, head of bowling, is planning a ladder tournament to be run off before the Christmas vacation.

The Hesperiens Debate

And Show Some Quarter-Inch Depth of Thought on Fraternities

TALKING about superficialities and shallowness of argument, one finds a splendid example in the Hesperia literary society debate Thursday night. Hesperiens took as their question, "Resolved, that all fraternities and sororities on the campus be abolished."

On its very face, the society had before it a subject that in its seriousness has already begun to vex many students, faculties, alumni, and parents. It was a debate which, if considered thoroughly, might have disclosed numerous and possible remedies for the impending problems which the Greek letter societies sooner or later will be forced to meet.

This possibility before it, Hesperia proceeded admirably to discuss the relative merits of regulated and unregulated necking as it pertains to fraternities. The debaters maintained that the university is not a social finishing school, that "fraternities breed snobbishness," that the societies merely train men and women to live with each other agreeably.

Grandiloquently, Hesperia gave itself some fine publicity, but well warrant that the fraternity question is still hanging fire, little better or worse off for the argument.

The affirmative team enjoyed the rare opportunity to have two fraternity representatives, Thomas Stone and Otto Zerwick, oppose the Greek system of which they are members. As such, these men understand both sides of the problem. With careful thought, they might have shown the real evils of the system and advocated remedies.

But Mr. Stone wandered about with such abstract statements as "social activities should be abolished and time given to education." While Mr. Zerwick showed some quarter-inch penetration of thought when he said, "fraternities and sororities add to the cost of education and breed bull sessions." That was "great stuff"—for a feature story.

In the meanwhile, Hesperia seems to have for gotten a few subjects that, if discussed, would have made their "debate" a debate.

In advocating abolishment of fraternities, Hesperia, what about the following: concrete facts, not generalities, about financial burdens; statistics on extent of social life in proportion to other fraternal activities; scholarship comparisons between social organizations and the majority of the students; religious and spiritual idealism; problems of student morale within the organizations; initiation practices and their benefits or detriments; opportunity for members to display initiative and leadership; political practices and log-rolling; benefits of a fraternity as opposed to a dormitory system?

We might go on to advocate a few more topics for discussion, but Hesperia would sooner meditate on "necking."

Our Colleagues Again

Some Remarks About Madison News Magicians and Their Hats

"The spirit of Christmas is coming upon us in this period like the rising sun. Let's forget the controversial side of the whole matter."

Wisconsin State Journal, Dec. 4.

"CHIEF ASKS RULING ON POLICE RIGHTS AT U. W."

Wisconsin State Journal, Dec. 7.

The Wisconsin State Journal, after a sweet editorial making peace between The Daily Cardinal and the Madison police in their mythical "war," bannered an insignificant story on their front page yesterday on the same subject. Consistency!

Reviewing the past situation of Madison police in relation to their legal status on state property, we find that in most cases the police have adopted a "hang off" policy when university affairs are concerned. This is outstanding when one considers how often they have sensibly refused to interfere with students on Observatory hill and the drive.

The State Journal has blown nothing into something. Glenn Roberts, district attorney, gave it as his opinion yesterday that the police had authority to arrest on state property, including the university, within the city limits. That ends the matter, for John Reynolds, attorney general, will probably keep silent on the matter.

150 to Run a Dance!

After All, John Catlin's Party Won't Be a World's Fair

THE annual reprinting of the student directory, in the form of appointments of Prom assistants, took place yesterday. Fully 150 people are going to "help" with Prom, and we counted no less than 23 sub-committees.

Now if it were a World's Fair that John Catlin were putting on, he might have some excuse for drowning himself with assistants. But, to be sure, Prom isn't quite so important as the inauguration of Hoover—in fact, it is quite possible that there are a few students who wouldn't leave the university if there were no Prom. If a proportionate fuss were made over all other university activities, the Badger would swell to the size of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Who cares particularly whether Reginald Hobbins '31, for example, is a member of the fox trot committee, except, perhaps, Reginald Hobbins '31? The gentleman probably would not do anything about Prom Fox Trot even if someone could think up some work for him. It is about time for the junior class to acquire a sense of efficiency and centralization of responsibility, and, instead of building up a perfect mess of useless machinery, employ as few people as is necessary to run Prom efficiently.

The Prom chairman is indeed a helpless individual if he needs no less than 150 assistants to help him run a dance.

Do we understand rightly that the Rathskellar controversy was finally settled by giving the men their rights to the skellar and letting the women keep Miss Brown's Cafeteria?

Speaking of Rathskellar, the Woman Alumna From-Our-Home-Town was down for the big game last Saturday. The W.-A.-F.-O.-H.-T. being a nice young lady, we consented to show her around the Union.

Imagine our embarrassment when we took her downstairs and she asked when the Deutches House had moved.

Thought on a Windy day. This is a great day for the Lawyers.

Every morning when we go down State street we pass the Badger Studio. And every morning we see the show window of the Badger studio, in which is a portrait of Julius E. Olson with the legend "Who's Who at the 'U'." It ain't that we doubt that Prof. Olson is somebody around here, but we hate to have the general public think that Julius is the only big gun in the institution. Just think how that must make the two Glens and Mr. Hickey feel.

We think that some public spirited professor with ten minutes, ten dollars, and a winning smile ought to go down to the Badger and let them take his picture. This Norwegian propaganda must be stopped!

German Club to Sponsor Christmas Festival on Dec. 12

The German club is sponsoring a Christmas festival to be held in Lathrop parlors Wednesday, Dec. 12, at 8 p. m.

The program will consist of a violin solo by Professor Baumgarten of the philosophy department as a prelude; a short nativity play, and a collection of appropriate carols. Prof. E. K. Voss, and Prof. Hans Nauman; both of the university, will give short readings.

Ruth Staley, grad, chairman of the refreshment committee of the organization, requests that all members and friends of the club who are planning to attend notify her by calling University 31 W in order that sufficient reservations shall be made. The charge for non-members will be 25c.

Sophomores at Antioch college set a precedent in these parts when they put it up to the frosh to decide if there would be any hazing this year. EDITOR'S NOTE: The Readers' Say-So is maintained in the interests of Daily Cardinal readers who wish to express their opinions on various subjects. Contributions are welcome at all times. Writers are requested to limit their letters to 250 words. Author's names must be signed on the original, although they may be withheld from publication.

A FEW QUESTIONS FOR PUBLICATION

My attention has been called to a comment in Sunday's Daily Cardinal, entitled "Disgusted." I have no doubt that the feeling there expressed was shared by many of us; however, insofar as the "disgust" was directed to the Experimental College or its players, I believe it was badly misdirected. I think this is a matter of sufficient seriousness to demand reconsideration and to justify this further comment.

Do we want the kind of "idealism" that presents but one side of a subject? Would that not be a misrepresentation of life? Shall we find fault with the Experimental College students for bringing the shady side of Greek life before us? Should we not rather find them superficial or insincere if they covered it up?

Since most of us are too busy to become acquainted with the original form of works of writers like Shakespeare, Chaucer and the Greeks, may it not be a good thing that our eyes are occasionally opened to the fact that much lauded civilizations of the past were not always quite as faultless as ordinary texts and class-room lectures would indicate? Is it not proper that the earnest student of literature should know something about the dark side of literary works of the past, if only for the sake of being able to rejoice that the world is not growing worse in every direction, and has at least refined its sense of humor and its manners and tastes since the time of Aristophanes?

Whether the Experimental College boys have rightly interpreted Greek comedy, is another question, which I feel unqualified to answer; but if they have failed here, are they more guilty than the rest of us in much of our work and views of life? Perhaps they have induced some of us to look into the works of Greek art more carefully than we have done before.

Is the adverse criticism we heard possibly due in part to the fact that many of us attend extracurricular exercises with the sole purpose of being entertained and that such exercises were not all intended primarily and solely for entertainment?

Is there not a great hope for an institution of learning which permits, yes, induces so large a percentage of its students to take an active part in what may be considered a laboratory experiment? The thing that struck me as being typical of the work and spirit of the Experimental college was the splendid democracy evidenced by this general, active participation of students (as contrasted, e.g., with our system of overtraining a few and neglecting the rest in the matter of physical training). But I believe a better critic of art than I am would find further merits in the rendition of the play.

As a teacher, I have worked with many of our Experimental college boys and have found no evidence that their study of all sides of Greek life and literature has corrupted or coarsened them. On the contrary, they are among my most serious, studious and refined pupils.

Book Notes

I have been accosted during the last few days by perturbed individuals who are addling their poor brains trying to figure out what sort of a book so-and-so would like for Christmas.

There is no denying that the book publisher has solved the gift problem, but what is one to do when it is considered that 800 books were published in the last few months?

Abie asked me the other day what a good book would be to give a "girl about thirty years old, who is a college graduate, unmarried and likes racy books with a lot of zip." And I told her "Point Counter Point!"

Now it seems a shame that the lads with specialized training should keep it all to themselves so in a short while you will find "Ye Complete Guide for Bewildered Book Buyers" in this column.

It will be conducted by the Pie-Eyed Piper and Prospero and it will give to you a repository of polite anecdote concerning the kinds of people who like books for Christmas and just the book they will want. Prices will also be included. Watch for it!

Deans Approve Junior Colleges

Claim First Two Years Not

Butler College, Indianapolis, Ind.

—Is the time approaching when freshmen and sophomores will no longer roam the university campus? University deans, advocates of the junior college, pointed out the trend in this direction at the three-day conference of the Association of American universities held at Butler college.

"The first two years in many universities now are almost entirely preparational," said Dean Laing of the University of Chicago. "The courses are mainly informational and have no proper place in the university curriculum. The high school really should do this work, but most of them do not."

Strict selection of entering students was suggested by Dean Frederick Woodbridge of Columbia university. An influx of students in recent years who have no sense of "intellectual direction" has caused universities to raise standards and increase the number of tests for entering students."

Wisconsin Places Well at Chicago Livestock Show

Wisconsin university won the award for both champion and reserve champion for best barrows in the large class of Yorkshire hogs in fat swine at the International Livestock exposition at Chicago.

The university also won first prizes in the Poland China class of fat swine, first in best barrow between 200 and 250 pounds, and first in best pen of three barrows as well as first in the best pen of five barrows.

Wisconsin university's livestock judging team was ranked 13th in the all around livestock judging contest.

Wisconsin's team rated second in the judging of sheep, ninth in cattle, and 20th in horses, bringing the average down to 13th. That competition was keenest shown by the high Wisconsin score of 4,333 out of a possible 5,000, this score reaching 13th place.

Cincinnati "Y.M." Receives $400,000 Gift for Building

A gift of $400,000, the largest yet given for Y. M. C. A. student work in America, was made Nov. 28 to the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. of Cincinnati for the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building on the University of Cincinnati campus and the endowment of the same.

The erection and furnishing of the building will be taken care of by the gift. In the building, provision is to be made for one room for the use of the Y. M. C. A. The building is to be made to harmonize with the nearby University dormitory.

The gift was made by Cedil H. Gamble to provide a social and religious center for the university.

DR. McDOWELL SUPERFICIAL IN STUTTERING TESTS—WEST

Although Dr. Robert West of the university speech department agrees with Dr. Elizabeth D. McDowell of Columbia university that there is no appreciable difference in ability between stuttering and non-stuttering students, he does not believe she has gone deep enough in her experiments, the results of which have just been announced.

Dr. McDowell experimented with 7,138 children in New York city schools and announced that the child with pronounced speech defects rates as high in intelligence as the normal child, his vocabulary and command of language are just as adequate and his physical fitness is even more pronounced.

Stresses Superficial Things

When the results of the survey were first announced, it was said that they tended to explode a theory held by Dr. West who has attracted wide attention in his study of speech defects. "I am in entire accord with Dr. McDowell, but I believe she has stressed superficial things and has not gone to the bottom of the problem," Dr. West said. "So far as superficial things are concerned, such as school grades, breathing, habits, condition of teeth, condition of the palate, and the general health, there is little difference between the stutterer and the non-stutterer."

Forget Nervous System

But Miss McDowell did not attempt to get at the functioning of the central nervous system as a cause of stuttering, Dr. West pointed out, and made no psychological experiments. Experiments along the former line are now being conducted at Ohio State university, and Dr. West does not believe it is possible to make adequate psychological tests.

Some of the things which cause stuttering can not be gotten at by objective tests, Dr. West believes. For instance it would be difficult to determine the effect of a phobia which started at three years of age.

"There are two things to keep in mind in regard to the stutterer, and although they are not related they may merge to cause the stuttering," Dr. West said.

Little Difference at Birth

"At birth there is probably a little different type of balance in the central nervous system of the stutterer. The emotional picture of the environment must also be considered, and although these two are unrelated, they may combine to produce stuttering."

"Neither of these were tested by Dr. McDowell. The neurological tests are being made, but it is probably impossible to make the psychological experiments. Poor mental hygiene does not necessarily produce stuttering, but it may combine with result of the difference in balance in the central nervous system of the stutterer and produce the speech defect."

Dr. West has received a copy of Dr. McDowell's report, and finds himself in complete agreement with the survey so far as the superficial conditions are concerned, he said, but he does not believe the experiment is complete enough to warrant a general theory.

Prominent Farm Heads Will Speak Here in February

Two of America's foremost agricultural leaders have already been scheduled for addresses at Wisconsin's Farm Folks' week to be held in Madison, Feb. 4 to 8.

The Grangers have had their annual meeting in Washington, and Taber will come from this gathering to the Wisconsin conference with a full appreciation of the needs for developing agricultural leadership within the ranks of agriculture itself.

German Students Must Duel; Sport Takes Precedence

Cornell.—Above all other considerations, duelling stands first in the organization of German universities, according to Dr. Meno Spann, a recent graduate of Marburg university in Germar.

To join a fraternity in Germany a fraternity freshman or "fox" as he is called must prove his worth by going through an educating period during which he receives some fighting instructions and many wounds.

When asked where these duels take place Dr. Spann explained that just outside of the university town there are inns which rent large rooms to fraternities and every Saturday the students fight from early morning to late at night.

After a student becomes a full member of a fraternity he can cease practicing if he wishes; but usually he insults enough members of other fraternities to keep well in practice. A countenance covered with comely scars, "schmissen," is as highly valued among duelling students as a Phi Beta Kappa key is among American students.

Rev. Hengell Condemns Senator Roberts Bill for Sterilization

Professor Cole Advocates Action on Extreme Feeble-mindedness Only

That there are other means than the sterilization of feeble-minded criminals for the improvement of the human race, and the national degradation is not threatening us at present, were the statements of the Rev. C. Hengell, pastor of St. Paul's university chapel, in regard to the bill Senator-elect Glenn D. Roberts is preparing for the next legislature.

"Sterilization should be applied only in absolute cases, when there is no doubt of the subject's feeble-mindedness," declared Prof. Leon J. Cole of the genetics department on Mr. Roberts' proposed action.

To Introduce Bill Soon

Senator-elect Roberts is now planning to introduce a bill in the upper house calling for the sterilization of the feeble-minded persons convicted of felonies in Wisconsin.

"There is no question that something should be done to prevent the propagation of such people," stated Prof. Cole. "The state may resort either to segregation or sterilization; segregation is costly and is not always permanent. The feeble-minded may be paroled."

The Rev. Hengell's statement follows:

"If eugenic sterilization can be proved to be the only means to prevent wholesale national degeneration, the state may sanction it. Most Catholic theologians condemn recourse to sterilization as inherently wrong, but I have been unable to find a formal condemnation of it by the church.

"The foregoing is an abstract statement of the case. It does not warrant the practical conclusion that the state is at present justified in tolerating the sterilization of the so-called unfit. National degeneration is not threatening us at present. There are means less degrading to human dignity and less subject to abuse for improving the human race.

"With few exceptions the advocates of eugenic sterilization are saturated with pagan and materialistic ideas and ideals. They see nothing and appreciate nothing beyond the narrow confines of this world. They are blind to spiritual values in life and have little regard for human dignity. Some of them may be actuated by good motives, but the inspiration of the movement itself is irreligious materialism.

Appreciation of Spiritual Needed
"Appreciation of the spiritual nature of man, respect for the moral law, the application of Christian principles to social life, emphasis upon personal responsibility and social duty, will do immeasurably more to improve the race than the hysterical eugenic apigation that emanates from social uplifters.

"The trend in strictly scientific circles is cautious and conservative. The more a man knows about the facts of heredity, the less certain he is that the race can be improved by the eugenic sterilization of the so-called unfit. See The Mental Hygiene Bulletin, January, 1925, in which eminent authorities in mental hygiene say that sterilization does not solve the difficulty of mental deficiency, that it creates other difficulties. A little science, received second hand, bewilders the heads of the sterilization agitators of today."

Australian Men Ignore Women on University Campus

Co-eds in universities and colleges of Australia do not associate with the men, that lord it over the Antipodean institutions of higher learning. So declares N. C. L. Nelson, leader of the University of Sidney, Australia debating team tour.

"In classes the front of the room is separated from the rear by a bar or rail," Nelson explains, "and the co-eds sit in front, leaving the back of the room for the men."

"Neither do the men pay any attention to the college women on the campus, and it is seldom that a college man would think of dating a college girl or having anything to do with her in a social way."

Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" First Draft Displayed

New York.—"Alice in Wonderland" is now at home to visitors at the New York public library. The original manuscript of Lewis Carroll's famous work, penned by him 60 years ago as a gift for a small girl and sold at auction last spring for $75,259, has been placed on public display in the main hallway of this institution.

It comes to the New York library from the free public library in Philadelphia, where during three months more than 400,000 persons viewed it.

Two first editions are on exhibit with the manuscript. One of them formerly belonged to Sir. John Tenniel, whose illustrations for the first book have helped to make Alice's adventures so vivid for readers all over the world. It is extra-illustrated with his original pencil sketches for the story. The other copy was presented by Lewis Carroll to Mrs. G. L. Craik, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman."

Queen Heads New Royal Committee

Temporary Council Not Politically Important; Possible Influence Nil

The appointment of a royal council to exercise certain functions of the crown during the present illness of King George has no particular political significance, Prof. F. A. Ogg of the political science department pointed out in an interview recently.

The action is merely a matter of necessity and precedent. In the event of the death of the king, the commission will pass out of existence after signing an order proclaiming the succession of the Prince of Wales to the throne.

Prince Acts Immediately

The prince, of course, automatically takes over the royal power on the death of the king. The coronation, which often does not take place for several months, is merely a public ceremony, said Prof. Ogg.

Queen Mary is the head of the present council, the order for which was signed by King George himself. The other five members are the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Rev. C. G. Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, Baron Halsham, and the Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin.

Council Signs Documents

The Council of State has limited powers to exercise some of the royal functions which are necessary, such as the signing of documents, commissions, and acts of Parliament. It is understood that the council has absolutely no power to dissolve parliament, confer titles of nobility, or create peers.

Precedent for this council was furnished by the appointment of similar councils when King George went abroad after his illness in 1925 and when he made his visit to India in 1911.

Rushing theatres is the vogue in Potsdam. On two successive nights the Rialto Theater was unceremoniously entered by a group of over 100 Clarkson and Normal School students, in spite of the state troopers who stood guard at the front entrance. The ingress was accomplished through a rear exit while attention was focused upon a huge bonfire in front of the Rialto.

The movement was an organized protest against the prevailing high price of admission. The Techers, we understand, have declared a boycott, and patronage has shifted to nearby towns.—Exchange.

Former Badger's Book Now on Sale

E. L. Meyer, Capital Times
Man, Publishes Collection of Essays

"Making Light of the Times," a collection of essays, verse and satires by the column of the same name, conducted by E. L. Meyer in the Capital Times, is now on sale at Madison book stores. The price is $1.25.

Mr. Meyer has been identified with the university for a number of years and was a member of the class of 1919.

He is widely known as a newspaper man and writer, having been engaged in the profession for more than 15 years.

Was Editor of Lit

In 1915 after several years of newspaper work, Ernest Ludwig Meyer entered the University of Wisconsin and continued his work here until 1918. At that time he was editor of the Wisconsin Literary magazine.

With the war fever at its heat, Mr. Meyer was one of the leaders of the anti-war, anti-conscription group, was tried by the Faculty Committee on Discipline and expelled from the university.

A month later he was taken to Camp Taylor, Ky., where he refused to wear the uniform. Tried three times, he was segregated with war objectors for six months in various army camps and Fort Leavenworth. He was discharged a month after the armistice was signed.

In March 1920, having in the meanwhile worked as a newspaper man in Washington, D. C., Mr. Meyer returned to Madison as managing editor of the Capital Times. He held this position until October 1926 when he left for New York. Here he worked with the New York Daily News, a tabloid paper owned by the McCormick syndicate, owners of the Chicago Tribune and Liberty. He returned here in the spring of 1927.

Novelist Receives $50,000

by Writing Screen Story

Boasting that he has led a virtuous life, William J. Locke, the novelist, arrived the other day to earn a $50,000 fee by writing an original screen story for Norma Talmadge.

The Britisher came in a purplish suit and wore a tie which would outshine the most lurid worn by any Hollywood sheik.

"Of course I don't look to be 65!" the author exclaimed when someone noted his long blond hair. "And I don't feel 65. I've lived too extensively to grow old."

Mrs. Locke and Miss Sheila Locke accompanied him. The three are being widely feted.

Tradition Chokes in 'Lucky' Smoke; Now Frosh Wear Derbies in Stag Line

Take that filthy weed out of the tender lips of the freshman! No cough remedies, no satisfactions, unless the frosh would walk a mile off the campus . . . for ten years ago freshmen could not smoke on Wisconsin's campus: it was tradition.

But tradition, that sacred cow of campus life, has gone by the boards—or else has changed. A survey of traditions which existed 10 years ago showed that freshmen were held to these:

No Derbies

"1. A derby or stiff hat shall not be worn, nor a cane carried (except when necessary because of physical disability.)

"2. No freshman shall sit or loiter upon the upper campus or walks thereon or on the steps of the buildings.

"3. No freshman shall sit or lean against the fence in the front of the university gym.

"4. No freshman shall wear his high school letters, numerals, rings, or insignia about the campus."

"5. No freshman shall be impudent or show disrespect to an upperclassman."

If these traditions are violated, the following forms of punishment may be made by the Student Senate:

The Punishments

"1. Scholastic probation may be recommended.

"2. He may be thrown into Lake Mendota, fully dressed, by a committee of sophomores appointed by the sophomore traditions committee."

Sophomores also had their shade of do's and don'ts.

"1. No sophomore shall be impudent to, or show disrespect to, an upperclassman.

"2. They shall have the right to verbally correct any freshman who seems lax in his observance of traditions.

"3. No one shall participate in hazing of any description.

"4. Sophomores are not to interfere with freshmen in any way, except as the university shall provide.

The violations of these traditions are to be punished thus:

"1. To be thrown into Lake Mendota, fully dressed, by a committee of upperclassmen.

"2. Scholastic probation or additional required credits for graduation may be recommended.

"3. In case of serious or repeated violation of the hazing tradition, he shall be suspended from the university.

Frenchman Points to Need of a School for Good Manners

Paris—Deploring the decline of good manners in France, several prominent Frenchmen have sponsored a proposal that a school of French gallantry be established. This school will act as a sort of academy of etiquette and award annual prizes for the most distinguished act of politeness recorded in the same way that the Carnegie foundation awards prizes for heroism.

The blame for the decline falls upon modernity but particularly upon the modern woman who it is charged "brings up her children badly, and regards instruction in social deportment as trivial if not superfluous."

Behave Disgracefully

"These young people behave disgracefully," said Andre de Fouquieres, chef de protocol at the foreign office, "though most of them are sons of the finest families in France and heirs to the best traditions. Observe how poorly they bear themselves in the company of women. They behave like nouveaux-riches. Behold, they kiss the hand of a woman in the street, which is an act expressly forbidden except indoors, and they lift the hand to their lips, instead of inclining low over it."

"This is not all, alas! We have often seen a would-be gallant kiss the hand of a lady while his left hand remained stuck in his pocket. Then there are those who kiss the hand of a girl, and those who smoke in the company of women. These young people of today are really badly bred thoroughbreds."

Educated but Spoiled

"Perhaps it is not a question of how they were raised. Most of them received a proper education but they have been spoiled."

¶ This great increased advertising lineage is another proof that Cardinal advertising pays, for it shows that those merchants who have previously used the Cardinal have found it profitable to do so and have increased their advertising appropriations for this year.

¶ Students consciously buy from those merchants who advertise in the Cardinal, because they look upon the paper as one of their own institutions, and are favorable toward those stores which help support it. It is only natural, too, that when a store regularly puts its name before the student body that when the students want to buy anything in that particular line, they will immediately think of that store with which they are familiar through this contact.

¶ The fact that the Cardinal has grown from a four page sheet to a twelve to twenty page paper is not just a lucky break, it is a positive proof—that Cardinal advertising pays.

Iowa Will Send Veteran Debaters

Miller Wrangled With Cambridge

Iowa's second speaker, Burton A. Miller, has distinguished himself in his work against the universities of Illinois, Chicago, Wyoming, Philippines, Cambridge, and Sydney. He is a member of Delta Sigma Rho, honorary forensic fraternity.

The closing speaker, Frederick Webber, has represented the University of Iowa against the universities of Chicago, Illinois, Western Reserve, and several others. He is also a member of Delta Sigma Rho.

Five Months in Preparation

These men have been collecting and preparing material for five months and are expected to provide the Wisconsin affirmative team with spirited opposition. The wording of the question is, "Resolved, that the United States Senate should ratify the pact of Paris without reservations."

Prom Slogan Award Contest Announced

A cash prize of five dollars is being offered for the best slogan originated for the 1930 Prom, according to Edward Schempf '30, who has been named on the Slogan committee this year.

The contest began yesterday, and will last exactly one week, ending Friday, Dec. 14. The prizewinner will be announced in the Daily Cardinal on Sunday, Dec. 16.

The slogans may be mailed to Edward Schempf, 630 North Lake street, or Eleanor Anderson, 270 Langdon street.

As in former years, the idea is to obtain a snappy, short sentence that can be used on the advertising material written for the prom. It may be a pun, but any catchy phrase will do, preferably something significant of this particular prom.

Tolstoi Subject of Fulcher Talk Dec. 14

Prof. Paul Fulcher, English teacher and critic, is to speak here Wednesday evening, Dec. 14. Followed, as it will be, by Miss Jane Addams' lecture, "Tolstoi, the Man," a very comprehensive idea of the famous author will be presented by the two lectures.

Jumbled Medley of Reports Place Pyre East and West; Found on Hill

Prof. "Sunny" Pyre, president of the athletic council, was in Chicago, New York, and New Haven yesterday according to information authoritatively offered by his wife and by the university sports publicity manager. But despite all available information, he was in Madison until noon, teaching classes during the morning hours.

In response to a phone call, Mrs. Pyre replied that her husband had gone to the eastern metropolis in order to look after some publishing matters. This statement was, however, contradictory to information dispatched to The Cardinal by Les Gage '23, sports publicity editor.

Two items on the press release told of "Sunny's" whereabouts. The first related that he had gone to Chicago for the purpose of representing Wisconsin at the Western conference athletic meeting. Directly below it on the same page there appeared the following statement: "Professor Pyre, athletic council president, left for the east with Yale university as his destination."

Although this information was given out during the early part of the day, he met all his classes during the morning hours.

Episcopal Chapel Ready Next Year

St. Francis Building at Brooks and University to Have Three Units

Erection of the new St. Francis Episcopal chapel will be started next spring, according to the Rev. George R. Wood, acting student chaplain. It will be completed within a year, having been made possible by the recently completed campaign in the diocese of Milwaukee, in which $150,000 was raised.

The building will be erected on the corner of North Brooks street and University avenue, on the property now owned by the University commission of the church. A study, a lounge, and a chapel will be included on the first floor, according to the tentative plans, while the second story will be devoted to living quarters for the house matron and for offices.

The main entrance to the chapel will be on University avenue, while the club room unit will be entered from Brooks street. The two parts will be connected by a door near the front of the chapel.

Almost one half of the first floor of the club room unit will be occupied by the lounge. It will stretch along the entire University avenue side of the building, and will contain a fireplace and bay window. The study, less than half as large, will similarly contain a bay window.

Here Happily Ends The Great Quest After Good Food And Good Friends Away From Home

¶ An Alma Mater that satisfies intellectual appetites alone does only half its job. Wisconsin knows the importance of the so-called "inner man and woman."

¶ Hence the Union—and the Union Tea Room—for you and your friends.

¶ All paths these cold days lead to the cozy, lovely warmth of the Tea Room in the Union.

¶ The decorator's hand of genius has here created a pearl of great price. Delicately painted Windsor chairs grouped intimately about immaculately clothed tables . . . exquisite greens in the diamond draperies . . . cream marble softly silhouetted against sea-green walls . . . Gorham's silver service

. . . pretty girls in neat yellow moving quickly and quietly at your beckoning.

¶ All this encourages appetites. And the chef, bless his art, satisfies them.

¶ Servings of a size that makes a tea room seem not a tea room. Delicious crisp salads to your order. Piping hot coffee, already famous to Union patrons.

¶ And the price . . . amazingly low.

¶ Here is the delightful answer to your prayer for a rendezvous with "the date," your family, your best friends.

¶ And for Sunday, we invite you to a wonderful dinner of roast duck.
